Coming soon: the graying of America

By ROBERT REINHOLD
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — Slowly, almost imperceptibly, but with inexorable force, America's population is undergoing a profound transformation that could alter nearly every facet of life.

After decades of the rising influence of the "youth culture," the pendulum is swinging back. By the year 2030, the median age of Americans will be 37.3, or 8.4 years older than it is today, if American women continue to bear so few children and the death rate continues to drop. Federal government figures to be released in a few weeks will show that in 1976, fertility rates dropped to a new low for the fifth year in a row.

Although it is hazardous to forecast the consequences of this trend, it seems unlikely that any aspect of American life — the economy, housing styles, education, musical taste, land use, recreation, manufacturing, medical care, retirement practices and even politics—will emerge untouched.

And while the full brunt of the trend will not be felt for some years, harbingers abound:

—Levi Strauss, the jeans maker whose ads with psychedelic and sexual overtones were the commercial embodiment of the youthful culture of the 1960s, has made subtle changes in its pitch. The company now promotes sportswear with a fuller cut, for that 1965 college boy who can no longer squeeze into his size 30 Levis.

—Dropping school enrollments have forced closings of schools and colleges and a search for new "markets." Montgomery County, Md., which lost 4,500 students this year and expects to see another drop of 4,500 in the fall, recently closed seven public schools. Columbia University in New York recently announced a major move into adult education.

—Faced with declining sales of baby food, the Gerber Products Co. has diversified and now makes such products as vaporizers and shampoo. In recent months, Gerber has widely advertised its life insurance and it is also testing adult foods such as catsup and peanut "spread," as well as single-serving foods for the elderly. As it is, company officials privately estimate that as much of 10 per cent of its baby food is actually consumed by the elderly.

—The FM rock radio stations that emerged in the '60s are still thriving, but the sponsors are selling condominium apartments and suburban homes as well as phonograph records and acne remedies.

—Social Security officials are calling for a thorough revamping of the retirement pay system, because they fear that soon there will not be enough young people working to support the swollen ranks of retired elderly. There are now 31 Social Security beneficiaries for every 100 workers. By the middle of the next century, it is estimated, the figure will rise to 50. If so, Social Security taxes may have to rise to 35 per cent of the taxable payroll.

And while some experts concede a transition to an older society will cause some painful social and economic dislocations, most believe the ultimate effect will not be damaging.

In a sense, American social policy has been all too successful. And underlying the prediction that the population, while increasing for many decades yet, will probably have a larger proportion of elderly people and a smaller proportion of the young, are some statistical facts of life.

The fertility rate of American women continues to slide dramatically. For the first 11 months of 1976, the rate was 65.7 births for each 1,000 women in the child-bearing ages (15 to 44), down from 66.7 in 1975. At the crest of the post-war "baby boom" in 1957, the figure was 122.7; the previous low was 75.8, set in 1936 during the Depression.

U.S. retaliates, ousts Russ

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department announced Saturday that it has ordered a Russian journalist to leave the United States. The move was made in response to the Soviet expulsion of an Associated Press correspondent in Moscow.

State Department spokesman Frederick Z. Brown said the department "notified the Soviet Embassy today that Vladimir I. Alekseyev, a Washington correspondent of Tass, must leave the country within a week."

George Krimsky of The AP was given a week to leave the U.S.S.R. after being accused of espionage activities and of violating Soviet currency regulations.

KRIMSKY was the first journalist to be expelled from the Soviet Union since 1970. The AP and Krimsky rejected the charges, and pointed out that Krimsky has reported extensively on Soviet dissidents.

"We have specified that our expulsion of Alekseyev is in response to the Krimsky expulsion. We regret this course of events, which is a step backward from the objective of improving working conditions for journalists contained in the Helsinki final act, and from the more fundamental interests of promoting a freer flow of information," Brown said.

Earlier Saturday, Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., referring to Krimsky's expulsion, said: "We ought to tell one of their people right away to start packing his bags. I believe in retaliation to this sort of thing."

The White House had said earlier that President Carter asked the State Department for a report on the expulsion.

IN DELIVERING the notice Friday to David Mason, AP bureau chief in Moscow, Valentin A. Khazov, deputy chief of the Foreign Ministry Press Department, repeated charges that Krimsky is a U.S. intelligence agent and has been involved in illegal currency dealings.

On Wednesday, the Soviet Literary Gazette had renewed the spy charge, which it first voiced last year, and accused Krimsky of illegally giving hard currency certificates to a Soviet citizen who was not identified. The magazine, organ of the Soviet Writers Union, implied that the certificates were used to buy information.

Krimsky, 35, who has been in Moscow since Sept. 12, 1974, denied the charges.

The AP headquarters in New York said the so-called illegal currency operations involved payments in hard-currency certificates by Krimsky to his maid as part of her salary. The certificates permitted her to shop in special stores. The AP said Krimsky's only "violation" was that he had not given the maid a work contract.

Keith Fuller, president and general manager of the AP, said:

"The expulsion of George Krimsky, in our view, is a flagrant violation of the Helsinki agreement as it pertains to news reporters carrying out their mission."

'Disaster' declared in New York

First emergency ever for snow

Knight News Service

WASHINGTON — President Carter declared nine snowbound counties in upstate New York a "major disaster" area Saturday — the first time that designation, which permits far-reaching federal financial aid, has ever been used because of a snowstorm.

Carter also declared an emergency in Michigan because of storms.

Carter, wearing an open-necked sport shirt and black sweater, called reporters into the Oval Office to watch him sign the disaster declaration for nine counties in western and northern New York.

NOTING that nine people have already been found dead when cars were dug out of the snow and that garbage and trash have not been collected for more than two weeks, the President added that "the economic consequences of the storm have been very severe."

He said the rarely issued declaration of "a major disaster" would permit "far-reaching financial assistance and assistance from federal personnel." Carter instructed Thomas P. Dunne, the federal disaster assistance administrator, to develop a cost-sharing program to help local governments with the economic burdens of snow removal, in addition to special unemployment benefits for workers made jobless by the snowstorms which have buffeted upstate New York.

WORKING with Regional Director Thomas R. Casey, Dunne will designate areas in the nine counties eligible for federal aid and advise the President if additional forms of aid are needed, the White House said.

Carter said he had received a report from his son Chip and presidential assistant Margaret Costanza, former vice mayor of Rochester, who inspected the Buffalo area for the President on Friday.

The nine counties included in the declaration are Erie, Lewis, Orleans, Wyoming, Genesee, Niagara, Cattaraugus, Chautauqua and Jefferson.

SACRAMENTO — On Jan. 27 Assemblyman Mike Cullen, D-Long Beach introduced a bill directing the Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors to divide the county into five parts, each with at least a million residents, and submit the plan to the voters at the November 1978 election.

The bill, AB 333, has attracted considerable attention. Here Cullen talks of the reasons he introduced it:

IRS ruling gives facelift to plastic surgery business

By LINDA DEUTSCH
Associated Press

The facelift, an operation once mentioned in whispers and attempted only by daring movie stars, is becoming as respectable as a trip to the dentist, says a leading Hollywood surgeon.

If you don't believe him, ask Uncle Sam.

The Internal Revenue Service, of all places, recently issued a ruling to answer an apparently burning question of many citizens: Is a facelift tax deductible?

The answer is, "Yes," placing cosmetic surgery within the federal definition of medical care "for the purpose of affecting any structure or function of the body."

Implicitly, the ruling also covers improvements such as breast enlargements, nose jobs, belly reduction and ear flattening.

"Our inquiries on the subject have skyrocketed since the revenue ruling was issued," says Charles Dougherty of the Los Angeles IRS office.

For the past two or three years, he said, his office has felt that a facelift was deductible. But there was no written ruling.

"This really nails it down," said Beverly Hills tax attorney Bob Forst, who has confronted the question with some of his clients. Now, he predicts, more people may use the deduction.

"It's a fair conclusion that if it is publicized, more taxpayers will be taking advantage of it," said Forst.

Even before the ruling, facelifts had been gaining middle-class popularity.

"It's no longer just for movie stars and the rich," says Dr. Robert A. Franklyn. "It's for everybody. And now it's probably our only tax deductible luxury.

"Plastic surgery is becoming as common as kids getting their teeth straightened."

Franklyn, celebrated inventor of the breast implant operation in the 1950s, has been a sculptor of famous faces and figures for more than 30 years. Business, he says, has never been so lively.

"We are in the age of the youth and beauty culture, and people are more liberated," he says. "They take more pride in their appearance than they did 30 or 40 years ago."

There are no figures available on the actual numbers of facelifts and other cosmetic surgery performed in the United States, says a spokesman for the 1,700-member American Society of Plastic and Reconstructive Surgery, headquartered in Chicago. But he says, "It's everybody's impression that it's increasing."

He said the capitals of cosmetic surgery are Los Angeles, Miami and New York City but that doctors in places as remote as Billings, Mont., are getting more requests for facelifts.

"It's a nationwide phenomenon," he said.

Carter's cardigan stirs flap

Combined News Services

The cardigan sweater — classic, simple, warm. And it's worn by millions of American men in and out of their homes.

But when President Carter wore one on national television Wednesday night, in his first "fireside chat," the mohair began to fly. What does this mean to the fashion world? A new trend?

Fashion designers, it turns out, are divided in their opinions on the Carter cardigan look.

"I enjoyed the fact that he was wearing a sweater," said French designer Pierre Cardin. "I'm in favor of a relaxed mentality, and I can only applaud his sense of self-expression."

"What he's presenting is an attitude about himself and what he feels," added American designer Ralph Lauren. "He wanted to have an informal discussion with the American people, the way he would if he invited them into his home."

But some designers thought Carter went too far.

Said Bill Blass: "It seems a little obvious to me. A blazer would have been a breakthrough. But this is an extreme jump."

And Georgio di Sant'Angelo said, "The whole environment he was in was a bit elaborate for the average man. Sweaters are already a part of the lifestyle of the average man. But the President's sweater was a little bit too sloppy.

"Someone should advise him about the way he dresses. He's really a young man and could be quite dapper."

Most designers thought the President's style of dress should remain the same. If they designed for him, they would change very little.

"Up to now, in every one of his public appearances, he's been appropriately dressed," said Blass. "I think he must always be conservatively attired."

"I think his style of dressing is excellent," said Lauren. "He's not a fashion guy, but he has style."

But others said Carter should take a second look in his closet.

"I have many suits in my line where the jacket is almost sweater-like and they can be worn with a shirt and tie," said Cardin, noting Carter's penchant for informality. "These would be suitable to give a soft and easy look."

Oscar de la Renta thought the President's wardrobe should consist of clothes "that are not controversial and carry the dignity of his job."

The men's wear designers do not think there will be a major trend toward the cardigan among American men. But Carter's appearance certainly won't hurt the sweater industry, they agreed.

"Cardigans are a classic that are fashionable now," said Larry Bloom, president of Puritan Sportswear. "The difference is that the President appeared to wear it as a simply utilitarian garment rather than as a fashionable article. I must admit, though, I think it will accentuate the appeal."

Said Cardin: "Hopefully, it will set a trend. It's a sweater, but it's also unconstructed. He looked much more comfortable than I've seen a lot of presidents look ..."

Adm. Stansfield Turner, commander of NATO's forces in southern Europe, is President Carter's leading candidate for nomination as director of the CIA, Time magazine said Saturday.

Turner, 53, was a classmate of Carter's at the U.S. Naval Academy.

White House sources said that three or four names were being considered but Turner was "the serious frontrunner," Time said.

The magazine said the Carter appears to be making a careful, middle-of-the road choice after the withdrawal of Theodore Sorensen as a candidate.

Books, songs and photographs in memory of the late Premier Chou En-lai have been released by four publishing houses in Peking, the official Hsinhua news agency reported Saturday.

They are being published, Hsinhua said, in response to requests from "people of all strata across China, who sent in a flood of letters and telegrams" to the newspapers, magazines and publishing departments on the first anniversary of Chou's death.

Author dies

Davis Dresser, known to millions of readers as Brett Halliday, author of the Michael Shayne detective series, has died of cancer, his family said Saturday.

Dresser, 72, died of cancer Friday at his Montecito home near here. No funeral services are scheduled.

Dresser, under the name Halliday, wrote more than 50 books on the adventures of one of the first private eyes.

Each Shayne novel sold more than a million copies in the United States and was translated into from eight to 12 languages.

Queen marks silver jubilee

Britain's 70-year-old poet laureate, Sir John Betjeman, has produced his second official offering in four years — a "Jubilee Hymn" commemorating the 25th anniversary, today, of the accession to the throne of Queen Elizabeth II.

The queen, who will be 51 on April 21, was spending a quiet weekend at Windsor Castle when the hymn was published by the Press Association, the British domestic news agency.

PA said Betjeman had worked for three months on the tribute. It has five verses with this chorus:

For our monarch and her people,
United yet and free,
Let the bells from ev'ry steeple
Ring out loud the Jubilee.

Elizabeth assumed the throne Feb. 6, 1952, on the death of her father, King George VI. At the time she was touring Kenya with her husband, Prince Philip.

In Kenya, a special dinner was held at the game reserve where Elizabeth, then a 26-year-old crown princess, learned she had become queen and symbolic head of the British Commonwealth.

Stanley Fingland, the British high commissioner in Kenya, was among the guests at the celebration at Treetops Lodge, built in the branches of a giant tree near Nyeri, 100 miles north of the Kenyan capital of Nairobi.

Betjeman was made poet laureate in October 1972. The post carries a yearly payment of $119 plus an additional $45.90 "in lieu of a butt of sack" -- the cask of wine that in olden times was the laureate's only reward.

He is expected to produce a poem or song for official occasions such as the jubilee.

The "Jubilee Hymn" has been set to music by Malcolm Williamson, Master of the Queen's Music, and will get its first performance Sunday in London's Royal Albert Hall at a jubilee concert.

Queen Elizabeth planned to spend today at Windsor with her only engagement the morning service at the royal chapel. She leaves Wednesday for East Asia to begin silver jubilee tours of Commonwealth countries.

Other celebrations are planned later during the jubilee year, when the weather is warmer. Children's street parties are scheduled for the summer, but the parents will have to pay for the refreshments and souvenirs.

after a barge exploded on the Mobile River.

The barge, one of four carrying an estimated 4 million gallons of highly flammable naphtha, crashed into the Cochrane Bridge shortly before 5:30 a.m., sending a shudder across this port city.

No injuries were reported, but the blast turned into a raging fire five miles north of downtown Mobile.

For hours, flames from the spill threatened to spread to the other three barges still linked to the burning hulk, as well as to fuel storage tanks on the river banks.

The fire finally was extinguished late Saturday afternoon. The U.S. Coast Guard said fire control teams would remain near the barge overnight.

The extent of damage to the bridge was not immediately known. It had been raised to allow the tugboat pushing the barges to pass beneath. Paint was blackened, but structural damage, if any, could not be assessed immediately.

The barge apparently struck an underwater rock two miles north of Bear Mountain on Friday night.

Carter's cardigan stirs flap

Combined News Services

The cardigan sweater — classic, simple, warm. And it's worn by millions of American men in and out of their homes.

But when President Carter wore one on national television Wednesday night, in his first "fireside chat," the mohair began to fly. What does this mean to the fashion world? A new trend?

Fashion designers, it turns out, are divided in their opinions on the Carter cardigan look.

"I enjoyed the fact that he was wearing a sweater," said French designer Pierre Cardin. "I'm in favor of a relaxed mentality, and I can only applaud his sense of self-expression."

"What he's presenting is an attitude about himself and what he feels," added American designer Ralph Lauren. "He wanted to have an informal discussion with the American people, the way he would if he invited them into his home."

But some designers thought Carter went too far.

Said Bill Blass: "It seems a little obvious to me. A blazer would have been a breakthrough. But this is an extreme jump."

And Georgio di Sant'Angelo said, "The whole environment he was in was a bit elaborate for the average man. Sweaters are already a part of the lifestyle of the average man. But the President's sweater was a little bit too sloppy.

"Someone should advise him about the way he dresses. He's really a young man and could be quite dapper."

Most designers thought the President's style of dress should remain the same. If they designed for him, they would change very little.

"Up to now, in every one of his public appearances, he's been appropriately dressed," said Blass. "I think he must always be conservatively attired."

"I think his style of dressing is excellent," said Lauren. "He's not a fashion guy, but he has style."

But others said Carter should take a second look in his closet.

"I have many suits in my line where the jacket is almost sweater-like and they can be worn with a shirt and tie," said Cardin, noting Carter's penchant for informality. "These would be suitable to give a soft and easy look."

Oscar de la Renta thought the President's wardrobe should consist of clothes "that are not controversial and carry the dignity of his job."

The men's wear designers do not think there will be a major trend toward the cardigan among American men. But Carter's appearance certainly won't hurt the sweater industry, they agreed.

"Cardigans are a classic that are fashionable now," said Larry Bloom, president of Puritan Sportswear. "The difference is that the President appeared to wear it as a simply utilitarian garment rather than as a fashionable article. I must admit, though, I think it will accentuate the appeal."

Said Cardin: "Hopefully, it will set a trend. It's a sweater, but it's also unconstructed. He looked much more comfortable than I've seen a lot of presidents look ..."

Adm. Stansfield Turner, commander of NATO's forces in southern Europe, is President Carter's leading candidate for nomination as director of the CIA, Time magazine said Saturday.

Turner, 53, was a classmate of Carter's at the U.S. Naval Academy.

White House sources said that three or four names were being considered but Turner was "the serious frontrunner," Time said.

The magazine said the Carter appears to be making a careful, middle-of-the road choice after the withdrawal of Theodore Sorensen as a candidate.

Chou En-lai

Books, songs and photographs in memory of the late Premier Chou En-lai have been released by four publishing houses in Peking, the official Hsinhua news agency reported Saturday.

Hsinhua said they include the first three volumes of an anthology of articles in memory of Chou, a collection of songs and an album of photographs.

They are being published, Hsinhua said, in response to requests from "people of all strata across China, who sent in a flood of letters and telegrams" to the newspapers, magazines and publishing departments on the first anniversary of Chou's death.

Davis Dresser, known to millions of readers as Brett Halliday, author of the Michael Shayne detective series, has died of cancer, his family said Saturday.

Dresser, 72, died of cancer Friday at his Montecito home near here. No funeral services are scheduled.

Dresser, under the name Halliday, wrote more than 50 books on the adventures of one of the first private eyes.

Each Shayne novel sold more than a million copies in the United States and was translated into from eight to 12 languages.

Queen marks silver jubilee

Britain's 70-year-old poet laureate, Sir John Betjeman, has produced his second official offering in four years — a "Jubilee Hymn" commemorating the 25th anniversary, today, of the accession to the throne of Queen Elizabeth II.

The queen, who will be 51 on April 21, was spending a quiet weekend at Windsor Castle when the hymn was published by the Press Association, the British domestic news agency.

PA said Betjeman had worked for three months on the tribute. It has five verses with this chorus:

For our monarch and her people,
United yet and free,
Let the bells from ev'ry steeple
Ring out loud the Jubilee.

Elizabeth assumed the throne Feb. 6, 1952, on the death of her father, King George VI. At the time she was touring Kenya with her husband, Prince Philip.

In Kenya, a special dinner was held at the game reserve where Elizabeth, then a 26-year-old crown princess, learned she had become queen and symbolic head of the British Commonwealth.

Stanley Fingland, the British high commissioner in Kenya, was among the guests at the celebration at Treetops Lodge, built in the branches of a giant tree near Nyeri, 100 miles north of the Kenyan capital of Nairobi.

Betjeman was made poet laureate in October 1972. The post carries a yearly payment of $119 plus an additional $45.90 "in lieu of a butt of sack" — the cask of wine that in olden times was the laureate's only reward.

He is expected to produce a poem or song for official occasions such as the jubilee.

The "Jubilee Hymn" has been set to music by Malcolm Williamson, Master of the Queen's Music, and will get its first performance Sunday in London's Royal Albert Hall at a jubilee concert.

Queen Elizabeth planned to spend today at Windsor with her only engagement the morning service at the royal chapel. She leaves Wednesday for East Asia to begin silver jubilee tours of Commonwealth countries.

Other celebrations are planned later during the jubilee year, when the weather is warmer. Children's street parties are scheduled for the summer, but the parents will have to pay for the refreshments and souvenirs.

L.A. buildings ripe for quake disaster

By BILL GARDNER
Associated Press

Six years after a major earthquake in the San Fernando Valley killed 58 persons, Los Angeles still has thousands of older buildings likely to tumble if a big quake hits near the heart of town.

The Feb. 9, 1971, San Fernando quake was a near miss. A few miles to the south it could have been devastating. Local government heeded the warning and formed an earthquake commission that recommended ways to avoid tragedy.

The No. 1 recommendation was to make the older buildings earthquake-safe or destroy them by 1980.

Any progress?

"NONE SO FAR, it's a very hazardous situation," said George Housner, a California Institute of Technology scientist and building safety expert who was on the earthquake commission. "If a big quake were to hit Los Angeles, it would be a disaster, no question about it."

Progress has also been slow on the No. 2 recommendation — that dams be examined and made safe. And homeowners apparently have ignored the recommendation that they buy earthquake insurance.

Preparation is critical because quake experts say a big tremor is overdue along the San Andreas fault in Southern California.

The failure of Los Angeles to do anything about the problem of old, unreinforced buildings is highlighted by the fact that Long Beach has made great progress in getting rid of such structures.

Ed O'Connor, the man most responsible for Long Beach's success, says Los Angeles officials have ducked the problem for 20 years.

NOBODY knows how many old, unreinforced buildings there are in Los Angeles, but the most common estimate is about 11,000 to 14,000. Officials figure about 150,000 people either live or work in the buildings.

After five years of haggling, the City Council recently considered an ordinance that would have required building owners to make such structures safe or destroy them within 10 years. Owners would also have had to post a notice that the building did not meet earthquake safety standards.

On Jan. 24, the council tabled the ordinance and ordered more study.

It will now be at least six months and maybe two years before another ordinance is considered, supporters of the ordinance say.

The owners of the old buildings say their structures have lasted 40 or 50 years without collapsing. They point to economic and social problems — the great expense of fixing the buildings and the hardship of tearing down many old apartments that provide low-rent homes for poor people.

O'CONNOR, the Long Beach director of building and safety since 1949, says Los Angeles officials don't really need a new ordinance but could tackle the problem with condemnation laws already on the books.

"The Los Angeles and San Francisco building safety managers have both ducked the earthquake safety problem by saying they have to solve their social and economic problems," O'Connor said. "Hell, we never solved them in Long Beach."

O'Connor said he started condemning hazardous old buildings in the late 1950s.

"The building owners jumped up and down and said what an SOB I was," he recalled. "We just flat-out condemned them."

O'Connor said he asked the Los Angeles director of building safety to do the same but "he told me he wasn't in a position to take it on. So, hell, I went on alone."

Frank Kroeger, the man responsible for dealing with old buildings for the Los Angeles Department of Building and Safety, agreed he could go after the old buildings without a new ordinance.

"THERE IS probably a way you could do it, but it would be very cumbersome," Kroeger said. "I realize those buildings are hazardous, but I would rather see the City Council give good consideration to the plan than go off half-cocked."

Arthur Mann, vice chairman of the 1971 Earthquake Commission, said the matter of old buildings "is a tough problem. You have to weigh the economic loss against the potential loss of human life. I'm satisfied the City Council is moving, but I don't think it's moving fast enough."

The commission's No. 2 recommendation was that existing dams be brought up to modern standards of safety or their use restricted. The 1971 quake damaged two dams and "very nearly caused a catastrophe," the commission's report noted.

Where's the catch

Some self-service gas station pumps have a catch on the nozzle so that a person can stand away from the pump and doesn't have to inhale the noxious fumes when he's putting gas in his car. Other stations don't have the catch devices, and when I've asked why, I've been told they're against the law. Is this true? I have read that gasoline contains benzene, which has been linked to cancer, and I'd like to know if it's dangerous to breathe these fumes? J.B., Long Beach.

In Long Beach and several other cities, the automatic-fill nozzles are prohibited on self-service pumps. Gasoline vapors do contain benzene and other harmful pollutants, but inhaling them once or twice a week when you pump your own gas probably is not a significantly greater health hazard than breathing them in the atmosphere. The Southern California Air Pollution Control District is going to require—probably within a year—all gas stations in the South Coast Air Basin to equip their pumps with devices that will trap most of the escaping vapors. "The person who's pumping his own gas is inhaling an insignificant amount of the vapors at that time, but the vapors from all the gas stations combined contribute a substantial amount of pollutants daily," said a spokesman for the APCD. Since 1973, the Long Beach Fire Department has prohibited the automatic-fill nozzles on self-serve pumps because of the possibility of gasoline spillage if a customer doesn't insert the pump nozzle properly, then walks away and it falls out. The catch nozzles are permitted on the full-serve pumps, and many self-service stations have the automatic-fill devices in violation of fire regulations.

Can Action Line find out if it is safe to put a sheet or blanket over an electric blanket when it is in use? I'd also like to know if a pet should be allowed to curl up on an electric blanket when it's on. Some people say these two things shouldn't be done; others say they cause no problems. P.W., Norwalk.

Although electric blanket manufacturers usually recommend that additional bedding not be placed on top of an electric blanket, a testing engineer with the Underwriters Laboratory in Chicago told Action Line that this should pose no safety hazard. "We assume that most people are going to have at least a bedspread on top of the blanket, so we test all of the electric blankets with another blanket on top of them, and we haven't found any safety problems," he said. He added that the pressure of a pet lying still on an electric blanket shouldn't cause any malfunctions, but Underwriters Laboratories does not recommend this practice because of the possibility of the animal clawing into the blanket or bunching it up so that the wires are crimped and the heat too concentrated.

Homemade will

My husband and I want to make out our own wills, but we can't afford to hire an attorney. Is it legal for each of us to write out our own wills? Can we name both our son and daughter as executors? Mrs. O.S., Carson.

California recognizes two types of do-it-yourself wills: holographic (entirely handwritten) ones and those typed or drafted on the legal forms available at stationery stores. The latter type requires the signatures of two witnesses who aren't heirs. A will should be dated and signed and include the appointment of an executor, your wishes for the distribution of your assets and a statement indicating that the form is indeed a will. Both your children can be named as co-executors. The executor is responsible for notifying the other heirs mentioned in the will and for seeing that all the conditions of the will are met. In practice, however, the work often is done by an attorney, and the executor merely signs his approval. Executor and attorney fees, which are paid out of the proceeds from the estate, are set by law. If you and your husband have all of your property in joint tenancy, however, it will automatically go to the surviving party, whether or not you leave a will. To simplify their estate planning, many people put their property in joint tenancy arrangements with their children and don't make a will. But attorneys often recommend that a person draft a will anyway. "A couple may think that all their property is in joint tenancy, but some assets may not be. A will also allows a couple to make provisions for the distribution of their estate in case they are both killed in an accident," said a local attorney. Do-it-yourself wills are more often contested, lawyers say.

Some self-service gas station pumps have a catch on the nozzle so that a person can stand away from the pump and doesn't have to inhale the noxious fumes when he's putting gas in his car. Other stations don't have the catch devices, and when I've asked why, I've been told they're against the law. Is this true? I have read that gasoline contains benzene, which has been linked to cancer, and I'd like to know if it's dangerous to breathe these fumes? J.B., Long Beach.

In Long Beach and several other cities, the automatic-fill nozzles are prohibited on self-service pumps. Gasoline vapors do contain benzene and other harmful pollutants, but inhaling them once or twice a week when you pump your own gas probably is not a significantly greater health hazard than breathing them in the atmosphere. The Southern California Air Pollution Control District is going to require—probably within a year—all gas stations in the South Coast Air Basin to equip their pumps with devices that will trap most of the escaping vapors. "The person who's pumping his own gas is inhaling an insignificant amount of the vapors at that time, but the vapors from all the gas stations combined contribute a substantial amount of pollutants daily," said a spokesman for the APCD. Since 1973, the Long Beach Fire Department has prohibited the automatic-fill nozzles on self-serve pumps because of the possibility of gasoline spillage if a customer doesn't insert the pump nozzle properly, then walks away and it falls out. The catch nozzles are permitted on the full-serve pumps, and many self-service stations have the automatic-fill devices in violation of fire regulations.

Can Action Line find out if it is safe to put a sheet or blanket over an electric blanket when it is in use? I'd also like to know if a pet should be allowed to curl up on an electric blanket when it's on. Some people say these two things shouldn't be done; others say they cause no problems. P.W., Norwalk.

Although electric blanket manufacturers usually recommend that additional bedding not be placed on top of an electric blanket, a testing engineer with the Underwriters Laboratory in Chicago told Action Line that this should pose no safety hazard. "We assume that most people are going to have at least a bedspread on top of the blanket, so we test all of the electric blankets with another blanket on top of them, and we haven't found any safety problems," he said. He added that the pressure of a pet lying still on an electric blanket shouldn't cause any malfunctions, but Underwriters Laboratories does not recommend this practice because of the possibility of the animal clawing into the blanket or bunching it up so that the wires are crimped and the heat too concentrated.

My husband and I want to make out our own wills, but we can't afford to hire an attorney. Is it legal for each of us to write out our own wills? Can we name both our son and daughter as executors? Mrs. O.S., Carson.

California recognizes two types of do-it-yourself wills: holographic (entirely handwritten) ones and those typed or drafted on the legal forms available at stationery stores. The latter type requires the signatures of two witnesses who aren't heirs. A will should be dated and signed and include the appointment of an executor, your wishes for the distribution of your assets and a statement indicating that the form is indeed a will. Both your children can be named as co-executors. The executor is responsible for notifying the other heirs mentioned in the will and for seeing that all the conditions of the will are met. In practice, however, the work often is done by an attorney, and the executor merely signs his approval. Executor and attorney fees, which are paid out of the proceeds from the estate, are set by law. If you and your husband have all of your property in joint tenancy, however, it will automatically go to the surviving party, whether or not you leave a will. To simplify their estate planning, many people put their property in joint tenancy arrangements with their children and don't make a will. But attorneys often recommend that a person draft a will anyway. "A couple may think that all their property is in joint tenancy, but some assets may not be. A will also allows a couple to make provisions for the distribution of their estate in case they are both killed in an accident," said a local attorney. Do-it-yourself wills are more often contested, lawyers say.

L.B. harbor panel answerable to few

By JOHN SHEEHAN
Staff Writer

Two Long Beach citizens who later this month will be appointed by the Long Beach City Council to fill two vacancies on the five-member Board of Harbor Commissioners will find themselves — along with their colleagues — overseeing a $245-million empire unique in city government.

They will find that the harbor commission operates as a literal fiefdom, answerable to few and, until recently, questioned by hardly anyone.

They will learn that the harbor department staff and many of its more than 300 employes seem to believe a variation of the General Motors axiom that what is good for the Port of Long Beach must, by definition, be best for the community at large.

THEY WILL also learn that the City Council, announced watchdog of the harbor department, is instead a seldom-seen apparition of suspicious breed that rarely harks and never bites.

Speculation is rampant on who will be appointed to the two vacancies. Several community interest groups are hoping at least one member will be a woman, especially in the wake of comments from several harbor commissioners that women are unfit for the task.

Commissioners Richard Wilson and James Gray said less than a month ago that many of the port's biggest customers in Japan and South America do not share American attitudes toward women in business. They seemed reluctant to advocate naming a woman to the commission.

Wilson suggested that women might be more effective serving as hostesses or concerning themselves with the environment. And recently resigned commission member Llewellyn Bixby Jr. suggested women were physically unfit for the post.

IN THE meantime, newly appointed City Manager John Dever, who must work with the commission, says only that whoever he suggests for appointment "will have to have good judgment."

The harbor department and its board of commissioners are a quasi-public corporation, established in 1931 by city charter amendment and given exclusive jurisdiction over the Long Beach Harbor District.

Harbor commission actions are, by law, independent and may not be overruled, but the City of Long Beach retains the power to control the budget.

The harbor department is intended to operate as free enterprise, the environment in which it best competes with other world ports. It is this historical sense of laissez-faire that, more than any other factor, has accounted for the success of the Port of Long Beach.

Men who have so far served on the harbor commission were already tested businessmen when they chose expanded careers in public service. They understood the port was, first of all, a business.

THEY HAVE sought, as they were expected to, the economic advantage, and Long Beach Harbor Commissioners have made "guts" decisions that paid off — decisions on what cargoes to attract and where to develop the markets.

Nonetheless, the harbor commission is a public body, and the public increasingly has indicated it wants a larger share of the action.

Yet to allow that public participation presents harbor commissioners with the prospect of becoming a debating society, abandoning proved business instincts for untested social theory.

Some say that may be good government, but it could also be bad business judgment.

The three incumbent harbor commissioners — H.E. "Bud" Ridings Jr., Wilson and Gray — have already learned that the community's awakened interest in every aspect of city government seems to have singled out the harbor department as a test case for the limits of citizen power.

RECENT letters from concerned citizens to City Manager Dever prompted him two weeks ago to order

First of a two-part series

public hearings of the pending port budget before it is submitted in May to the City Council.

Dever says the public "has a right to know how its money will be invested."

The Port of Long Beach today is recognized as the tonnage leader in the western United States. In the fiscal year ending last June, more than 29.3 million revenue tons valued at more than $6.2 billion came across Long Beach piers. That's nearly double the tonnage figure of 10 years ago.

Port assets last year totalled nearly $245 million, while port-related activities added more than $304 million to the local area economy.

Most of the more than 300 skilled and trade employes at the port come under Civil Service, but 52 managers, department heads and staff members serve at the pleasure of the harbor commissioners. They are hired and fired as suits the board, and there is no appeal.

The commissioners themselves are appointed by the city manager, with the concurrence of the City Council.

IN THE almost 60 years the commission has existed, the council has never rejected a candidate presented by a city manager.

The port is unique among city agencies because it pays its own way. The port hasn't used public tax money for more than 40 years.

The city charter requires that the City Council approve the harbor budget each year, a budget funded by income from revenue bonds and fees paid by customers for the use of port facilities.

Tidelands oil revenues bankrolled the port back in the 1920s, just as oil built most of Long Beach, but legislation has since taken oil income away from the port, as well as many other municipal agencies.

When oil didn't pay the freight anymore, port commissioners and managers relied on sheer competition to make the port grow into the income-generating agency it is today.

"This is a competitive business, that's for certain," says port manager Tom Thorley.

"It's a business. We compete with every other West Coast port and even the Gulf states.

"YOU HAVE to understand the nature of this business," Thorley explained. "Shippers don't care where their goods come in. Really.

"They're looking for the best service, the best facilities, for the least amount of money," he says. "It's a question of economics.

"That's what rules this world — economics.

"We're not like any other city agency. There's no such thing as maintaining the status quo or holding your position.

"We're not like the water department, for instance," he continues. "The ships don't have to come here. Our job is to attract business to the port."

Tomorrow, port officials explain some of their business practices, which have been criticized as potential conflicts of interest. Officials also explain the port's finances, while a citizen activist tells why the public wants more participation in port planning.

Gas shift to East not harming Calif.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Natural gas shipped to aid gas-starved areas in the frigid East is doing very little harm to the California supply, Pacific Gas & Electric Co. says.

"No California customers are being deprived of gas because gas is going to the East," Jack Sproul, senior vice president of PG&E, said in an interview Friday.

Suppliers in Texas are currently diverting 50 million cubic feet of natural gas a day to the East.

Sproul said that would probably jump to 250 million cubic feet a day early next week and could continue at that rate for 30 days.

Including supplies in California and Canada, PG&E receives 2.5 billion cubic feet of natural gas a day.

Sproul said PG&E could accommodate a 10 per cent cut in the daily supply by taking some gas from storage and cutting back supplies to industrial customers, including PG&E power plants, capable of using substitute fuels as a last result.

Emergency federal legislation authorized the diversion for up to 30 days.

As for after 30 days, Sproul said, "Who knows? If there's still the need and we can help, then we'll probably do something. But we don't want to take gas from factories in California so it can be burned in factories in the Eastern part of the United States.

"Residences are something else. If there are human needs, then we're going to help."

Some industrial users of PG&E natural gas were cut off between Jan. 9 and Jan. 20, but that curtailment was a result of the recent cold spell and not diversions to the East, Sproul said.

"We've been doing that as a matter of course for the last three years as supplies became scarce," he said.

Most industrial users burn low-sulfur fuel oil when natural gas is curtailed. Fuel oil is more expensive and adds more air pollution than natural gas, Sproul noted.

PG&E supplies natural gas to customers from the Oregon border to just north of Bakersfield.

Ohio advertising in papers to find new supplies of gas

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The State of Ohio is trying to get natural gas from independent producers in Texas, Oklahoma and Louisiana with a series of newspaper ads that began Saturday.

"We've had four calls already," said Chuck Morris, a spokesman for the state Energy Emergency Management Committee, after the first ad ran in Saturday's Dallas Morning News.

"They've got some gas down there," he said. "They're asking us what kind of price we feel we can pay."

Morris said the state is spending $13,500 for daily newspaper ads in Dallas, Fort Worth, Houston, Oklahoma City, Tulsa and New Orleans that ask for immediate delivery of large daily volumes of gas.

Some Ohio businesses and industries were told Friday to close until March 20 because of gas shortages, and nearly all industrial and large commercial customers are at maintenance level gas consumption until next Wednesday.

Two-thirds of the state's schools are closing because they have no more gas, some for as long as a month.

Morris said that without gas legislation signed by President Carter on Wednesday, Ohio's utilities could not move any gas they might purchase from independent suppliers through interstate pipelines.

State officials also are awaiting word from Washington on whether Ohio will receive gas from the current supplies scheduled to be reallocated to areas of critical need under the federal legislation.

The legislation gives the President authority through April 30 to declare national or regional natural gas emergencies and to order gas moved from state to state to keep homes and hospitals warm.

The four-column-by-10-inch ad, signed by Gov. James Rhodes, says: "WANTED, Natural gas for Ohio. Gas producers who can supply large daily volumes of natural gas NOW, please contact us immediately."

The Dallas ad will be followed by ads in the other cities today, Monday and Tuesday, Morris said.

Morris said early response to the ad campaign indicates the callers are very aware they are operating in a seller's market.

"They're kind of casting to see what kind of price we can pay," he said.

The state is forwarding the information to Ohio's gas utilities which must bargain for price with the sellers, he said.

"There is a lot of gas down there," Morris said. "I can quote one caller who said it's deep and expensive. But he said there is some gas shallow enough to help us over the hump."

Carter's cardigan stirs flap

Combined News Services

The cardigan sweater — classic, simple, warm. And it's worn by millions of American men in and out of their homes.

But when President Carter wore one on national television Wednesday night, in his first "fireside chat," the mohair began to fly. What does this mean to the fashion world? A new trend?

Fashion designers, it turns out, are divided in their opinions on the Carter cardigan look.

"I enjoyed the fact that he was wearing a sweater," said French designer Pierre Cardin. "I'm in favor of a relaxed mentality, and I can only applaud his sense of self-expression."

"What he's presenting is an attitude about himself and what he feels," added American designer Ralph Lauren. "He wanted to have an informal discussion with the American people, the way he would if he invited them into his home."

But some designers thought Carter went too far.

Said Bill Blass: "It seems a little obvious to me. A blazer would have been a breakthrough. But this is an extreme jump."

And Georgio di Sant'Angelo said, "The whole environment he was in was a bit elaborate for the average man. Sweaters are already a part of the lifestyle of the average man. But the President's sweater was a little bit too sloppy.

"Someone should advise him about the way he dresses. He's really a young man and could be quite dapper."

Most designers thought the President's style of dress should remain the same. If they designed for him, they would change very little.

"Up to now, in every one of his public appearances, he's been appropriately dressed," said Blass. "I think he must always be conservatively attired."

"I think his style of dressing is excellent," said Lauren. "He's not a fashion guy, but he has style."

But others said Carter should take a second look in his closet.

"I have many suits in my line where the jacket is almost sweater-like and they can be worn with a shirt and tie," said Cardin, noting Carter's penchant for informality. "These would be suitable to give a soft and easy look."

Oscar de la Renta thought the President's wardrobe should consist of clothes "that are not controversial and carry the dignity of his job."

The men's wear designers do not think there will be a major trend toward the cardigan among American men. But Carter's appearance certainly won't hurt the sweater industry, they agreed.

"Cardigans are a classic that are fashionable now," said Larry Bloom, president of Puritan Sportswear. "The difference is that the President appeared to wear it as a simply utilitarian garment rather than as a fashionable article. I must admit, though, I think it will accentuate the appeal."

Said Cardin: "Hopefully, it will set a trend. It's a sweater, but it's also unconstructed. He looked much more comfortable than I've seen a lot of presidents look ..."

CIA chief

Adm. Stansfield Turner, commander of NATO's forces in southern Europe, is President Carter's leading candidate for nomination as director of the CIA, Time magazine said Saturday.

Turner, 53, was a classmate of Carter's at the U.S. Naval Academy.

White House sources said that three or four names were being considered but Turner was "the serious frontrunner," Time said.

The magazine said the Carter appears to be making a careful, middle-of-the road choice after the withdrawal of Theodore Sorensen as a candidate.

Chou En-lai

Books, songs and photographs in memory of the late Premier Chou En-lai have been released by four publishing houses in Peking, the official Hsinhua news agency reported Saturday.

Hsinhua said they include the first three volumes of an anthology of articles in memory of Chou, a collection of songs and an album of photographs.

They are being published, Hsinhua said, in response to requests from "people of all strata across China, who sent in a flood of letters and telegrams" to the newspapers, magazines and publishing departments on the first anniversary of Chou's death.

Author dies

Davis Dresser, known to millions of readers as Brett Halliday, author of the Michael Shayne detective series, has died of cancer, his family said Saturday.

Dresser, 72, died of cancer Friday at his Montecito home near here. No funeral services are scheduled.

Dresser, under the name Halliday, wrote more than 50 books on the adventures of one of the first private eyes.

Each Shayne novel sold more than a million copies in the United States and was translated into from eight to 12 languages.

Queen marks silver jubilee

Britain's 70-year-old poet laureate, Sir John Betjeman, has produced his second official offering in four years — a "Jubilee Hymn" commemorating the 25th anniversary, today, of the accession to the throne of Queen Elizabeth II.

The queen, who will be 51 on April 21, was spending a quiet weekend at Windsor Castle when the hymn was published by the Press Association, the British domestic news agency.

PA said Betjeman had worked for three months on the tribute. It has five verses with this chorus:

For our monarch and her people,
United yet and free,
Let the bells from ev'ry steeple
Ring out loud the Jubilee.

Elizabeth assumed the throne Feb. 6, 1952, on the death of her father, King George VI. At the time she was touring Kenya with her husband, Prince Philip.

In Kenya, a special dinner was held at the game reserve where Elizabeth, then a 26-year-old crown princess, learned she had become queen and symbolic head of the British Commonwealth.

Stanley Fingland, the British high commissioner in Kenya, was among the guests at the celebration at Treetops Lodge, built in the branches of a giant tree near Nyeri, 100 miles north of the Kenyan capital of Nairobi.

Betjeman was made poet laureate in October 1972. The post carries a yearly payment of $119 plus an additional $45.90 "in lieu of a butt of sack" — the cask of wine that in olden times was the laureate's only reward.

He is expected to produce a poem or song for official occasions such as the jubilee.

The "Jubilee Hymn" has been set to music by Malcolm Williamson, Master of the Queen's Music, and will get its first performance Sunday in London's Royal Albert Hall at a jubilee concert.

Queen Elizabeth planned to spend today at Windsor with her only engagement the morning service at the royal chapel. She leaves Wednesday for East Asia to begin silver jubilee tours of Commonwealth countries.

Other celebrations are planned later during the jubilee year, when the weather is warmer. Children's street parties are scheduled for the summer, but the parents will have to pay for the refreshments and souvenirs.

'Dynamite' barge explodes

Combined News Services

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — Firemen fought for nine hours to extinguish a flaming spill of volatile fuel they called "liquid dynamite" Saturday after a barge exploded on the Mobile River.

NATIONAL

The barge, one of four carrying an estimated 4 million gallons of highly flammable naphtha, crashed into the Cochrane Bridge shortly before 5:30 a.m., sending a shudder across this port city.

No injuries were reported, but the blast turned into a raging fire five miles north of downtown Mobile.

For hours, flames from the spill threatened to spread to the other three barges still linked to the burning hulk, as well as to fuel storage tanks on the river banks.

The fire finally was extinguished late Saturday afternoon. The U.S. Coast Guard said fire control teams would remain near the barge overnight.

The extent of damage to the bridge was not immediately known. It had been raised to allow the tugboat pushing the barges to pass beneath. Paint was blackened, but structural damage, if any, could not be assessed immediately.

Gandhi begins race

INTERNATIONAL

Saturday when thousands in the crowd walked out even before the politically embattled Indian leader finished speaking. About 100,000 persons packed the Delhi fairgrounds for the well-publicized rally to kick off the ruling Congress party's campaign, but large groups became unruly and defied baton-swinging police and the pleas of party volunteers to remain seated. In a fiery half-hour speech, the 59-year-old prime minister defended her 19-month-old emergency rule and condemned the surprise defection of some major Congress party figures last week.

Israeli 'return'

TEL AVIV, Israel — Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin said Saturday his meeting the day before with Ivory Coast President Felix Houphouet-Boigny signaled the beginning of Israel's "return to Africa." Rabin flew secretly to Geneva to meet Houphouet-Boigny on Friday. The two leaders discussed the Mideast, Israel's relations with Africa and Africa's role in international affairs, the state radio said. Most African nations broke off relations with Israel after the 1967 war.

NICOSIA, Cyprus — The Nicosia district court ordered six Greek Cypriots held Saturday in connection with the assassination of U.S. Ambassador Rodger Davies more than two years ago. Davies and a Greek Cypriot secretary, Antoinette Varnava, were shot dead Aug. 19, 1974, in the American Embassy while it was being attacked by hundreds of Greek Cypriots protesting the failure of the U.S. government to prevent the Turkish invasion the month before.

TANANARIVE, Madagascar — Nine persons were killed and 5,000 left homeless when Cyclone Emilie swept across Madagascar, according to provisional figures released Saturday. Oil barge hits BEAR MOUNTAIN, N.Y. — Ships and equipment were rushed here Saturday night as the Coast Guard battled to prevent the sinking of a foundered barge carrying 2.5 million gallons of heavy fuel oil. The partially submerged barge leaked oil into the icy Hudson River, a Coast Guard spokesman said. But he added, "It's not possible to estimate how much oil has been lost because it appears to be under the ice." The barge apparently struck an underwater rock two miles north of Bear Mountain on Friday night.

Gardner quits

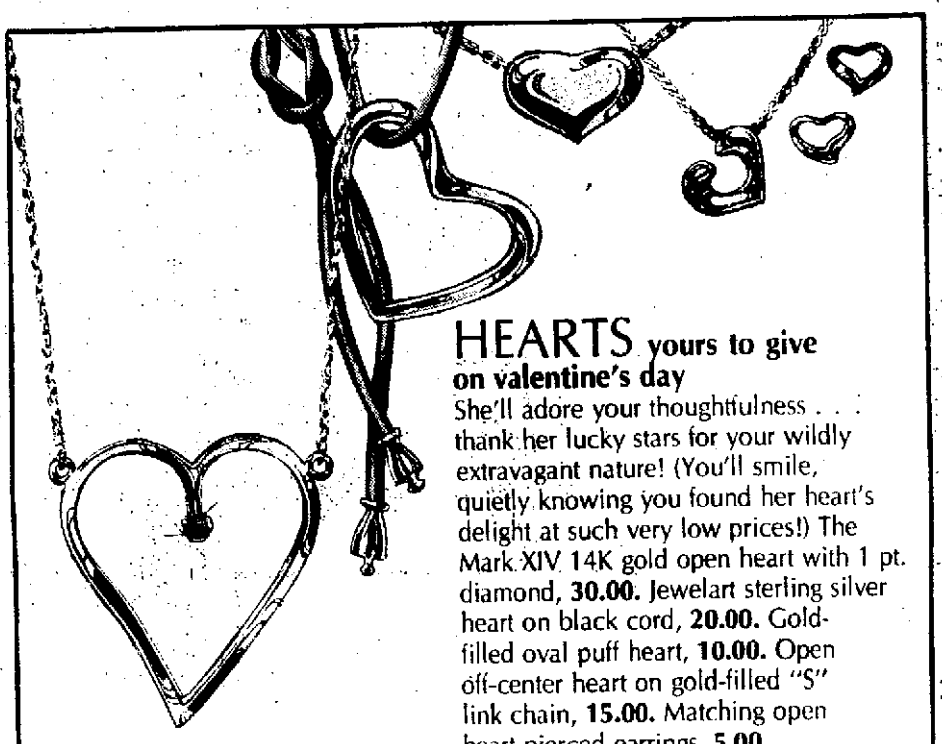

WASHINGTON — John Gardner, founder of Common Cause, announced Saturday he is stepping aside as chairman of the citizens' political action group although he will remain as a member of the board. "Every organization must renew itself," Gardner said in announcing to a meeting of his organization's governing board that he will not seek a new term as chairman when his current term expires this spring.

Gambling raid

NEW YORK — Undercover police officers equipped with a code word and entry card raided a fancy after-hours gambling club, which they said was financed by organized crime, early Saturday and arrested 11 persons. Six undercover officers gained entry to the second-floor club at its usual opening time, 4 a.m., by using a code word and presenting a silver card bearing the words "Post Time."

L.A. buildings ripe for quake disaster

By BILL GARDNER
Associated Press

Six years after a major earthquake in the San Fernando Valley killed 58 persons, Los Angeles still has thousands of older buildings likely to tumble if a big quake hits near the heart of town.

The Feb. 9, 1971, San Fernando quake was a near miss. A few miles to the south it could have been devastating. Local government heeded the warning and formed an earthquake commission that recommended ways to avoid tragedy.

The No. 1 recommendation was to make the older buildings earthquake-safe or destroy them by 1980.

Any progress?

"NONE SO FAR, it's a very hazardous situation," said George Housner, a California Institute of Technology scientist and building safety expert who was on the earthquake commission. "If a big quake were to hit Los Angeles, it would be a disaster, no question about it."

Progress has also been slow on the No. 2 recommendation — that dams be examined and made safe. And homeowners apparently have ignored the recommendation that they buy earthquake insurance.

Preparation is critical because quake experts say a big tremor is overdue along the San Andreas fault in Southern California.

The failure of Los Angeles to do anything about the problem of old, unreinforced buildings is highlighted by the fact that Long Beach has made great progress in getting rid of such structures.

Ed O'Connor, the man most responsible for Long Beach's success, says Los Angeles officials have ducked the problem for 20 years.

NOBODY knows how many old, unreinforced buildings there are in Los Angeles, but the most common estimate is about 11,000 to 14,000. Officials figure about 150,000 people either live or work in the buildings.

After five years of haggling, the City Council recently considered an ordinance that would have required building owners to make such structures safe or destroy them within 10 years. Owners would also have had to post a notice that the building did not meet earthquake safety standards.

On Jan. 24, the council tabled the ordinance and ordered more study.

It will now be at least six months and maybe two years before another ordinance is considered, supporters of the ordinance say.

The owners of the old buildings say their structures have lasted 40 or 50 years without collapsing. They point to economic and social problems — the great expense of fixing the buildings and the hardship of tearing down many old apartments that provide low-rent homes for poor people.

O'CONNOR, the Long Beach director of building and safety since 1949, says Los Angeles officials don't really need a new ordinance but could tackle the problem with condemnation laws already on the books.

"The Los Angeles and San Francisco building safety managers have both ducked the earthquake safety problem by saying they have to solve their social and economic problems," O'Connor said. "Hell, we never solved them in Long Beach."

O'Connor said he started condemning hazardous old buildings in the late 1950s.

"The building owners jumped up and down and said what an SOB I was," he recalled. "We just flat-out condemned them."

O'Connor said he asked the Los Angeles director of building safety to do the same but "he told me he wasn't in a position to take it on. So, hell, I went on alone."

Frank Kroeger, the man responsible for dealing with old buildings for the Los Angeles Department of Building and Safety, agreed he could go after the old buildings without a new ordinance.

"THERE IS probably a way you could do it, but it would be very cumbersome," Kroeger said. "I realize those buildings are hazardous, but I would rather see the City Council give good consideration to the plan than go off half-cocked."

Arthur Mann, vice chairman of the 1971 Earthquake Commission, said the matter of old buildings "is a tough problem. You have to weigh the economic loss against the potential loss of human life. I'm satisfied the City Council is moving, but I don't think it's moving fast enough."

The commission's No. 2 recommendation was that existing dams be brought up to modern standards of safety or their use restricted. The 1971 quake damaged two dams and "very nearly caused a catastrophe," the commission's report noted.

Some self-service gas station pumps have a catch on the nozzle so that a person can stand away from the pump and doesn't have to inhale the noxious fumes when he's putting gas in his car. Other stations don't have the catch devices, and when I've asked why, I've been told they're against the law. Is this true? I have read that gasoline contains benzene, which has been linked to cancer, and I'd like to know if it's dangerous to breathe these fumes? J.B., Long Beach.

In Long Beach and several other cities, the automatic-fill nozzles are prohibited on self-service pumps. Gasoline vapors do contain benzene and other harmful pollutants, but inhaling them once or twice a week when you pump your own gas probably is not a significantly greater health hazard than breathing them in the atmosphere. The Southern California Air Pollution Control District is going to require—probably within a year—all gas stations in the South Coast Air Basin to equip their pumps with devices that will trap most of the escaping vapors. "The person who's pumping his own gas is inhaling an insignificant amount of the vapors at that time, but the vapors from all the gas stations combined contribute a substantial amount of pollutants daily," said a spokesman for the APCD. Since 1973, the Long Beach Fire Department has prohibited the automatic-fill nozzles on self-serve pumps because of the possibility of gasoline spillage if a customer doesn't insert the pump nozzle properly, then walks away and it falls out. The catch nozzles are permitted on the full-serve pumps, and many self-service stations have the automatic-fill devices in violation of fire regulations.

Can Action Line find out if it is safe to put a sheet or blanket over an electric blanket when it is in use? I'd also like to know if a pet should be allowed to curl up on an electric blanket when it's on. Some people say these two things shouldn't be done; others say they cause no problems. P.W., Norwalk.

Although electric blanket manufacturers usually recommend that additional bedding not be placed on top of an electric blanket, a testing engineer with the Underwriters Laboratory in Chicago told Action Line that this should pose no safety hazard. "We assume that most people are going to have at least a bedspread on top of the blanket, so we test all of the electric blankets with another blanket on top of them, and we haven't found any safety problems," he said. He added that the pressure of a pet lying still on an electric blanket shouldn't cause any malfunctions, but Underwriters Laboratories does not recommend this practice because of the possibility of the animal clawing into the blanket or bunching it up so that the wires are crimped and the heat too concentrated.

My husband and I want to make out our own wills, but we can't afford to hire an attorney. Is it legal for each of us to write out our own wills? Can we name both our son and daughter as executors? Mrs. O.S., Carson.

California recognizes two types of do-it-yourself wills: holographic (entirely handwritten) ones and those typed or drafted on the legal forms available at stationery stores. The latter type requires the signatures of two witnesses who aren't heirs. A will should be dated and signed and include the appointment of an executor, your wishes for the distribution of your assets and a statement indicating that the form is indeed a will. Both your children can be named as co-executors. The executor is responsible for notifying the other heirs mentioned in the will and for seeing that all the conditions of the will are met. In practice, however, the work often is done by an attorney, and the executor merely signs his approval. Executor and attorney fees, which are paid out of the proceeds from the estate, are set by law. If you and your husband have all of your property in joint tenancy, however, it will automatically go to the surviving party, whether or not you leave a will. To simplify their estate planning, many people put their property in joint tenancy arrangements with their children and don't make a will. But attorneys often recommend that a person draft a will anyway. "A couple may think that all their property is in joint tenancy, but some assets may not be. A will also allows a couple to make provisions for the distribution of their estate in case they are both killed in an accident," said a local attorney. Do-it-yourself wills are more often contested, lawyers say.

CATHY THEIMER and fiance Vyacheslav Nepomneschy meet at Kennedy Airport in New York Saturday in a triumphal end to his six-year struggle to leave Russia. —AP Wirephoto

Love stronger than red tape for couple

NEW YORK (AP) — An American woman and her Russian fiance were reunited Saturday after a six-year wrangle of red-tape.

Carol Theimer, 26, now of Manhattan and formerly of Rumson, N.J., had a joyful reunion with Vyacheslav Nepomneschy, 29, of Moscow at Kennedy Airport.

"I do not have the words to express the joy I feel after such a long wait," Nepomneschy said.

The couple, who met in 1970 when Miss Theimer visited the Soviet Union, plans to wed in April.

Nepomneschy repeatedly sought permission to leave the Soviet Union, but permission was denied until Jan. 24 when he was allowed to depart for Vienna. Once in Vienna, he caught a plane for New York.

Miss Theimer is studying for a doctorate in Russian at Columbia University. Nepomneschy, also a student, has not decided what he will do in his new home.

think the county has grown so large that it is ungovernable,unmanageable. It is so big that there has developed a real lack of accountability on the part of supervisors and their offices. There is, I'm told, a lack of accessibility by city council members and mayors. They don't have their telephone calls returned; they can't get through to get help on local problems.

Q. Is that the fault of the system or of the individual supervisors?

A. I don't know. Maybe the person hasn't been born yet who can return all the calls that seven and one-half million people can generate.

Q. In view of the election last November, in which county voters rejected a division of the county and the formation of a new entity, Canyon County, why are you coming back so soon with this proposal?

A. The Canyon County experience is an example of how those in power — namely, the Board of Supervisors — behind the shield of an objective study are able to represent to voters that if anyone leaves the jurisdiction, the county, the property taxes of those remaining will increase appreciably. On the one hand, that argument was virtually a confession by the board that it was not providing services to the proposed new county area equivalent to the amount of taxes being paid by the residents there. In other words, the cost of the services which would no longer have to be provided would not constitute a savings equal to the tax revenue lost from the taxpayers of that area.

How, under any other circumstances, would the splitting off of Canyon County have resulted in the remaining Los Angeles County taxpayers facing an increased tax burden, as the supervisors said?

Q. There have been other efforts by sections of the county to secede, and a number of such efforts are presently being discussed. Is that the reason you put AB 333 in now?

A. Yes. I think it's futile for lawmakers in various cities and their constituents to attend mass meetings mainly to voice concern at the lack of accountability I've described and then to go through the laborious process of trying to qualify a ballot petition, only to find themselves in a David-and-Goliath position with respect to the Board of Supervisors. There are discussions under way right now in the beach cities, on Palos Verdes Peninsula, in the San Gabriel Valley, the San Fernando Valley, and again in the proposed Canyon County area.

But I don't believe a secession attempt is ever going to be successful unless every area of the county is affected and voters in every area are able to vote in their own self-interest.

Q. Why five new counties? Why not three, or seven, or 11?

A. I thought perhaps the supervisors may not be as reluctant to approach the bill objectively if it provided that each of them would be able to run for office as an incumbent without opposition from another incumbent.

Q. What has been the reaction among other members of the Los Angeles County legislative delegation?

A. I would imagine that by the time the bill is set for committee hearing in March that perhaps half of the 43 Los Angeles County legislators will be in support of the concept. That's not to say the other half will be opposed. A sufficient number of community leaders seem to be seizing upon this (bill) as an opportunity to achieve a divorce from the existing county government that legislators from those areas are going to have to be responsive.

Q. What authority does the State Legislature have to direct Los Angeles County to divide itself into five parts?

A. Cities and counties are creatures of the Legislature, and I solicited a legislative counsel's opinion about whether this directive to the supervisors could be accomplished by legislation only or whether it required a constitutional amendment. The counsel advised me that it could be accomplished by legislation.

Q. And it would apply only to Los Angeles County?

A. The bill doesn't even mention Los Angeles County. It refers to "all counties of the first class," which, by Government Code definition, means all counties with populations in excess of 6-million people.And that, of course, is only Los Angeles County.

Q. So, if AB 333 becomes law, whenever any other county becomes a county of the first class, it would be required to split itself up?

A. That's right.

Q. One last question. If Los Angeles County is ungovernable because of its size, what about the state of California?

A. First of all, each Assembly member has a constituency of about 250,000, and each senator a constituency of twice that. Each Los Angeles County supervisor has a constituency of one and a half million people.

In addition, lawmakers in the Legislature are here to make policy and to provide local governments with the tools to deal with municipal responsibilities, to provide the familiar local services: refuse collection, water deliveries, health and welfare services and the like. Boards of supervisors are charged with the overseeing of those functions. In Los Angeles County, the task is just too big. And I don't think simply increasing the number of supervisors to seven, nine, 15, or whatever, is the answer. The county population is just too big to be served by one board.

Balloonist may try to lift off again today

PHOENIX (AP) — Stymied in his search for wind, balloonist Karl Thomas spent Saturday at a plush hotel, unable to resume his attempt to reach Florida in record time until at least this afternoon.

Weather reports said that would be the earliest that winds would permit the 28-year-old Troy, Mich., adventurer to lift his 95-foot-tall, yellow hot-air balloon from Hope, Ariz., 50 miles east of the Colorado River.

Thomas, trying to beat publisher Malcolm Forbes' 41-day coast-to-coast record, has made only 50 miles headway since Wednesday. He started Tuesday from Santa Anita race track in Arcadia, Calif.

On Thursday Thomas drifted 200 miles south to Puerto Penasco, Mexico, where he and his crew battled Mexican authorities and bad winds before giving up the effort to take off from that country.

Under ground rules that permit moving the balloon due north or south by truck, Thomas had it sent to Hope on Friday.

NEW YORK (AP) — Nine people joined in pursuit of a purse snatcher Saturday and caught him after a four-block chase.

They handed over Juan Jimenez, 17, who was charged with robbery, police said. Emma Schatz, 55, was knocked to the ground and robbed of her handbag while shopping in the Bronx.

Second largest haul of marijuana seized

MIAMI (AP) — Fifty-four tons of marijuana, taken from an unregistered freighter in what authorities say was the second largest seizure ever, have been burned in a Miami incinerator.

Drug Enforcement Administration spokesman Ted Swift said the marijuana was burned Friday. Authorities estimated it would have been worth $32 million on the street.

The drug, believed to be from Colombia, was taken from the Night Train, a 110-foot freighter seized Tuesday by the U.S. Coast Guard cutter Dauntless off the northeastern Bahamas, officials said.

The largest seizure in history took place last February in Dibuya, Colombia, where officials confiscated 80 tons of marijuana, Swift said.

Swift said 13 crew members from the freighter, all Colombians, and four Americans arrested in Miami were charged with conspiring to import marijuana.

He said bail for the Colombians ranged from $50,000 to $200,000 and for the Americans from $20,000 to $500,000.

The Night Train's capture, completed after the Dauntless fired three warning shells over its bow, ended what DEA agents said was a two-year effort to halt drug-smuggling activities by the ship.

Agents said the ship had been operating under various names, bringing marijuana up from Colombia and meeting smuggling boats offshore.

L.B. harbor panel answerable to few

By JOHN SHEEHAN
Staff Writer

Two Long Beach citizens who later this month will be appointed by the Long Beach City Council to fill two vacancies on the five-member Board of Harbor Commissioners will find themselves — along with their colleagues — overseeing a $245-million empire unique in city government.

They will find that the harbor commission operates as a literal fiefdom, answerable to few and, until recently, questioned by hardly anyone.

They will learn that the harbor department staff and many of its more than 300 employes seem to believe a variation of the General Motors axiom that what is good for the Port of Long Beach must, by definition, be best for the community at large.

THEY WILL also learn that the City Council, announced watchdog of the harbor department, is instead a seldom-seen apparition of suspicious breed that rarely barks and never bites.

Speculation is rampant on who will be appointed to the two vacancies. Several community interest groups are hoping at least one member will be a woman, especially in the wake of comments from several harbor commissioners that women are unfit for the task.

Commissioners Richard Wilson and James Gray said less than a month ago that many of the port's biggest customers in Japan and South America do not share American attitudes toward women in business. They seemed reluctant to advocate naming a woman to the commission.

Wilson suggested that women might be more effective serving as hostesses or concerning themselves with the environment. And recently resigned commission member Llewellyn Bixby Jr. suggested women were physically unfit for the post.

IN THE meantime, newly appointed City Manager John Dever, who must work with the commission, says only that whoever he suggests for appointment "will have to have good judgment."

The harbor department and its board of commissioners are a quasi-public corporation, established in 1931 by city charter amendment and given exclusive jurisdiction over the Long Beach Harbor District.

Harbor commission actions are, by law, independent and may not be overruled, but the City of Long Beach retains the power to control the budget.

The harbor department is intended to operate as free enterprise, the environment in which it best competes with other world ports. It is this historical sense of laissez-faire that, more than any other factor, has accounted for the success of the Port of Long Beach.

Men who have so far served on the harbor commission were already tested businessmen when they chose expanded careers in public service. They understood the port was, first of all, a business.

THEY HAVE sought, as they were expected to, the economic advantage, and Long Beach Harbor Commissioners have made "guts" decisions that paid off — decisions on what cargoes to attract and where to develop the markets.

Nonetheless, the harbor commission is a public body, and the public increasingly has indicated it wants a larger share of the action.

Yet to allow that public participation presents harbor commissioners with the prospect of becoming a debating society, abandoning proved business instincts for untested social theory.

Some say that may be good government, but it could also be bad business judgment.

The three incumbent harbor commissioners — H.E. "Bud" Ridings Jr., Wilson and Gray — have already learned that the community's awakened interest in every aspect of city government seems to have singled out the harbor department as a test case for the limits of citizen power.

RECENT letters from concerned citizens to City Manager Dever prompted him two weeks ago to order

First of a two-part series

public hearings of the pending port budget before it is submitted in May to the City Council.

Dever says the public "has a right to know how its money will be invested."

The Port of Long Beach today is recognized as the tonnage leader in the western United States. In the fiscal year ending last June, more than 29.3 million revenue tons valued at more than $6.2 billion came across Long Beach piers. That's nearly double the tonnage figure of 10 years ago.

Port assets last year totalled nearly $245 million, while port-related activities added more than $304 million to the local area economy.

Most of the more than 300 skilled and trade employes at the port come under Civil Service, but 52 managers, department heads and staff members serve at the pleasure of the harbor commissioners. They are hired and fired as suits the board, and there is no appeal.

The commissioners themselves are appointed by the city manager, with the concurrence of the City Council.

IN THE almost 60 years the commission has existed, the council has never rejected a candidate presented by a city manager.

The port is unique among city agencies because it pays its own way. The port hasn't used public tax money for more than 40 years.

The city charter requires that the City Council approve the harbor budget each year, a budget funded by income from revenue bonds and fees paid by customers for the use of port facilities.

Tidelands oil revenues bankrolled the port back in the 1920s, just as oil built most of Long Beach, but legislation has since taken oil income away from the port, as well as many other municipal agencies.

When oil didn't pay the freight anymore, port commissioners and managers relied on sheer competition to make the port grow into the income-generating agency it is today.

"This is a competitive business, that's for certain," says port manager Tom Thorley.

"It's a business. We compete with every other West Coast port and even the Gulf states.

"YOU HAVE to understand the nature of this business," Thorley explained. "Shippers don't care where their goods come in. Really.

"They're looking for the best service, the best facilities, for the least amount of money," he says. "It's a question of economics.

"That's what rules this world — economics.

"We're not like any other city agency. There's no such thing as maintaining the status quo or holding your position.

"We're not like the water department, for instance," he continues. "The ships don't have to come here. Our job is to attract business to the port."

Tomorrow, port officials explain some of their business practices, which have been criticized as potential conflicts of interest. Officials also explain the port's finances, while a citizen activist tells why the public wants more participation in port planning.

Gas shift to East not harming Calif.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Natural gas shipped to aid gas-starved areas in the frigid East is doing very little harm to the California supply, Pacific Gas & Electric Co. says.

"No California customers are being deprived of gas because gas is going to the East," Jack Sproul, senior vice president of PG&E, said in an interview Friday.

Suppliers in Texas are currently diverting 50 million cubic feet of natural gas a day to the East.

Sproul said that would probably jump to 250 million cubic feet a day early next week and could continue at that rate for 30 days.

Including supplies in California and Canada, PG&E receives 2.5 billion cubic feet of natural gas a day.

Sproul said PG&E could accommodate a 10 per cent cut in the daily supply by taking some gas from storage and cutting back supplies to industrial customers, including PG&E power plants, capable of using substitute fuels as a last result.

Emergency federal legislation authorized the diversion for up to 30 days.

As for after 30 days, Sproul said, "Who knows? If there's still the need and we can help, then we'll probably do something. But we don't want to take gas from factories in California so it can be burned in factories in the Eastern part of the United States.

"Residences are something else. If there are human needs, then we're going to help."

Some industrial users of PG&E natural gas were cut off between Jan. 9 and Jan. 20, but that curtailment was a result of the recent cold spell and not diversions to the East, Sproul said.

"We've been doing that as a matter of course for the last three years as supplies became scarce," he said.

Most industrial users burn low-sulfur fuel oil when natural gas is curtailed. Fuel oil is more expensive and adds more air pollution than natural gas, Sproul noted.

PG&E supplies natural gas to customers from the Oregon border to just north of Bakersfield.

Ohio advertising in papers to find new supplies of gas

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The State of Ohio is trying to get natural gas from independent producers in Texas, Oklahoma and Louisiana with a series of newspaper ads that began Saturday.

"We've had four calls already," said Chuck Morris, a spokesman for the state Energy Emergency Management Committee, after the first ad ran in Saturday's Dallas Morning News.

"They've got some gas down there," he said. "They're asking us what kind of price we feel we can pay."

Morris said the state is spending $13,500 for daily newspaper ads in Dallas, Fort Worth, Houston, Oklahoma City, Tulsa and New Orleans that ask for immediate delivery of large daily volumes of gas.

Some Ohio businesses and industries were told Friday to close until March 20 because of gas shortages, and nearly all industrial and large commercial customers are at maintenance level gas consumption until next Wednesday.

Two-thirds of the state's schools are closing because they have no more gas, some for as long as a month.

Morris said that without gas legislation signed by President Carter on Wednesday, Ohio's utilities could not move any gas they might purchase from independent suppliers through interstate pipelines.

State officials also are awaiting word from Washington on whether Ohio will receive gas from the current supplies scheduled to be reallocated to areas of critical need under the federal legislation.

The legislation gives the President authority through April 30 to declare national or regional natural gas emergencies and to order gas moved from state to state to keep homes and hospitals warm.

The four-column-by-10-inch ad, signed by Gov. James Rhodes, says: "WANTED, Natural gas for Ohio. Gas producers who can supply large daily volumes of natural gas NOW, please contact us immediately."

The Dallas ad will be followed by ads in the other cities today, Monday and Tuesday, Morris said.

Morris said early response to the ad campaign indicates the callers are very aware they are operating in a seller's market.

"They're kind of casting to see what kind of price we can pay," he said.

The state is forwarding the information to Ohio's gas utilities which must bargain for price with the sellers, he said.

"There is a lot of gas down there," Morris said. "I can quote one caller who said it's deep and expensive. But he said there is some gas shallow enough to help us over the hump."

U.S. may have to bring back military draft

BY FRANK VAN RIPER
Knight News Service

WASHINGTON — The nation may be heading once again toward a military draft.

At the very least, soaring manpower costs, a shrinking manpower base and dwindling military reserves have rekindled debate over whether the United States can continue relying on volunteers to meet its strategic manpower needs.

"As commander-in-chief, I am determined to have a strong, lean, efficient fighting force," President Carter told the nation last week in his talk from the White House library. Carter did not go into detail, but Defense Secretary Harold Brown seemed to express the prevailing view when he told Senate confirmation hearings that the all-volunteer force is "working as of now . . . but I'm less certain about the future."

ARMED SERVICES Committee chairman John C. Stennis, D-Miss. was even less sanguine. "I'm convinced," Stennis said, "that like it or not, we're going to have to go back to the Selective Service System for obtaining some of our men."

With the advent of the Carter administration, key lawmakers and military experts have begun openly to question the viability of the all-volunteer force. The Senate Armed Services Manpower Subcommittee already is pulling together material for hearings on whether to revive some form of draft machinery.

The subcommittee Chairman, Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., is concerned over the fact that the volunteer service has only barely met its authorized strength (2.1 million men — or a million fewer than during the war years) at a time when conditions were supposed to be ideal to spur enlistments: high unemployment to push young men toward the comparative security of the military; a large number of 18-year-olds and the absence of a shooting war.

WHAT HAPPENS, Nunn asks, if the economy improves and attracts more young men back into the civilian labor market. In addition, statistics confirm that the military services will have to compete harder and harder for a smaller and smaller portion of the population.

Martin Binkin, a senior fellow at the Brookings Institution and an expert on military manpower, notes that "the number of males turning 18 is going to decline 15 per cent from now by 1985 and 25 per cent by 1992." To maintain present force levels and personnel policies, Binkin says that within the next 15 years, "one out of every three qualified and available males would have to volunteer for military service."

Even the staunchest backers of the volunteer concept concede that the absence of a draft has decimated the reserve ranks, including the Reserve Officers Training program. In 1961, for example, ROTC enrollment hit a high of more than 300,000. By last year, the figure had plummeted to roughly 70,000. The current Reserve force is 1.6 million men, the lowest number since the early 50s.

THE STRATEGIC importance of the Reserve cannot be underestimated, since currently, 60 per cent of the Army's artillery power and 65 per cent of its Army engineer units are Reservists.

When President Nixon, buffeted by protest over one of the most unpopular wars in American history, formally proposed an end to the draft four years ago, congressional liberals warned that the volunteer Army would ultimately become a mercenary force of the black and the poor.

To a degree, their fears have been realized—nearly 30 per cent of the new male recruits now entering the Army are black.

THE QUESTION of money — Can we afford a volunteer Army? — is perhaps the weakest argument against the volunteer force. To be sure, military pay has risen sharply—193 per cent since 1964—but those costs likely will remain whether or not the nation returns to the draft. One Pentagon source said ruefully: "The same politicians who voted the pay raise are now the ones hollering about costs." Although the rate of military pay raises has slowed considerably, there is little likelihood that military pay will be cut. Base pay for a recruit is $374.40 a month.

So where does all this leave the volunteer Army — and the average kid turning 18?

One "given" is that in the event of war, the draft almost certainly will be revived. "The volunteer Army is an Army which could never go to war," said one Senate source, talking only in terms of numbers, not fighting potential.

AS FOR NOW, several alternatives remain. One is to "buy whatever volunteers we need" through even higher pay scales — an unlikely option. Another is to lower the size of the military force. Again, unlikely. Still another alternative offered by Binkin is to expand greatly the role of women. He also suggests lowering physical requirements so that not everyone in uniform need be combat fit.

The final alternative is to reinstitute some form of service requirement on young people. Supporters of this idea talk about revitalizing the Peace Corps or its domestic counterpart, VISTA (Volunteers in Service to America).

But as one expert noted privately: "What happens if everybody, or almost everybody, volunteers to be a forest ranger or something and not a grunt? Then we'd have what amounts to a huge public service jobs program for young people — and a lot of empty barracks."

The military establishment, never all that keen on the volunteer concept, already has urged the White House to seek renewal of the President's authority to order inductions. At Nixon's urging, Congress let that authority lapse as of July 1, 1973.

AS OF NOW, military planners want the authority renewed in order to have a standby draft system, similar to the "random sequence draft" lottery of the Vietnam era. The plan would have 20-year-olds, not 18-year-olds, subjected to an annual lottery to determine in what order they would be called in the event of war.

But Congressional experts warn that if the volunteer Army continues having problems, real thought will be given to reviving the draft lottery to fill peacetime ranks.

"It's political dynamite," said one source close to Sen. Nunn. The source conceded that, currently, there is "no way" that a bill renewing the induction authority could pass Congress. But time, and a dwindling manpower pool, may change all that.

PRESIDENT and Mrs. Carter meet with Adm. and Mrs. Hyman Rickover for an informal luncheon in the White House residential wing Saturday. —AP Wirephoto

Carter, Rickover in reunion

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter had a nostalgic lunch Saturday with the man who was his mentor and who now salutes him as commander-in-chief.

Carter and his wife, Rosalynn, dined with Adm. and Mrs. Hyman Rickover in the secluded residence wing of the White House. Rickover, 77, is considered the father of the nuclear Navy.

Carter spent much of his Navy career in nuclear power development under Rickover.

The admiral has a reputation for being demanding in his desire for excellence from his men.

"Adm. Rickover had a profound effect on my life — perhaps more than anyone except my own parents," Carter wrote in his campaign biography, "Why Not the Best?"

The title of the book is based on an exchange he had with Rickover when the admiral interviewed him for the Navy's nuclear submarine program in the early 1950s.

Carter had graduated from the Naval Academy and sat in a large room with Rickover for more than two hours discussing subjects of Carter's choosing — current events, seamanship, music, literature, naval tactics, electronics and gunnery.

"He began to ask me a series of questions of increasing difficulty," Carter wrote. "In each instance he soon proved that I knew relatively little about the subject I had chosen.

"He always looked right into my eyes, and he never smiled. I was saturated with cold sweat."

Finally, Carter wrote, the admiral asked how he stood in his Naval Academy class — a question Carter thought he could answer with pride.

"Sir, I stood 59th in a class of 820!" Carter said he replied. "I sat back to wait for the congratulations — which never came."

Instead, Rickover asked: "Did you do your best?"

Carter wrote that he was reluctant to admit his human failings but answered nonetheless, "No, sir, I didn't always do my best."

"Why not?" Rickover shot back.

Carter said it was a question "I have never been able to forget or to answer. . . . I sat there for awhile, shaken, and then slowly left the room."

He worked for Rickover until 1953, when he decided to resign from the Navy because "I had only one life to live, and I wanted to live it as a civilian, with a potentially fuller opportunity for varied public service."

Deserter search called too costly

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON — The General Accounting Office says "it makes little sense" to spend millions of dollars hunting down military deserters because most of them eventually are expelled from the armed services anyway.

The GAO suggested that because of this Secretary of Defense Harold Brown re-examine the policy of treating deserters as criminals in peacetime.

The GAO proposed that Brown consider "stopping the apprehension of deserters except when the individual is wanted for some specific purpose, such as another crime or security matter, and discharge them in absentia after they have been absent for a stipulated period."

As an alternative, the GAO said, the Defense Department and the FBI could hold back on "aggressive apprehension efforts" until a deserter has been gone long enough to indicate that he is unlikely to return voluntarily.

The investigators dismissed arguments by military officials that treating deserters as criminals deters other servicemen and women from "going over the hill."

"There is no verifiable evidence that soldiers who do not desert are discouraged from doing so because of fear of becoming a military criminal," the report said.

The study deals with the future and says nothing about the issue of extending President Carter's pardon of Vietnam-era draft evaders to deserters of that period.

Desertion remains a problem for the armed services even though the war is over and young men no longer are drafted. Officials hope the problem will shrink away if they can improve the quality of volunteers.

The GAO report said the services classified about 84,000 military people as deserters in 1975 and 1976 after they were absent from duty for more than 30 days.

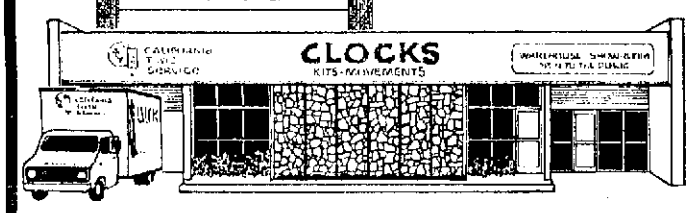

The services spent almost $58 million trying to catch and process these deserters, "only to discharge most of them as unqualified for retention," the study said.

Most deserters do not become "useful soldiers," the investigators found.

CATHY THEIMER and fiance Vyacheslav Nepomneschy meet at Kennedy Airport in New York Saturday in a triumphal end to his six-year struggle to leave Russia. —AP Wirephoto

Love stronger than red tape for couple

NEW YORK (AP) — An American woman and her Russian fiance were reunited Saturday after a six-year wrangle of red-tape.

Carol Theimer, 26, now of Manhattan and formerly of Rumson, N.J., had a joyful reunion with Vyacheslav Nepomneschy, 29, of Moscow at Kennedy Airport.

"I do not have the words to express the joy I feel after such a long wait," Nepomneschy said.

The couple, who met in 1970 when Miss Theimer visited the Soviet Union, plans to wed in April.

Nepomneschy repeatedly sought permission to leave the Soviet Union, but permission was denied until Jan. 24 when he was allowed to depart for Vienna. Once in Vienna, he caught a plane for New York.

Miss Theimer is studying for a doctorate in Russian at Columbia University. Nepomneschy, also a student, has not decided what he will do in his new home.

Cullen explains split

think the county has grown so large that it is ungovernable, unmanageable. It is so big that there has developed a real lack of accountability on the part of supervisors and their offices. There is, I'm told, a lack of accessibility by city council members and mayors. They don't have their telephone calls returned; they can't get through to get help on local problems.

Q. Is that the fault of the system or of the individual supervisors?

A. I don't know. Maybe the person hasn't been born yet who can return all the calls that seven and one-half million people can generate.

Q. In view of the election last November, in which county voters rejected a division of the county and the formation of a new entity, Canyon County, why are you coming back so soon with this proposal?

A. The Canyon County experience is an example of how those in power — namely, the Board of Supervisors — behind the shield of an objective study are able to represent to voters that if anyone leaves the jurisdiction, the county, the property taxes of those remaining will increase appreciably. On the one hand, that argument was virtually a confession by the board that it was not providing services to the proposed new county area equivalent to the amount of taxes being paid by the residents there. In other words, the cost of the services which would no longer have to be provided would not constitute a savings equal to the tax revenue lost from the taxpayers of that area.

How, under any other circumstances, would the splitting off of Canyon County have resulted in the remaining Los Angeles County taxpayers facing an increased tax burden, as the supervisors said?

Q. There have been other efforts by sections of the county to secede, and a number of such efforts are presently being discussed. Is that the reason you put AB 333 in now?

A. Yes. I think it's futile for lawmakers in various cities and their constituents to attend mass meetings mainly to voice concern at the lack of accountability I've described and then to go through the laborious process of trying to qualify a ballot petition, only to find themselves in a David-and-Goliath position with respect to the Board of Supervisors. There are discussions under way right now in the beach cities, on Palos Verdes Peninsula, in the San Gabriel Valley, the San Fernando Valley, and again in the proposed Canyon County area.

But I don't believe a secession attempt is ever going to be successful unless every area of the county is affected and voters in every area are able to vote in their own self-interest.

Q. Why five new counties? Why not three, or seven, or 11?

A. I thought perhaps the supervisors may not be as reluctant to approach the bill objectively if it provided that each of them would be able to run for office as an incumbent without opposition from another incumbent.

Q. What has been the reaction among other members of the Los Angeles County legislative delegation?

A. I would imagine that by the time the bill is set for committee hearing in March that perhaps half of the 43 Los Angeles County legislators will be in support of the concept. That's not to say the other half will be opposed. A sufficient number of community leaders seem to be seizing upon this (bill) as an opportunity to achieve a divorce from the existing county government that legislators from those areas are going to have to be responsive.

Q. What authority does the State Legislature have to direct Los Angeles County to divide itself into five parts?

A. Cities and counties are creatures of the Legislature, and I solicited a legislative counsel's opinion about whether this directive to the supervisors could be accomplished by legislation only or whether it required a constitutional amendment. The counsel advised me that it could be accomplished by legislation.

Q. And it would apply only to Los Angeles County?

A. The bill doesn't even mention Los Angeles County. It refers to "all counties of the first class," which, by Government Code definition, means all counties with populations in excess of 6-million people. And that, of course, is only Los Angeles County.

Q. So, if AB 333 becomes law, whenever any other county becomes a county of the first class, it would be required to split itself up?

A. That's right.

Q. One last question. If Los Angeles County is ungovernable because of its size, what about the state of California?

A. First of all, each Assembly member has a constituency of about 250,000, and each senator a constituency of twice that. Each Los Angeles County supervisor has a constituency of one and a half million people.

In addition, lawmakers in the Legislature are here to make policy and to provide local governments with the tools to deal with municipal responsibilities, to provide the familiar local services: refuse collection, water deliveries, health and welfare services and the like. Boards of supervisors are charged with the overseeing of those functions. In Los Angeles County, the task is just too big. And I don't think simply increasing the number of supervisors to seven, nine, 15, or whatever, is the answer. The county population is just too big to be served by one board.

Balloonist may try lift off again today

PHOENIX (AP) — Stymied in his search for wind, balloonist Karl Thomas spent Saturday at a plush hotel, unable to resume his attempt to reach Florida in record time until at least this afternoon.

Weather reports said that would be the earliest that winds would permit the 28-year-old Troy, Mich., adventurer to lift his 95-foot-tall yellow hot-air balloon from Hope, Ariz., 50 miles east of the Colorado River.

Thomas, trying to beat publisher Malcolm Forbes' 41-day coast-to-coast record, has made only 50 miles headway since Wednesday. He started Tuesday from Santa Anita race track in Arcadia, Calif.

On Thursday Thomas drifted 200 miles south to Puerto Penasco, Mexico, where he and his crew battled Mexican authorities and bad winds before giving up the effort to take off from that country.

Under ground rules that permit moving the balloon due north or south by truck, Thomas had it sent to Hope on Friday.

N.Y. crowd nabs purse snatcher

NEW YORK (AP) — Nine people joined in pursuit of a purse snatcher Saturday and caught him after a four-block chase.

They handed over Juan Jimenez, 17, who was charged with robbery, police said. Emma Schatz, 55, was knocked to the ground and robbed of her handbag while shopping in the Bronx.

Second largest haul of marijuana seized

MIAMI (AP) — Fifty-four tons of marijuana, taken from an unregistered freighter in what authorities say was the second largest seizure ever, have been burned in a Miami incinerator.

Drug Enforcement Administration spokesman Ted Swift said the marijuana was burned Friday. Authorities estimated it would have been worth $32 million on the street.

The drug, believed to be from Colombia, was taken from the Night Train, a 110-foot freighter seized Tuesday by the U.S. Coast Guard cutter Dauntless off the northeastern Bahamas, officials said.

The largest seizure in history took place last February in Dibuya, Colombia, where officials confiscated 80 tons of marijuana, Swift said.

Swift said 13 crew members from the freighter, all Colombians, and four Americans arrested in Miami were charged with conspiring to import marijuana.

He said bail for the Colombians ranged from $50,000 to $200,000 and for the Americans from $20,000 to $500,000.

The Night Train's capture, completed after the Dauntless fired three warning shells over its bow, ended what DEA agents said was a two-year effort to halt drug-smuggling activities by the ship.

Agents said the ship had been operating under various names, bringing marijuana up from Colombia and meeting smuggling boats offshore.

Let's have party, says Reagan

By DON McLEOD
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON — Ronald Reagan called Saturday night for a "New Republican Party," rebuilt on conservative principles and shed of its country club image.

"My friends," Reagan told the Conservative Political Action Conference, "the time has come to start acting to bring about the great conservative majority party we know is waiting to be created."

Although some of the ideas in his speech at a "Salute to Ronald and Nancy Reagan" dinner had been floated earlier, it was the first comprehensive presentation of his blueprint for the conservative future and his strongest personal assertion of leadership since his presidential campaign died just short of nomination last August.

REAGAN SAID the answer for conservatives is not to start a third party but to seize and restructure the GOP.

"I believe the political success of the principles we believe in can best be achieved in the Republican Party," Reagan said. "I believe the Republican Party can and should provide the political mechanism through which the goals of the majority of Americans can be achieved.

"For one thing," he said in his text, "the biggest single grouping of conservatives is to be found in that party. It makes more sense to build on that grouping than to break it up and start over.

"Rather than start a third party, we can have a new first party made up of people who share our principles."

Reagan has suggested that the Republicans look for a new name, but he said in the meantime he would call the dreamed of conservative majority "The New Republican Party."

"The New Republican Party I envision will not, and cannot, be one limited to the country club-big business image that it is burdened with today," the former California governor said.

"The New Republican Party I am speaking about is going to have room for the man and woman in the factories, for the farmer, for the cop on the beat and the millions of Americans who may never have thought of joining our party before but whose interests coincide with those represented by principled Republicans," he said.

REAGAN also said the foundation of the new version of the party should be the conservative platform which his followers hammered through the 1976 Republican convention.

Reagan pictured a political majority built on a grass-roots, populist conservatism, resting on economic rugged individualism, an aversion to social engineering and a demand for military strength.

Despite his call for high principle and doctrinal purity, Reagan said he does "not view the new revitalized Republican Party as one based on a principle of exclusion."

"After all," he said, "you do not get to be a majority party by searching for groups you won't associate or work with. Conservatism is not a narrow ideology nor is it the exclusive property of conservative activists. We are not a cult. We are members of a majority. Let's act and talk like it."

EARLIER, former New York Sen. James Buckley, who won as a Conservative and lost as a Republican, also told the conference that the Republican Party is still the only practical vehicle to conservative victory.

"It is no exaggeration to say that nearly every important issue of the present time is an issue which a majority of Americans perceive as requiring a conservative solution based on solid conservative principles," he said.

Buckley said the winning campaign themes of government restraint and efficiency used by President Carter and other Democrats last year were conservative ideas which Democrats put to better use.

"It is not enough to invent better mousetraps," Buckley said. "They must be marketed.

Byrd finds 'problems' with Warnke choice

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Democratic Leader Robert Byrd withheld support Saturday of President Carter's nomination of Paul Warnke as the nation's chief arms control negotiator and said there are "some problems with the nomination."

Byrd said he would not decide whether to vote for Senate confirmation "until Mr. Warnke has his day in court" at confirmation hearings.

"There are some problems, and Mr. Carter is aware of that," the West Virginia senator told newsmen.

"He is viewed by some senators as soft on arms negotiation matters," Byrd said. "But, as of today, the nomination probably would be confirmed."

Hearings will begin Tuesday before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Flu spurt may resurrect shots

By JUDITH RANDAL
Knight News Service

WASHINGTON — An outbreak of A-Victoria influenza in a Florida nursing home has led Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph Califano, Jr. to call an emergency meeting of scientists Monday to consider whether flu immunization programs should be resumed.

There have been 57 cases of the Victoria infection among the 176 residents and staff of the Treasure Island Nursing Home in Northeast Miami since Jan 26. Although three of the elderly residents have died in that period, scientists have not pinpointed the flu virus as the cause.

One of the patients was 105 and another 98. The age of the third victim was not available. The federal Center for Disease Control in Atlanta said that there have been no outbreaks of A-Victoria flu elsewhere.

Government immunization programs against all types of influenza have been suspended since Dec. 16 because of the possible link between the shots and the later risk of a paralyzing disorder known as the Guillain-Barre syndrome. However, those doctors wishing their patients to be immunized have been able to get vaccines; providing that those given the shots sign consent forms telling them of the risk. All the vaccine manufactured for the prevention of A-Victoria flu has been combined with vaccine against swine flu.

Victoria flu caused at least 11,000 unexpected deaths in the early months of 1976. Because of that epidemic, scientists believe that a large segment of the population is now immune to the virus and that this could mean fewer cases this year than last.

In related developments, representative Paul Rogers, D-Fla, chairman of the House Subcommittee on health and environment, has had the General Accounting Office, Congress' watchdog agency, look into the problems of the suspended swine flu immunization program. Rogers has announced that he may hold hearings when the accounting office's report is completed in March.

Rep. John Mosa, D-Cal., chairman of the House oversight and investigations subcommittee, is planning such hearings, too. Among the problems both committees are probing are possible cost overruns and the fact that the government has not yet signed contracts with the four drug manufacturers from which it bought the flu vaccines.

Chicago transit officials blame 'El' motorman, 34, for crash killing 11

CHICAGO (AP) — City transit officials blamed a 34-year-old motorman Saturday for a rush-hour elevated train collision that killed 11 persons and injured 200.

James McDonough, chairman of the Chicago Transit Authority, said the Loop elevated train system remains safe for commuters despite the collision that sent cars and passengers plummeting onto a downtown street. Some riders were buried under tons of twisted metal.

As federal and local investigations opened an investigation into the latest tragedy on the accident-plagued Loop "El," which was constructed in the 1890s, McDonough said at a news conference that safety equipment installed after the last serious crash remains in proper working order.

Although he blamed motorman Stephen Martin, who remained in serious condition in a hospital, McDonough refused to say precisely what the driver of the train had done wrong. He said investigators questioned Martin and the answers convinced him the problem was "man failure."

Federal investigators later said that the motorman may have violated CTA rules by failing to notify the CTA controller when he proceeded despite a flashing red light in his cab.

When there is a steady red light, the motorman is required to come to a complete stop; but a flashing red light allows the motorman to move ahead at a speed under 15 miles per hour after contacting the controller, officials said.

Martin apparently stopped for the steady warning light, but then started moving on the flashing signal without notifying the controller, federal investigators said.

Kay Bailey, who is heading the federal probe, said she was told by CTA authorities that the train was traveling about 10 mph when the collision occurred.

The federal inspection team had not yet determined whether the warning light in Martin's cab was functioning properly or whether his visibility was hindered at the time of the accident.

Meanwhile, Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., told reporters the wreck should hasten the replacement of the "El," which has been troubled by a series of major accidents over the years.

Percy said the tragedy should add impetus for action on a five-year-old plan to tear down the elevated tracks that circle the downtown district and put in a subway system.

Chicago's elevated trains and subways are the main mode of transportation to work for hundreds of thousands of workers.

Asked about the possibility of criminal charges being filed in connection with the crash, CTA spokesman Tom Buck replied: "It's not under consideration at all."

IRS gives facelift to plastic surgery

Franklyn says one contributing factor is that a facelift is a much easier procedure these days.

"MOST OF OUR surgery now is simple and fast, which appeals to the public," says Franklyn.

With the use of local anesthetic, Franklyn claims he can do a facelift in 30 minutes, a breast enlargement in nine minutes and a nose reduction in 10 to 12 minutes.

A few years ago, a facelift took a minimum of four hours on the operating table and several days of hospitalization. Franklyn, who operates at his "Beauty Pavilion" on Hollywood's busy Sunset Strip, sends patients home the same day.

"Theoretically, a girl can come in flatchested at 9 a.m. and leave with a brand new chest at 10 o'clock," says Franklyn. In practice, patients are kept under observation for several hours before being released.

The ease of such operations, says Franklyn, has encouraged patients to begin alterations early. Many women in their 30s have undergone Franklyn's "mini-lift," which involves a small incision at the scalp line to pick up drooping cheeks. The operation, which Franklyn calls "a little pick-me-up," is most popular among actresses, he says, "female stars who don't look as good at 37 as they did at 25."

OTHER PLASTIC surgeons confirmed that new methods have sliced large amounts of time off cosmetic operations to the patient's benefit. Quick surgery, they say, results in less swelling and discoloration, thus lessening recovery time.

But other time estimates were higher than Franklyn's speed record.

Dr. Richard J. Cavanaugh of Beverly Hills says he still allows about two hours for a full facelift — longer if it's for a man. "One out of every 10 facelifts is done on a man," he said, but men's beards complicate the procedure.

Cavanaugh sends patients from his clinic to a private convalescent hospital for a day or two "to make sure they get adequate care."

A few doctors said they still prefer working at a hospital. But the trend is definitely toward European-style private clinics which offer a more glamorous atmosphere.

Franklyn's circular salon was designed by United Nations architect Oscar Neimeyer and features a skylight in the operating room.

Cavanaugh is preparing to open a new beauty spa at Pala Mesa near San Diego which incorporates tennis, golf, weight reduction and cosmetic surgery.

"SOME OF THE fear that patients have will be played down," says Cavanaugh. "They will be in a less sterile atmosphere where they can hear birds singing."

However, the clinics' big lure is secrecy. Unlike a hospital, there is no chance that a gall bladder patient will spot her neighbor having a facelift.

Obviously, one element of cosmetic surgery has not changed — few patients want the world to know they've been altered. The exception was comedienne Phyllis Diller who bragged about her makeover.

"It's still a hush-hush thing," says Cavanaugh.

Franklyn, who works on many celebrities, says, "Nobody seems to tell anything because they feel people will look at them as artificial. Once a movie star becomes identifiable, they want to keep their features just as they are. We have to keep them young but not scramble their features."

The 58-year-old doctor said his most clandestine encounter was with a TV star who wanted her breasts enlarged with implants of silicone.

"Her manager and press agent came in several times and said they would have to make special arrangements so no one knew she was coming. They swore all the nurses to secrecy. I finally operated on her at midnight on a Sunday," Franklyn recalls.

OTHERS HAVE gone to greater lengths for secrecy. "I've had people engage me to go with them outside the country to operate."

Although he does facelifts and breast implants on "ordinary housewives," Franklyn sees cosmetic surgery as most essential for those in show business and politics — "the personality businesses."

"These people can't afford to grow old gracelessly," says Franklyn. "If you're old in show business, you're out of a job unless you're a character actor. In politics, well, let's just say that one fellow might be President of the United States if he'd gotten a facelift." He said he was referring to Ronald Reagan.

THE NUMBER of babies born remains extremely low, in comparative terms. About 3,159,000 babies were born during the 12 months ending November 1976, the same as during the comparable period of 1975. During the baby boom years, with a far smaller adult population, over 4 million babies a year were born.

For several years now, the crucial "total fertility rate," or the average number of children born to each family, has sagged below the "replacement level" of 2.1. This is the figure at which the population would, after some decades, cease to grow. From the 3.7 children for each family in 1957, the total fertility rate went to 1.8 in 1975.

At the same time, improved medical care has swelled the numbers surviving to old age, pushing the death rate to new lows almost every year. It stood at 8.9 deaths for each 1,000 people in 1975, and advance indications are that it will be at least that low in 1976.

THE DECLINING death rate means a steady expansion of the ranks of the aged. If recent trends persist, the Census Bureau has projected, 17 per cent of Americans, or one in every six, will be over 65 by the year 2030, compared to one in 10 today.

Under these projections, excluding the imponderable of immigration, the population would stabilize by about 2030 with 46 million people over age 65, twice as many as today. The median age of Americans will have climbed from 28.9 this year to 37.3 in 2030. The median age was 16 in 1800.

These projections — they are not predictions — assume that fertility will remain low. Human fertility is notoriously unpredictable, but most American demographers feel the low fertility rates will continue because of the availability of effective contraception, liberalized abortion and divorce laws, postponement of marriage and the changing role of women. One key barometer of future fertility—the average number of children young women expect to have—slid from 3.1 births for each woman in 1967 to 2.4 in 1976.

THE CONSEQUENCES of population shifts are difficult to predict because lifestyles are also affected by taste, innovation and other unpredictable factors.

But it seems safe to assume that a country dominated by the old will need less baby food, toys, school teachers, and maternity wards. And demand should rise for retirement homes, medical care, recreational facilities and entertainment suiting the taste of the elderly. Political life too may be altered, with the needs of the elderly becoming a major issue. The old may control close to a third of the vote.

And unless medicine drastically cuts the mortality of men, the gap in life span between men and women is likely to widen, even though the average person will live longer. Some have suggested, only half jokingly, that bigamy be legalized for elderly men.

AMERICAN business does not seem overly concerned about the aging trend. Some product and service lines will suffer, but on the whole, industrial leaders are optimistic. Vernon Johnson, director of corporate planning at General Mills, which markets not only cereals but also toys, games, sportswear and other products, says that the trend will free more 'discretionary" income for such goods as games and clothing. Many items — say, a Monopoly game — are bought only once no matter how many children a couple has, he observed., "There are some real pluses that offset the minuses of less children," Johnson said.

But if individual industries adapt, what about the economy as a whole? Will an older population be as productive? What will happen to income, consumption, demand for goods? Will there be less mobility? Will a population that has ceased to grow find enough economic growth to encourage investment in capital goods and maintain full employment? Will companies and institutions become more dominated by old people unwilling or unable to change? In short, will the economy stagnate?

ECONOMISTS differ on these questions, but in general American experts are sanguine. The arguments are extremely complex, but the consensus seems to be that any possible decline in average worker output, or productivity, in an older society would not be as damaging as continued population growth.

Indeed, many see clear advantages. Joseph J. Spengler of the University of North Carolina finds little reason to fear unemployment and says productivity should rise because the capital previously used to train new workers could be used to build more factories and machines.

A major concern is that an older society will have less mobility, occupational and geographic. With nearly all workers expected to live to the end of their working years, ambitious talented young people may find their way blocked by a swollen older leadership. At the same time, there is concern that older people are less adaptable, less creative and less innovative, more conservative. Without the pressure of large waves of young people, it is argued, a society will become gray and dreary. Critics of this theory say that countries with older populations, like Sweden, are not particularly conservative. But others find place like Sweden dull, if not conservative.

Danger of 'bends' hospitalizes diver

A Whittier man who ran out of air while scuba diving at a depth of 130 feet, about five miles off Los Angeles Harbor Saturday, was taken to the decompression chamber at Catalina Island for treatment of the bends.

Coast Guard officials said Pat Philpot, 18, was rising to the surface when the air ran out. Philpot shot to the surface near an anchored private boat, but his companion remained at a depth of 10 feet to avoid a buildup of nitrogen in his blood stream, which causes the bends.

The friend, identified as Pat Gibson, of Van Nuys, broadcast an emergency radio call when he surfaced. Philpot was flown by Coast Guard helicopter to the decompression chamber, where he was reported in stable condition.

L.A. cop kills son-in-law in family dispute

Associated Press

A 52-year-old Los Angeles police lieutenant shot and killed his son-in-law during a domestic dispute in Sepulveda Saturday, authorities said.

Police Lt. Charles Higbie identified the officer as Lt. Lynn R. Selby, a veteran of 30 years on the police force. Higbie said Selby apparently became involved in an argument with Maurice Kelly, 46, at Kelly's home.

The investigator reported that Kelly, who was married to the officer's daughter, was armed with a belt.

Higbie said Selby apparently fired five times at his son-in-law, who was pronounced dead on arrival at Northridge Hospital.

Police declined to say what kind of firearm was used, whether Selby was on duty at the time, or if he had been booked for any charge.

U.S. may have to bring back military draft

BY FRANK VAN RIPER
Knight News Service

WASHINGTON — The nation may be heading once again toward a military draft.

At the very least, soaring manpower costs, a shrinking manpower base and dwindling military reserves have rekindled debate over whether the United States can continue relying on volunteers to meet its strategic manpower needs.

"As commander-in-chief, I am determined to have a strong, lean, efficient fighting force," President Carter told the nation last week in his talk from the White House library. Carter did not go into detail, but Defense Secretary Harold Brown seemed to express the prevailing view when he told Senate confirmation hearings that the all-volunteer force is "working as of now . . . but I'm less certain about the future."

ARMED SERVICES Committee chairman John C. Stennis, D-Miss, was even less sanguine. "I'm convinced," Stennis said, "that like it or not, we're going to have to go back to the Selective Service System for obtaining some of our men."

With the advent of the Carter administration, key lawmakers and military experts have begun openly to question the viability of the all-volunteer force. The Senate Armed Services Manpower Subcommittee already is pulling together material for hearings on whether to revive some form of draft machinery.

The subcommittee Chairman, Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., is concerned over the fact that the volunteer service has only barely met its authorized strength (2.1 million men — or a million fewer than during the war years) at a time when conditions were supposed to be ideal to spur enlistments: high unemployment to push young men toward the comparative security of the military; a large number of 18-year-olds and the absence of a shooting war.

WHAT HAPPENS, Nunn asks, if the economy improves and attracts more young men back into the civilian labor market. In addition, statistics confirm that the military services will have to compete harder and harder for a smaller and smaller portion of the population.

Martin Binkin, a senior fellow at the Brookings Institution and an expert on military manpower, notes that "the number of males turning 18 is going to decline 15 per cent from now by 1985 and 25 per cent by 1992." To maintain present force levels and personnel policies, Binkin says that within the next 15 years, "one out of every three qualified and available males would have to volunteer for military service."

Even the staunchest backers of the volunteer concept concede that the absence of a draft has decimated the reserve ranks, includng the Reserve Officers Training program. In 1961, for example, ROTC enrollment hit a high of more than 300,000. By last year, the figure had plummeted to roughly 70,000. The current Reserve force is 1.6 million men, the lowest number since the early 50s.

THE STRATEGIC importance of the Reserve cannot be underestimated, since currently, 60 per cent of the Army's artillery power and 65 per cent of its Army engineer units are Reservists.

When President Nixon, buffeted by protest over one of the most unpopular wars in American history, formally proposed an end to the draft four years ago, congressional liberals warned that the volunteer Army would ultimately become a mercenary force of the black and the poor.

To a degree, their fears have been realized—nearly 30 per cent of the new male recruits now entering the Army are black.

THE QUESTION of money — Can we afford a volunteer Army? — is perhaps the weakest argument against the volunteer force. To be sure, military pay has risen sharply—193 per cent since 1964—but those costs likely will remain whether or not the nation returns to the draft. One Pentagon source said ruefully: "The same politicians who voted the pay raise are now the ones hollering about costs." Although the rate of military pay raises has slowed considerably, there is little likelihood that military pay will be cut. Base pay for a recruit is $374.40 a month.

So where does all this leave the volunteer Army — and the average kid turning 18?

One "given" is that in the event of war, the draft almost certainly will be revived. "The volunteer Army is an Army which could never go to war," said one Senate source, talking only in terms of numbers, not fighting potential.

AS FOR NOW, several alternatives remain. One is to "buy whatever volunteers we need" through even higher pay scales — an unlikely option. Another is to lower the size of the military force. Again, unlikely. Still another alternative offered by Binkin is to expand greatly the role of women. He also suggests lowering physical requirements so that not everyone in uniform need be combat fit.

The final alternative is to reinstitute some form of service requirement on young people. Supporters of this idea talk about revitalizing the Peace Corps or its domestic counterpart, VISTA (Volunteers in Service to America).

But as one expert noted privately: "What happens if everybody, or almost everybody, volunteers to be a forest ranger or something and not a grunt? Then we'd have what amounts to a huge public service jobs program for young people — and a lot of empty barracks."

The military establishment, never all that keen on the volunteer concept, already has urged the White House to seek renewal of the President's authority to order inductions. At Nixon's urging, Congress let that authority lapse as of July 1, 1973.

AS OF NOW, military planners want the authority renewed in order to have a standby draft system, similar to the "random sequence draft" lottery of the Vietnam era. The plan would have 20-year-olds, not 18-year-olds, subjected to an annual lottery to determine in what order they would be called in the event of war.

But Congressional experts warn that if the volunteer Army continues having problems, real thought will be given to reviving the draft lottery to fill peacetime ranks.

"It's political dynamite," said one source close to Sen. Nunn. The source conceded that, currently, there is "no way" that a bill renewing the induction authority could pass Congress. But time, and a dwindling manpower pool, may change all that.

PRESIDENT and Mrs. Carter meet with Adm. and Mrs. Hyman Rickover for an informal luncheon in the White House residential wing Saturday. —AP Wirephoto

Carter, Rickover in reunion

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter had a nostalgic lunch Saturday with the man who was his mentor and who now salutes him as commander-in-chief.

Carter and his wife, Rosalynn, dined with Adm. and Mrs. Hyman Rickover in the secluded residence wing of the White House. Rickover, 77, is considered the father of the nuclear Navy.

Carter spent much of his Navy career in nuclear power development under Rickover.

The admiral has a reputation for being demanding in his desire for excellence from his men.

"Adm. Rickover had a profound effect on my life — perhaps more than anyone except my own parents," Carter wrote in his campaign biography, "Why Not the Best?"

The title of the book is based on an exchange he had with Rickover when the admiral interviewed him for the Navy's nuclear submarine program in the early 1950s.

Carter had graduated from the Naval Academy and sat in a large room with Rickover for more than two hours discussing subjects of Carter's choosing — current events, seamanship, music, literature, naval tactics, electronics and gunnery.

"He began to ask me a series of questions of increasing difficulty," Carter wrote. "In each instance he soon proved that I knew relatively little about the subject I had chosen.

"He always looked right into my eyes, and he never smiled. I was saturated with cold sweat."

Finally, Carter wrote, the admiral asked how he stood in his Naval Academy class — a question Carter thought he could answer with pride.

"Sir, I stood 59th in a class of 820!" Carter said he replied. "I sat back to wait for the congratulations — which never came."

Instead, Rickover asked: "Did you do your best?"

Carter wrote that he was reluctant to admit his human failings but answered nonetheless, "No, sir, I didn't always do my best."

"Why not?" Rickover shot back.

Carter said it was a question "I have never been able to forget or to answer. . . . I sat there for awhile, shaken, and then slowly left the room."

He worked for Rickover until 1953, when he decided to resign from the Navy because "I had only one life to live, and I wanted to live it as a civilian, with a potentially fuller opportunity for varied public service."

Deserter search called too costly

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON — The General Accounting Office says "it makes little sense" to spend millions of dollars hunting down military deserters because most of them eventually are expelled from the armed services anyway.

The GAO suggested that because of this Secretary of Defense Harold Brown re-examine the policy of treating deserters as criminals in peacetime.

The GAO proposed that Brown consider "stopping the apprehension of deserters except when the individual is wanted for some specific purpose, such as another crime or security matter, and discharge them in absentia after they have been absent for a stipulated period."

As an alternative, the GAO said, the Defense Department and the FBI could hold back on "aggressive apprehension efforts" until a deserter has been gone long enough to indicate that he is unlikely to return voluntarily.

The investigators dismissed arguments by military officials that treating deserters as criminals deters other servicemen and women from "going over the hill."

"There is no verifiable evidence that soldiers who do not desert are discouraged from doing so because of fear of becoming a military criminal," the report said.

The study deals with the future, and says nothing about the issue of extending President Carter's pardon of Vietnam-era draft evaders to deserters of that period.

Desertion remains a problem for the armed services even though the war is over and young men no longer are drafted. Officials hope the problem will shrink away if they can improve the quality of volunteers.

The GAO report said the services classified about 84,000 military people as deserters in 1975 and 1976 after they were absent from duty for more than 30 days.

The services spent almost $58 million trying to catch and process these deserters, "only to discharge most of them as unqualified for retention," the study said.

Most deserters do not become "useful soldiers," the investigators found.

Nice raise on way to D.C. elite

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — An elite group of Washington-area families can look forward to March 1 when they'll apparently get a healthy boost in income.

They include the Mondales, the Burgers, the O'Neills and Byrds, the Vances and Browns and the families of other high government officials.

All told, members of Congress, Supreme Court justices, Cabinet members and other top executive department officials and a smattering of other high-level bureaucrats such as the Librarian of Congress will get the pay increases unless Congress rejects them.

Such a rejection appears unlikely.

The planned pay increases would raise salaries of Senate and House members to $57,500 a year from the current $44,600. House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, Vice President Walter F. Mondale and Chief Justice Warren E. Burger would have their salaries increased to $75,000 from $65,500.

All Cabinet members, such as Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance and Defense Secretary Harold Brown, would get $3,000 raises to $66,000, Associate Supreme Court justices would go to $72,000 from $63,000.

Lower federal court judges would get a raise to $54,500 from $42,500, and some 20,000 top civil servants, whose salaries have been frozen at $39,000 for several years, would receive increases of up to $7,900.

Out of all the people who will benefit from the pay raise, one group has a chance to say, "No, thanks." That is Congress, which has until Feb. 19, to reject the recommendation submitted by former President Gerald R. Ford.

Unless the House or Senate votes to reject by that date, the pay increases automatically go into effect.

The Senate voted 56 to 42 last week to table a motion to reject the pay raise. And the House apparently isn't going to vote at all. That was assured when the leadership sent the matter to the Post Office and Civil Service Committee, which plans three days of hearings this week.

Then, before the committee can do anything else, the House will break for its annual Lincoln Day recess.

When the House returns on the 16th, the committee will meet and decide if it wants to recommend that the House reject the pay raise, an action not considered very likely.

But if the committee did recommend rejection, there still wouldn't be enough time to bring the matter to a vote on the House floor before the Feb. 19 deadline.

Under the House rules, matters reported to the full House for a vote must lay over for three days after the report has been printed in order to give members ample time to study the measure.

So, by its silence, the House indirectly will give final approval to the controversial salary measure.

There was anything but silence in the Senate when the matter came up.

Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., a long-time foe of congressional pay raises, joined the other side on this one.

Byrd noted that members of Congress had received one 5 per cent cost of living pay increase since 1969, a period in which the actual cost of living has increased 40 per cent.

"I realize that it is difficult for each of us here to vote for a pay increase," Byrd told the Senate. ". . . But unless we face up to situation, this is a crisis in government that will continue to grow.

'Disturbed' doctors

ATLANTA (AP) — The medical profession must continue efforts to identify and treat the 17,000 "psychiatrically disturbed" physicians in the United States, the president of the American Medical Association says.

Dr. Richard E. Palmer told doctors at the AMA's second National Conference on the Impaired Physician that the profession should continue such efforts as part of a commitment to the public welfare.

The conference, which began Friday, is concerned with programs and treatment used to help physicians who are unable to practice medicine because of physical or mental disabilities.

Palmer said impaired physicians often are victims of tensions and stresses.

Warning on world groups

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Senate committee said Saturday the United States should firmly oppose international organizations that small countries use to promote their own political causes.

In some cases the United States should withdraw its membership and money from such organizations, the report said.

"Members have used international institutions to legitimize and support favored causes such as the Palestine Liberation Organization and to embarrass and condemn governments they oppose," the Government Operations Committee said in a report.

"We must be firm in our opposition to the wrongful use of such organizations to promote political or ideological causes. Where U.S. efforts encounter only abuse, we should withdraw from the organization," it concluded.

In 1975, the U.S. contributed more than $1 billion to about 65 international groups like the United Nations Development Program and the North Pacific Fur Seal Commission, the committee said.

THEIR operations affect things as varied as the price Americans pay for coffee, the cleanliness of beaches and the safety of airlines.

Chairman Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., said the report was issued in preparation for hearings next month on the U.S. role in these organizations.

The report said the United States has given these organizations low priority and that has encouraged "other countries to believe that they may take positions hostile to the United States in the organizations with little or no consequences."

It also questioned the effectiveness of some of the groups and said major problems include:

—Rapid and unsystematic growth in the number of international organizations, causing duplication.

—Absence of effective coordination within the U.N. of the activities sponsored by its numerous organizations.

—"Excessive salary levels" for groups like the International Monetary Fund, World Bank and U.N. specialized agencies.

—The apparent reluctance of organizations to evaluate their own activities or adopt modern management techniques that would eliminate ineffective programs and excessive bureaucracies.

Involvement in these groups provides the U.S. with a chance "to resolve important problems in an increasingly interdependent world, such as in the areas of energy, the environment and the safeguarding of nuclear material," the report said.

"But this does not mean that our policy towards all international organizations should be the same, or that we in fact should support each and every international organization."

Let's have party, says Reagan

By DON McLEOD
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON — Ronald Reagan called Saturday night for a "New Republican Party," rebuilt on conservative principles and shed of its country club image.

"My friends," Reagan told the Conservative Political Action Conference, "the time has come to start acting to bring about the great conservative majority party we know is waiting to be created."

Although some of the ideas in his speech at a "Salute to Ronald and Nancy Reagan" dinner had been floated earlier, it was the first comprehensive presentation of his blueprint for the conservative future and his strongest personal assertion of leadership since his presidential campaign died just short of nomination last August.

REAGAN SAID the answer for conservatives is not to start a third party but to seize and restructure the GOP.

"I believe the political success of the principles we believe in can best be achieved in the Republican Party," Reagan said. "I believe the Republican Party can and should provide the political mechanism through which the goals of the majority of Americans can be achieved.

"For one thing," he said in his text, "the biggest single grouping of conservatives is to be found in that party. It makes more sense to build on that grouping than to break it up and start over.

"Rather than start a third party, we can have a new first party made up of people who share our principles."

Reagan has suggested that the Republicans look for a new name, but he said in the meantime he would call the dreamed of conservative majority "The New Republican Party."

"The New Republican Party I envision will not, and cannot, be one limited to the country club-big business image that it is burdened with today," the former California governor said.

"The New Republican Party I am speaking about is going to have room for the man and woman in the factories, for the farmer, for the cop on the beat and the millions of Americans who may never have thought of joining our party before but whose interests coincide with those represented by principled Republicans," he said.

REAGAN also said the foundation of the new version of the party should be the conservative platform which his followers hammered through the 1976 Republican convention.

Reagan pictured a political majority built on a grass-roots, populist conservatism, resting on economic rugged individualism, an aversion to social engineering and a demand for military strength.

Despite his call for high principle and doctrinal purity, Reagan said he does "not view the new revitalized Republican Party as one based on a principle of exclusion."

"After all," he said, "you do not get to be a majority party by searching for groups you won't associate or work with. Conservatism is not a narrow ideology nor is it the exclusive property of conservative activists. We are not a cult. We are members of a majority. Let's act and talk like it."

EARLIER, former New York Sen. James Buckley, who won as a Conservative and lost as a Republican, also told the conference that the Republican Party is still the only practical vehicle to conservative victory.

"It is no exaggeration to say that nearly every important issue of the present time is an issue which a majority of Americans perceive as requiring a conservative solution based on solid conservative principles," he said.

Buckley said the winning campaign themes of government restraint and efficiency used by President Carter and other Democrats last year were conservative ideas which Democrats put to better use.

"It is not enough to invent better mousetraps," Buckley said. "They must be marketed.

Byrd finds 'problems' with Warnke choice

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Democratic Leader Robert Byrd withheld support Saturday of President Carter's nomination of Paul Warnke as the nation's chief arms control negotiator and said there are "some problems with the nomination."

Byrd said he would not decide whether to vote for Senate confirmation "until Mr. Warnke has his day in court" at confirmation hearings.

"There are some problems, and Mr. Carter is aware of that," the West Virginia senator told newsmen.

"He is viewed by some senators as soft on arms negotiation matters," Byrd said. "But, as of today, the nomination probably would be confirmed."

Hearings will begin Tuesday before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Belfast gets Mafia-style 'protection'

By JAMES O. JACKSON
Knight News Service

BELFAST — Seven years of bombs and bullets have made terrorism a profitable business in Northern Ireland, and the country's men of violence are setting up rackets that bear a chilling resemblance to Mafia operations elsewhere in the world.

Members of the Provisional Irish Republican Army (Provos), as well as Protestant extremist groups, are involved in protection rackets in such bomb-prone cities as Belfast. The Provos also are setting up in legitimate businesses, including taxicabs, butcher shops and bars.

On both sides of the battle lines, armed paramilitary groups are developing "Godfather"-like systems of "justice" in which loyalty is the creed and silence is the law. Punishment, in many cases, is death—and the beleaguered British troops and police have not been able to do much about it.

"These guys are taking over the functions of police, courts and Parliament," a Belfast journalist said. "People are beginning to look on them as the government for their neighborhoods, and that's about the most worrisome development here since the troubles began."

Although the Mafia comparison may be partly inaccurate, a number of Ulster officials have begun to speak of "gangsterism" and to point out the similarities between the Mafia and Northern Irish terrorism.

"They both grew out of fear, poverty and distrust of authority," an official remarked. "They are very religious and puritanical—at the start, anyway— and they have at least tacit support from their communities. And there's tradition — the Mafia's Sicilian background, and here the IRA traditions going back 50 years."

Like the Mafia in America, the Provisional IRA in Belfast is moving into legitimate businesses which provide both a front for underground activity and a source of income for the organization. All along the Falls Road, which runs through the heart of Provo-controlled Belfast, terrorist economic activity is in evidence.

Two butcher shops are owned by the Andersonstown Co-op, which is the commercial wing of the Provisional IRA. The shops are protected against bombing attacks by Provo men, and they are supplied with meat under Provo protection. In Belfast it is generally agreed, among both Catholics and Protestants, that the best cuts of meat in the city can be found at the two shops.

Another thriving Provo enterprise is the Suffolk Inn, an Andersonstown bar, restaurant, and night club complex that is owned by the co-op.

"It does a tremendous business because it's one of the very few night spots left in Belfast, and people know that it's well protected by the Provos," a businessman said.

The Provisionals also control the so-called black taxis, some 150 taxicabs that carry passengers between the Catholic neighborhoods and the city center. Because terrorists regularly destroy buses in those areas, the black taxis have filled the need for public transportation and at the same time provide jobs and income for the Provisionals.

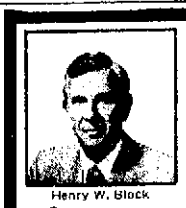

"I wouldn't care to take a survey among the drivers," a journalist said. "But I would estimate that about half of them are either former internees or men who have been convicted of terrorist offenses."

In addition to their commercial operations, the Belfast paramilitary groups carry out a kind of primitive police function. Persons accused of petty theft, drug peddling and some forms of sexual misconduct are frequently "tried" by terrorist courts. Punishment is immediate and severe, usually a beating or a "kneecap job" in which terrorists shoot victims in one or both kneecaps.

Dissident near death

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Dissident Yugoslav writer Mihajlo Mihajlov is near death as a result of a hunger strike in his prison cell in Belgrade, the Italian branch of Amnesty International said Saturday.

The organization, in a letter published in the Milan newspaper Corriere della Sera, said Mihajlov "began a hunger strike last December, and now we have learned that he is dying in the prison of Sremska Mitrovica."

Russians see red over news of rising prices

By DAVID SATTER
Knight News Service

Claim of inflation-proof society doesn't hold

MOSCOW — Russians are reacting with black anger and streams of curses to the news that major price increases go into effect April 1.

Unlike Americans, who accept inflation as only a little less inevitable than death and taxes, Russians are told continually that Soviet society eliminates such capitalist evils as rising prices and unemployment.

So when it was announced last month that cab fares would go up 100 per cent, air fares would increase by approximately 20 per cent and sea and river transport and made-to-measure suits also would be more expensive, the reaction of many Russians was that they were being unfairly squeezed.

"In your country when prices go up," said Volodya M., a physicist in his late 50s, "salaries go up too. But in some Soviet professions, salaries haven't been increased in years."

There had been rumors since last summer that major price increases were on the way, but Russians, wise to the ways of their government, realized the rumors were true when the press announced in December that the government was increasing salaries.

The salary increases averaged 4 rubles ($5.32) a week.

For 31 million low-and middle-income employes, they were presented as another step forward in improving the Soviet citizen's standard of living.

ON CLOSER examination, however, it was clear that the salary increases only took immediate effect in the far north, far east, and Siberia and were consistent with the established Soviet policy of paying differentials to attract workers to cold and remote areas.

The price increases, however, apply uniformly throughout the Soviet Union and will go into effect this spring.

The reaction of the Soviet public was angry and swift.

"Khrushchev said he would have communism by 1980," said one disgruntled young father bitterly, "yet our life gets worse and worse."

On the street, people grumbled about the increases, which were the first announced major price increases for basic services or commodities for many years, and said that they feared that more increases were on the way.

"Believe me," said one young secretary, "This is just the beginning."

THE NEWS of price increases had a demoralizing effect in part because the Soviet claim to be an inflation-free society contains a great amount of truth. Prices have increased less than 2 per cent a year, according to Soviet statistics, and almost all basic costs such as for food, municipal transport, rent and utilities have not risen in decades.

This, however, does not mean that the Soviet Union is a shopper's paradise. The average wage in the Soviet Union now stands at about 150 rubles (about $200) a month, and a new winter coat can easily cost that much. A new Soviet "Zhiguli" automobile costs an average Soviet citizen four years' salary.

When the price increases were announced, Nikolai Glushkov, the chairman of the State Committee on Prices, said they were necessary because the additional cost of re-equipping the taxi fleet, civil aviation and the sea and river fleets had caused many enterprises to operate at a loss.

SUCH logic would appeal to any capitalist, but the difficulty with such reasoning, at least as far as the Soviet consumer is concerned, is that it can be extended indefinitely. The prices of many goods in the Soviet Union are kept artificially low last year, the government spent 19 billion rubles, for example, to subsidize the sale of meat and milk at stable retail prices.

If the Soviets decide to begin applying a little capitalist logic to other areas of the economy, perceptible inflation could become even more worrying in the Soviet Union than it is in the West because it would erode the floor of stable prices on which hopes for better Soviet living standards always have been based.

In that case, Soviet consumers might have to learn to fulfill the expectations of a Moscow cabbie who, when asked how he thought people would react to the new double cab fares said, "They'll get used to it."

Flu spurt may resurrect shots

By JUDITH RANDAL
Knight News Service

WASHINGTON — An outbreak of A-Victoria influenza in a Florida nursing home has led Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph Califano, Jr. to call an emergency meeting of scientists Monday to consider whether flu immunization programs should be resumed.

There have been 57 cases of the Victoria infection among the 176 residents and staff of the Treasure Island Nursing Home in Northeast Miami since Jan 26. Although three of the elderly residents have died in that period, scientists have not pinpointed the flu virus as the cause.

One of the patients was 105 and another 98. The age of the third victim was not available. The federal Center for Disease Control in Atlanta said that there have been no outbreaks of A-Victoria flu elsewhere.

Government immunization programs against all types of influenza have been suspended since Dec. 16 because of the possible link between the shots and the later risk of a paralyzing disorder known as the Guillain-Barre syndrome. However, those doctors wishing their patients to be immunized have been able to get vaccines; providing that those given the shots sign consent forms telling them of the risk. All the vaccine manufactured for the prevention of A-Victoria flu has been combined with vaccine against swine flu.

Victoria flu caused at least 11,000 unexpected deaths in the early months of 1976. Because of that epidemic, scientists believe that a large segment of the population is now immune to the virus and that this could mean fewer cases this year than last.

In related developments, representative Paul Rogers, D-Fla, chairman of the House Subcommittee on health and environment, has had the General Accounting Office, Congress' watchdog agency, look into the problems of the suspended swine flu immunization program. Rogers has announced that he may hold hearings when the accounting office's report is completed in March.

Rep. John Mosa, D-Cal., chairman of the House oversight and investigations subcommittee, is planning such hearings, too. Among the problems both committees are probing are possible cost overruns and the fact that the government has not yet signed contracts with the four drug manufacturers from which it bought the flu vaccines.

THE NUMBER of babies born remains extremely low, in comparative terms. About 3,159,000 babies were born during the 12 months ending November 1976, the same as during the comparable period of 1975. During the baby boom years, with a far smaller adult population, over 4 million babies a year were born.

For several years now, the crucial "total fertility rate," or the average number of children born to each family, has sagged below the "replacement level" of 2.1. This is the figure at which the population would, after some decades, cease to grow. From the 3.7 children for each family in 1957, the total fertility rate went to 1.8 in 1975.

At the same time, improved medical care has swelled the numbers surviving to old age, pushing the death rate to new lows almost every year. It stood at 8.9 deaths for each 1,000 people in 1975, and advance indications are that it will be at least that low in 1976.

THE DECLINING death rate means a steady expansion of the ranks of the aged. If recent trends persist, the Census Bureau has projected, 17 per cent of Americans, or one in every six, will be over 65 by the year 2030, compared to one in 10 today.

Under these projections, excluding the imponderable of immigration, the population would stabilize by about 2030 with 46 million people over age 65, twice as many as today. The median age of Americans will have climbed from 28.9 this year to 37.3 in 2030. The median age was 16 in 1800.

These projections — they are not predictions — assume that fertility will remain low. Human fertility is notoriously unpredictable, but most American demographers feel the low fertility rates will continue because of the availability of effective contraception, liberalized abortion and divorce laws, postponement of marriage and the changing role of women. One key barometer of future fertility—the average number of children young women expect to have—slid from 3.1 births for each woman in 1967 to 2.4 in 1976.

THE CONSEQUENCES of population shifts are difficult to predict because lifestyles are also affected by taste, innovation and other unpredictable factors.

But it seems safe to assume that a country dominated by the old will need less baby food, toys, school teachers, and maternity wards. And demand should rise for retirement homes, medical care, recreational facilities and entertainment suiting the taste of the elderly. Political life too may be altered, with the needs of the elderly becoming a major issue. The old may control close to a third of the vote.

And unless medicine drastically cuts the mortality of men, the gap in life span between men and women is likely to widen, even though the average person will live longer. Some have suggested, only half jokingly, that bigamy be legalized for elderly men.

AMERICAN business does not seem overly concerned about the aging trend. Some product and service lines will suffer, but on the whole, industrial leaders are optimistic. Vernon Johnson, director of corporate planning at General Mills, which markets not only cereals but also toys, games, sportswear and other products, says that the trend will free more 'discretionary" income for such goods as games and clothing. Many items — say, a Monopoly game — are bought only once no matter how many children a couple has, he observed. "There are some real pluses that offset the minuses of less children," Johnson said.

But if individual industries adapt, what about the economy as a whole? Will an older population be as productive? What will happen to income, consumption, demand for goods? Will there be less mobility? Will a population that has ceased to grow find enough economic growth to encourage investment in capital goods and maintain full employment? Will companies and institutions become more dominated by old people unwilling or unable to change? In short, will the economy stagnate?

ECONOMISTS differ on these questions, but in general American experts are sanguine. The arguments are extremely complex, but the consensus seems to be that any possible decline in average worker output, or productivity, in an older society would not be as damaging as continued population growth.

Indeed, many see clear advantages. Joseph J. Spengler of the University of North Carolina finds little reason to fear unemployment and says productivity should rise because the capital previously used to train new workers could be used to build more factories and machines.

A major concern is that an older society will have less mobility, occupational and geographic. With nearly all workers expected to live to the end of their working years, ambitious talented young people may find their way blocked by a swollen older leadership. At the same time, there is concern that older people are less adaptable, less creative and less innovative, more conservative. Without the pressure of large waves of young people, it is argued, a society will become gray and dreary. Critics of this theory say that countries with older populations, like Sweden, are not particularly conservative. But others find place like Sweden dull, if not conservative.

Danger of 'bends' hospitalizes diver

A Whittier man who ran out of air while scuba diving at a depth of 130 feet, about five miles off Los Angeles Harbor Saturday, was taken to the decompression chamber at Catalina Island for treatment of the bends.

Coast Guard officials said Pat Philpot, 18, was rising to the surface when the air ran out. Philpot shot to the surface near an anchored private boat, but his companion remained at a depth of 10 feet to avoid a buildup of nitrogen in his blood stream, which causes the bends.

The friend, identified as Pat Gibson, of Van Nuys, broadcast an emergency radio call when he surfaced. Philpot was flown by Coast Guard helicopter to the decompression chamber, where he was reported in stable condition.

L.A. cop kills son-in-law in family dispute

Associated Press

A 52-year-old Los Angeles police lieutenant shot and killed his son-in-law during a domestic dispute in Sepulveda Saturday, authorities said.

Police Lt. Charles Higbie identified the officer as Lt. Lynn R. Selby, a veteran of 30 years on the police force. Higbie said Selby apparently became involved in an argument with Maurice Kelly, 46, at Kelly's home.

The investigator reported that Kelly, who was married to the officer's daughter, was armed with a belt.

Higbie said Selby apparently fired five times at his son-in-law, who was pronounced dead on arrival at Northridge Hospital.

Police declined to say what kind of firearm was used, whether Selby was on duty at the time, or if he had been booked for any charge.

Chicago transit officials blame 'El' motorman, 34, for crash killing 11

CHICAGO (AP) — City transit officials blamed a 34-year-old motorman Saturday for a rush-hour elevated train collision that killed 11 persons and injured 200.

James McDonough, chairman of the Chicago Transit Authority, said the Loop elevated train system remains safe for commuters despite the collision that sent cars and passengers plummeting onto a downtown street. Some riders were buried under tons of twisted metal.

As federal and local investigations opened an investigation into the latest tragedy on the accident-plagued Loop "El," which was constructed in the 1890s, McDonough said at a news conference that safety equipment installed after the last serious crash remains in proper working order.

Although he blamed motorman Stephen Martin, who remained in serious condition in a hospital, McDonough refused to say precisely what the driver of the train had done wrong. He said investigators questioned Martin and the answers convinced him the problem was "man failure."

Federal investigators later said that the motorman may have violated CTA rules by failing to notify the CTA controller when he proceeded despite a flashing red light in his cab.

When there is a steady red light, the motorman is required to come to a complete stop; but a flashing red light allows the motorman to move ahead at a speed under 15 miles per hour after contacting the controller, officials said.

Martin apparently stopped for the steady warning light, but then started moving on the flashing signal without notifying the controller, federal investigators said.

Kay Bailey, who is heading the federal probe, said she was told by CTA authorities that the train was traveling about 10 mph when the collision occurred.

The federal inspection team had not yet determined whether the warning light in Martin's cab was functioning properly or whether his visibility was hindered at the time of the accident.

Meanwhile, Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., told reporters the wreck should hasten the replacement of the "El," which has been troubled by a series of major accidents over the years.

Percy said the tragedy should add impetus for action on a five-year-old plan to tear down the elevated tracks that circle the downtown district and put in a subway system.

Chicago's elevated trains and subways are the main mode of transportation to work for hundreds of thousands of workers.

Asked about the possibility of criminal charges being filed in connection with the crash, CTA spokesman Tom Buck replied: "It's not under consideration at all."

Franklyn says one contributing factor is that a facelift is a much easier procedure these days.

"MOST OF OUR surgery now is simple and fast, which appeals to the public," says Franklyn.

With the use of local anesthetic, Franklyn claims he can do a facelift in 30 minutes, a breast enlargement in nine minutes and a nose reduction in 10 to 12 minutes.

A few years ago, a facelift took a minimum of four hours on the operating table and several days of hospitalization. Franklyn, who operates at his "Beauty Pavilion" on Hollywood's busy Sunset Strip, sends patients home the same day.

"Theoretically, a girl can come in flatchested at 9 a.m. and leave with a brand new chest at 10 o'clock," says Franklyn. In practice, patients are kept under observation for several hours before being released.

The ease of such operations, says Franklyn, has encouraged patients to begin alterations early. Many women in their 30s have undergone Franklyn's "mini-lift," which involves a small incision at the scalp line to pick up drooping cheeks. The operation, which Franklyn calls "a little pick-me-up," is most popular among actresses, he says, "female stars who don't look as good at 37 as they did at 25."

OTHER PLASTIC surgeons confirmed that new methods have sliced large amounts of time off cosmetic operations to the patient's benefit. Quick surgery, they say, results in less swelling and discoloration, thus lessening recovery time.

But other time estimates were higher than Franklyn's speed record.

Dr. Richard J. Cavanaugh of Beverly Hills says he still allows about two hours for a full facelift — longer if it's for a man. "One out of every 10 facelifts is done on a man," he said, but men's beards complicate the procedure.

Cavanaugh sends patients from his clinic to a private convalescent hospital for a day or two "to make sure they get adequate care."

A few doctors said they still prefer working at a hospital. But the trend is definitely toward European-style private clinics which offer a more glamorous atmosphere.

Franklyn's circular salon was designed by United Nations architect Oscar Neimeyer and features a skylight in the operating room.

Cavanaugh is preparing to open a new beauty spa at Pala Mesa near San Diego which incorporates tennis, golf, weight reduction and cosmetic surgery.

"SOME OF THE fear that patients have will be played down," says Cavanaugh. "They will be in a less sterile atmosphere where they can hear birds singing."

However, the clinics' big lure is secrecy. Unlike a hospital, there is no chance that a gall bladder patient will spot her neighbor having a facelift.

Obviously, one element of cosmetic surgery has not changed — few patients want the world to know they've been altered. The exception was comedienne Phyllis Diller who bragged about her makeover.

"It's still a hush-hush thing," says Cavanaugh.

Franklyn, who works on many celebrities, says, "Nobody seems to tell anything because they feel people will look at them as artificial. Once a movie star becomes identifiable, they want to keep their features just as they are. We have to keep them young but not scramble their features."

The 58-year-old doctor said his most clandestine encounter was with a TV star who wanted her breasts enlarged with implants of silicone.

"Her manager and press agent came in several times and said they would have to make special arrangements so no one knew she was coming. They swore all the nurses to secrecy. I finally operated on her at midnight on a Sunday," Franklyn recalls.

OTHERS HAVE gone to greater lengths for secrecy. "I've had people engage me to go with them outside the country to operate."

Although he does facelifts and breast implants on "ordinary housewives," Franklyn sees cosmetic surgery as most essential for those in show business and politics — "the personality businesses."

"These people can't afford to grow old gracelessly," says Franklyn. "If you're old in show business, you're out of a job unless you're a character actor. In politics, well, let's just say that one fellow might be President of the United States if he'd gotten a facelift." He said he was referring to Ronald Reagan.

Summary of Secret Witness cases, rewards

The Independent, Press-Telegram's Secret Witness program has resulted in the arrest of 69 criminal suspects and fugitives from justice since the program was inaugurated on June 10, 1972, with rewards totaling $48,000 paid or committed on conviction of suspects waiting trial. Additional reward money available for informants is specified in the case list below, one of the selected and varying summaries of 10 Secret Witness cases printed in the Independent and Press-Telegram each Sunday and Thursday.

Cases are dropped from the summaries from time to time, but rewards will remain in effect until such cases have been closed by police or until notification in print that reward offers have been withdrawn.

Rewards also will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of suspects in any other major criminal cases, whether covered in these summaries or not, and for the apprehension of fugitives from justice. These rewards will vary in amount depending on the seriousness of the offense.

To insure eligibility for Secret Witness rewards, informants are required to channel all information DIRECTLY through Secret Witness — that is, to notify Secret Witness FIRST — either by calling the special Secret Witness telephone number or by writing to the I,P-T Secret Witness Editor.

In cases in which outside organizations or individuals pledge additional rewards to that guaranteed by Secret Witness, the Independent, Press-Telegram assumes responsibility for payment only of that amount guaranteed by Secret Witness.

Today's summaries follow:

— Rewards totaling $6,000 to $12,000, depending on the offense, will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of persons responsible for the disappearance of Long Beach businessman Evan Allan Snider, 34, last seen Oct. 22 when he was checking on some property he owned on Cedar Avenue. Secret Witness guarantees a $1,000 reward for a kidnap conviction and $2,000 for a murder conviction. The victim's father, Dr. Allan Snider, has pledged $5,000 for a kidnap conviction and $10,000 for a murder conviction.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of 38-year-old Henry Quezada, of Compton, shot and killed by an unknown assailant as he was changing a tire on his car at Acacia and Rosecrans Avenues in Compton at 9:30 p.m. on Dec. 31, 1976.

— A $500 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest of fugitives Samuel Law, 23, and Robert Gary Lewis, 23, both formerly of Compton, sought in connection with the slaying of Lavern Speer, 50, who was shot to death execution-style before the eyes of his wife and young son after two bandits accosted them as they were getting out of their car in a parking lot next to their Elm Avenue apartment at 7:15 p.m. on Nov. 2, 1976. If a murder conviction results from the arrests, the informant will be eligible for an additional $1,500 reward.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the street robber who shot and fatally wounded 72-year-old Jeanette Glade, of Long Beach, while attempting to take her purse on Burnett Street near Pasadena Avenue at 8:30 p.m. on Aug. 8, 1976. Mrs. Glade died on Sept. 31 as a result of her wound.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Raymond E. Lamphear, 49, stabbed to death by two young men in an apparent robbery attack as he was walking on Raymond Avenue at Anaheim Street near his home at 9 p.m. June 30, 1976.

— A $1,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and manslaughter conviction of the hit-run driver who struck and killed Alexander Burdelas, 53, of Norwalk, at the intersection of San Antonio Drive and Firestone Boulevard in Norwalk at 1 p.m. Sept. 27, 1975. The hit-run car was described as a 1964 light-colored Pontiac with chrome rims.

— A $500 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest of fugitive Charles Mack, 23, wanted in connection with a series of apartment house armed robberies throughout the Southland since last February, with bodily injury suffered in two of the robberies and the rape of a woman manager in another. Mack is a black man, 5 feet 9 inches tall, 150 pounds, with black hair and brown eyes. In the event he is convicted on armed robbery charges, the Secret Witness providing information leading to his capture will be eligible for an additional $500 reward.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the slayers of George W. Harrison, 50-year-old chef at Peppy's Steak House in San Pedro, found stabbed to death in his home on S. Pacific Avenue in San Pedro at 7 p.m. on Aug. 22, 1975.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of 30-year-old Bernadine Lewis, of Anaheim, last seen alive at 4 p.m. Jan 30, 1975, when she left a bar at 2299 E. Anaheim St. in Long Beach with a man about 35 years old. Her nude and battered body was found in a trash can in Venice three weeks later. The man sought for questioning is about 5 feet 10 inches, 180 pounds, and speaks French as a second language.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Robert George Zeiger, 18-year-old clerk who was killed by a shotgun blast during a holdup at the Red Carpet Liquor Store, 85 Alamitos Ave., on Oct. 13, 1975.

S.F. officials guarded after car bomb blast

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A tight web of police security was drawn Saturday around members of the Board of Supervisors and Dist. Atty. Joseph Freitas, as police launched a dragnet for the underground revolutionaries who bombed Freitas' car.

Plainclothesmen, backed up by police radio cars, were staked out at the homes of potential targets for the terrorists, police said.

Police were reluctant to disclose details of the security measures, but termed the precautions the most stringent in local history.

Police guards were posted at all the entrances of City Hall Friday, after an anonymous caller warned a bomb was planted in the building. No explosive was found.

The beefed-up security effort came in the wake of the predawn explosion Friday that wrecked the car parked in the driveway of the Freitas home and startled residents 14 blocks away.

The New World Liberation Front purportedly claimed responsiblity for the bombing in a written communique that warned the district attorney against using NWLF courier Jacques Rogiers as a "scapegoat."

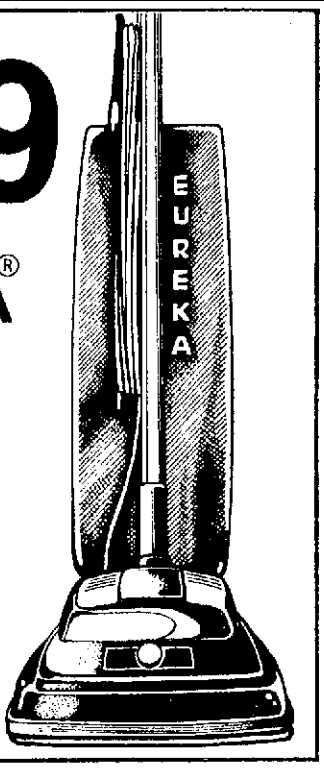

Less than 24 hours before the bombing, a grand jury here had indicted Rogiers on charges of threatening public officials.

The message also threatened several supervisors, declaring, "If necessary, the poor and oppressed will take freedom over your dead bodies."

Freitas said he refused to be intimidated by the attacks and promised those responsible would be arrested and prosecuted.

Freitas, his wife and four children were at home at the time of the blast, but were unharmed.

Nice raise on way to D.C. elite

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — An elite group of Washington-area families can look forward to March 1 when they'll apparently get a healthy boost in income.

They include the Mondales, the Burgers, the O'Neills and Byrds, the Vances and Browns and the families of other high government officials.

All told, members of Congress, Supreme Court justices, Cabinet members and other top executive department officials and a smattering of other high-level bureaucrats such as the Librarian of Congress will get the pay increases unless Congress rejects them.

Such a rejection appears unlikely.

The planned pay increases would raise salaries of Senate and House members to $57,500 a year from the current $44,600. House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, Vice President Walter F. Mondale and Chief Justice Warren E. Burger would have their salaries increased to $75,000 from $65,500.

All Cabinet members, such as Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance and Defense Secretary Harold Brown, would get $3,000 raises to $66,000, Associate Supreme Court justices would go to $72,000 from $63,000.

Lower federal court judges would get a raise to $54,500 from $42,500, and some 20,000 top civil servants, whose salaries have been frozen at $39,000 for several years, would receive increases of up to $7,900.

Out of all the people who will benefit from the pay raise, one group has a chance to say, "No, thanks." That is Congress, which has until Feb. 19, to reject the recommendation submitted by former President Gerald R. Ford.

Unless the House or Senate votes to reject by that date, the pay increases automatically go into effect.

The Senate voted 56 to 42 last week to table a motion to reject the pay raise. And the House apparently isn't going to vote at all. That was assured when the leadership sent the matter to the Post Office and Civil Service Committee, which plans three days of hearings this week.

Then, before the committee can do anything else, the House will break for its annual Lincoln Day recess.

When the House returns on the 16th, the committee will meet and decide if it wants to recommend that the House reject the pay raise, an action not considered very likely.

But if the committee did recommend rejection, there still wouldn't be enough time to bring the matter to a vote on the House floor before the Feb. 19 deadline.

Under the House rules, matters reported to the full House for a vote must lay over for three days after the report has been printed in order to give members ample time to study the measure.

So, by its silence, the House indirectly will give final approval to the controversial salary measure.

There was anything but silence in the Senate when the matter came up.

Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., a long-time foe of congressional pay raises, joined the other side on this one.

Byrd noted that members of Congress had received one 5 per cent cost of living pay increase since 1969, a period in which the actual cost of living has increased 40 per cent.

"I realize that it is difficult for each of us here to vote for a pay increase," Byrd told the Senate. ". . . But unless we face up to situation, this is a crisis in government that will continue to grow.

'Disturbed' doctors

ATLANTA (AP) — The medical profession must continue efforts to identify and treat the 17,000 "psychiatrically disturbed" physicians in the United States, the president of the American Medical Association says.

Dr. Richard E. Palmer told doctors at the AMA's second National Conference on the Impaired Physician that the profession should continue such efforts as part of a commitment to the public welfare.

The conference, which began Friday, is concerned with programs and treatment used to help physicians who are unable to practice medicine because of physical or mental disabilities.

Palmer said impaired physicians often are victims of tensions and stresses.

Warning on world groups

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Senate committee said Saturday the United States should firmly oppose international organizations that small countries use to promote their own political causes.

In some cases the United States should withdraw its membership and money from such organizations, the report said.

"Members have used international institutions to legitimize and support favored causes such as the Palestine Liberation Organization and to embarrass and condemn governments they oppose," the Government Operations Committee said in a report.

"We must be firm in our opposition to the wrongful use of such organizations to promote political or ideological causes. Where U.S. efforts encounter only abuse, we should withdraw from the organization," it concluded.

In 1975, the U.S. contributed more than $1 billion to about 65 international groups like the United Nations Development Program and the North Pacific Fur Seal Commission, the committee said.

THEIR operations affect things as varied as the price Americans pay for coffee, the cleanliness of beaches and the safety of airlines.

Chairman Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., said the report was issued in preparation for hearings next month on the U.S. role in these organizations.

The report said the United States has given these organizations low priority and that has encouraged "other countries to believe that they may take positions hostile to the United States in the organizations with little or no consequences."

It also questioned the effectiveness of some of the groups and said major problems include:

—Rapid and unsystematic growth in the number of international organizations, causing duplication.

—Absence of effective coordination within the U.N. of the activities sponsored by its numerous organizations.

—"Excessive salary levels" for groups like the International Monetary Fund, World Bank and U.N. specialized agencies.

—The apparent reluctance of organizations to evaluate their own activities or adopt modern management techniques that would eliminate ineffective programs and excessive bureaucracies.

Involvement in these groups provides the U.S. with a chance "to resolve important problems in an increasingly interdependent world, such as in the areas of energy, the environment and the safeguarding of nuclear material," the report said.

"But this does not mean that our policy towards all international organizations should be the same, or that we in fact should support each and every international organization."

'Disco' movie

Columbia Pictures, Casablanca Filmworks and Motown Productions have joined to produce "Disco," a movie based on today's recording industry.

Earl Wilson

O.J. is calling himself an actor now

NEW YORK — "When I sign something where I list my occupation," said O.J. Simpson, "I don't write 'football player.' I write 'actor.'

"I'm getting to old to be a football player and I'm tryirg to adjust — I consider myself an actor now. I'm limited as a football player. I don't know what my horizons are as an actor."

The Buffalo Bills' great ground-gainer sat in his suite at the Sherry-Netherland contemplating his new life. He believes his last movie, "The Cassandra Crossing," his fourth, has prepared him to play a lead role and that'll be coming next. "But there are a couple of things I would like to accomplish in football before I quit," he admitted. "First, I'd like to be on a championship team.

"I'D BE disappointed in myself if I didn't break Jim Brown's ground-gained record of 12,000 and something yards. I'm 2,600 yards away from it. I've an average of over 1,500 yards a season. If the Bills do everything right we wouldn't be a championship team till the second year. That would be my last year, the '78 season, when I should break Jim's record."

Football stars suddenly find when they leave football that they're not special people any more. O.J., whose real name is Orenthal James Simpson, wants to continue being special. But he is not studying acting. His first director, Terence Young, warned him not to go to acting school, and his new friend, Lee Strasberg, who appears in "The Cassandra Crossing," agrees.

"Privacy," O.J. said, "Is a football star's problem. I'm away from my family about five months. My wife didn't want me to be an actor because she says they always seem to have love affairs.

"AND THESE young girls do come after you. Stories get around. Maude Adams is a good friend of mine and also of my wife's, yet somebody printed some suspicions.

"My wife," O.J. laughed, "tends to look different at times.

"She fixes her hair different ways. One day an agent phoned my agent and said, 'We saw O.J. out with a young filly. He ought to be more discreet.' I told him. 'That young filly was my wife.' I've been married 10 years and I'm going to be married forever."

O.J. finds himself fitting into the actor atmosphere. He became a pal of Lee Strasberg while shooting the film in Rome. They were seen around the streets of the city, the 6-foot-1, not-yet-30 athlete and the short, mid-70ish inventor of the method school of acting.

"WE WERE an unlikely combination. We walked from one bookstore to another. I never saw anybody buy so many books!"

O.J. has been tempted with starring roles, but he asked himself, "Why do they want me to play the lead? They really want O.J. Simpson. I swore that I would never play the role of an athlete, because it will prolong the image I want to get away from. Finally, now, I believe I am ready for a lead."

He is serious about everything. In football, he wore a beard because he didn't have to think about shaving. He wanted to blot all non-football things out of his mind. Now he sees a chance of playing a boxer in a remake of "Body and Soul," but it is not a story of an athlete as much as of a person, he says.

The phones ring with the calls from a lawyer and an agent about the commercials for an orange juice and a car rental system. He's due back in Hollywood to work on another film, "Capricorn I." He worries about his weight. He keeps it around 210. He decides not to go to Regine's for the evening. Better stay in his suite. "Those girls flirt more than they used to."

Jukes trying to escape Springsteen's shadow

RED BANK, N.J. (AP) — Southside Johnny and the Asbury Jukes have overcome the biggest hurdle facing any new group — becoming nationally known.

Now the Asbury Park, N.J., band is trying to emerge from the shadow of the man responsible for much of that recognition, Bruce Springsteen.

The 10-piece group, fronted by Johnny Lyon, sold 100,000 copies of its first album, better than usual for a new group. But most of the early interest stems from the association with Springsteen, who also came out of Asbury Park and helped the band land a contract, wrote two songs and the liner notes for the first album.

Lyon declines to talk about the connection. The band is cutting its second album and has completed six tracks without Springsteen's help.

The album, due in April, will contain all new material, whereas the rushed first album which contained five cover versions of songs from the 1950s and early '60s.

Lyon, 27, was born in nearby Neptune and grew up with the rhythm and blues of the 1950s and early 1960s. He played in a variety of shore-area bands with Springsteen and Steve Van Zandt before forming the Jukes with Van Zandt last year. "Miami Steve" returned to Springsteen's band, but remains the Jukes' producer.

Belfast gets Mafia-style 'protection'

By JAMES O. JACKSON
Knight News Service

BELFAST — Seven years of bombs and bullets have made terrorism a profitable business in Northern Ireland, and the country's men of violence are setting up rackets that bear a chilling resemblance to Mafia operations elsewhere in the world.

Members of the Provisional Irish Republican Army (Provos), as well as Protestant extremist groups, are involved in protection rackets in such bomb-prone cities as Belfast. The Provos also are setting up in legitimate businesses, including taxicabs, butcher shops and bars.

On both sides of the battle lines, armed paramilitary groups are developing "Godfather"-like systems of "justice" in which loyalty is the creed and silence is the law. Punishment, in many cases, is death—and the beleaguered British troops and police have not been able to do much about it.

"These guys are taking over the functions of police, courts and Parliament," a Belfast journalist said. "People are beginning to look on them as the government for their neighborhoods, and that's about the most worrisome development here since the troubles began."

Although the Mafia comparison may be partly inaccurate, a number of Ulster officials have begun to speak of "gangsterism" and to point out the similarities between the Mafia and Northern Irish terrorism.

"They both grew out of fear, poverty and distrust of authority," an official remarked. "They are very religious and puritanical—at the start, anyway— and they have at least tacit support from their communities. And there's tradition — the Mafia's Sicilian background, and here the IRA traditions going back 50 years."

Like the Mafia in America, the Provisional IRA in Belfast is moving into legitimate businesses which provide both a front for underground activity and a source of income for the organization. All along the Falls Road, which runs through the heart of Provo-controlled Belfast, terrorist economic activity is in evidence.

Two butcher shops are owned by the Andersonstown Co-op, which is the commercial wing of the Provisional IRA. The shops are protected against bombing attacks by Provo men, and they are supplied with meat under Provo protection. In Belfast it is generally agreed, among both Catholics and Protestants, that the best cuts of meat in the city can be found at the two shops.

Another thriving Provo enterprise is the Suffolk Inn, an Andersonstown bar, restaurant, and night club complex that is owned by the co-op.

"It does a tremendous business because it's one of the very few night spots left in Belfast, and people know that it's well protected by the Provos," a businessman said.

The Provisionals also control the so-called black taxis, some 150 taxicabs that carry passengers between the Catholic neighborhoods and the city center. Because terrorists regularly destroy buses in those areas, the black taxis have filled the need for public transportation and at the same time provide jobs and income for the Provisionals.

"I wouldn't care to take a survey among the drivers," a journalist said. "But I would estimate that about half of them are either former internees or men who have been convicted of terrorist offenses."

In addition to their commercial operations, the Belfast paramilitary groups carry out a kind of primitive police function. Persons accused of petty theft, drug peddling and some forms of sexual misconduct are frequently "tried" by terrorist courts. Punishment is immediate and severe, usually a beating or a "kneecap job" in which terrorists shoot victims in one or both kneecaps.

Dissident near death

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Dissident Yugoslav writer Mihajlo Mihajlov is near death as a result of a hunger strike in his prison cell in Belgrade, the Italian branch of Amnesty International said Saturday.

The organization, in a letter published in the Milan newspaper Corriere della Sera, said Mihajlov "began a hunger strike last December, and now we have learned that he is dying in the prison of Sremska Mitrovica."

Russians see red over news of rising prices

Claim of inflation-proof society doesn't hold

By DAVID SATTER
Knight News Service

MOSCOW — Russians are reacting with black anger and streams of curses to the news that major price increases go into effect April 1.

Unlike Americans, who accept inflation as only a little less inevitable than death and taxes, Russians are told continually that Soviet society eliminates such capitalist evils as rising prices and unemployment.

So when it was announced last month that cab fares would go up 100 per cent, air fares would increase by approximately 20 per cent and sea and river transport and made-to-measure suits also would be more expensive, the reaction of many Russians was that they were being unfairly squeezed.

"In your country when prices go up," said Volodya M., a physicist in his late 50s, "salaries go up too. But in some Soviet professions, salaries haven't been increased in years."

There had been rumors since last summer that major price increases were on the way, but Russians, wise to the ways of their government, realized the rumors were true when the press announced in December that the government was increasing salaries.

The salary increases averaged 4 rubles ($5.32) a week.

For 31 million low-and middle-income employes, they were presented as another step forward in improving the Soviet citizen's standard of living.

ON CLOSER examination, however, it was clear that the salary increases only took immediate effect in the far north, far east, and Siberia and were consistent with the established Soviet policy of paying differentials to attract workers to cold and remote areas.

The price increases, however, apply uniformly throughout the Soviet Union and will go into effect this spring.

The reaction of the Soviet public was angry and swift.

"Khrushchev said he would have communism by 1980," said one disgruntled young father bitterly, "yet our life gets worse and worse."

On the street, people grumbled about the increases, which were the first announced major price increases for basic services or commodities for many years, and said that they feared that more increases were on the way.

"Believe me," said one young secretary, "This is just the beginning."

THE NEWS of price increases had a demoralizing effect in part because the Soviet claim to be an inflation-free society contains a great amount of truth. Prices have increased less than 2 per cent a year, according to Soviet statistics, and almost all basic costs such as for food, municipal transport, rent and utilities have not risen in decades.

This, however, does not mean that the Soviet Union is a shopper's paradise. The average wage in the Soviet Union now stands at about 150 rubles (about $200) a month, and a new winter coat can easily cost that much. A new Soviet "Zhiguli" automobile costs an average Soviet citizen four years' salary.

When the price increases were announced, Nikolai Glushkov, the chairman of the State Committee on Prices, said they were necessary because the additional cost of re-equipping the taxi fleet, civil aviation and the sea and river fleets had caused many enterprises to operate at a loss.

SUCH logic would appeal to any capitalist, but the difficulty with such reasoning, at least as far as the Soviet consumer is concerned, is that it can be extended indefinitely. The prices of many goods in the Soviet Union are kept artificially low last year, the government spent 19 billion rubles, for example, to subsidize the sale of meat and milk at stable retail prices.

If the Soviets decide to begin applying a little capitalist logic to other areas of the economy, perceptible inflation could become even more worrying in the Soviet Union than it is in the West because it would erode the floor of stable prices on which hopes for better Soviet living standards always have been based.

In that case, Soviet consumers might have to learn to fulfill the expectations of a Moscow cabbie who, when asked how he thought people would react to the new double cab fares said, "They'll get used to it."

Decadent or not

Moscow is making electronic music

By SETH MYDANS

MOSCOW (AP) —The sign on the door in a small side street reads, "Experimental Studio for Electronic Music." Inside, laser-generated shafts of color play across the room, and a young man in denim and horn-rimmed glassed twists the dials of a sophisticated electronic synthesizer.

"I have the feeling that the Soviet Union is really ready for electronic music, and that nothing is going to hold it back," said American composer John Eaton as he completed a recent concert tour here.

"There's still a government policy that electronic music is too decadent, but they're not going to be able to keep that alive much longer. People are too eager," he said.

Avant-garde music, including music generated by electronic synthesizers, has for many years been officially frowned on in the Soviet Union, and experimental techniques like those being tried in the West are still foreign to most Russians.

But the Electronic Music studio, which has existed quietly in the center of Moscow since 1959, is now bubbling with creative ferment, and the eager reception Eaton found convinced him that Soviet music is on the threshold of a step forward.

"Everywhere I went, there was interest and enthusiasm in my music," said Eaton, who performs with a small synthesizer and with hammers and brushes on the insides of a piano.

"Their questions were not the questions you would expect from someone who had really done work in the field," he said. "But you thought were going to, and rather soon."

Eaton, a music professor at the University of Indiana, was taken to the Moscow studio—the only one of its kind in the country—on the last day of his tour, after playing in Leningrad, Riga and Tallinn.

Although he said the experimental composers here are "about five years behind what we ard doing in the West," he added that he was impressed that in Moscow, where even rock music is still viewed with suspicion, "they are actually doing it, and doing it in a way that's aware of fairly recent developments in the West."

Elsewhere on his tour, where there were no such electronic music studios, Eaton said he came across a "bewildering variety" of new musical work, almost all of which is unknown in the West.

"It ranged from simple melodies after folk songs all the way to pieces very much influenced by Steve Reich and the marijuana composers of the West— the minimal composers."

Delbert Mann to direct 'Trinity'

Associated Press

Delbert Mann, winner of an Academy Award for directing "Marty," will direct the film version of Leon Uris' best-seller "Trinity."

Uris is writing his own screenplay, the first he has done since "Gunfight at the OK Corral" in 1957. Fred Brogger will produce the film, which will be shot in Ireland. "Trinity" concerns the tragedies and hardships of the Irish people.

PSYCHEDELIA'S PETER MAX RETURNS TO WORLD

Knight News Service

NEW YORK — In 1972 the kinetic, frenetic, psychedelic world of Peter Max spun into a mass-marketed, Day-Glo frenzy of pressurized commitments and burst the artist's mind, propelling him from Main Street to seclusion.

"It got to me — within me and around me. I had to retreat to give myself some space to get back to heavy painting and yoga and creating," says Max, who returned to the world's rushing waters little by little last year. "The demands on my body were too great. The celebrity trip was too explosive."

Yep, Peter Max. Remember now? This is the guy whose colorful, kaleidoscopic, fantasy-filled art adorned everything from posters to puzzles, towels to tattoos, clocks to china. This is the man Madison Avenue selected to help sell merchandise to a mind- expanded youth that had come to covet swirling, surreal design.

By the late 1960s, Max was a millionaire.

Now, resurfacing but subdued, Max — sans mustache — is all caution.

"I still love flat colors and blends," Max says. "But now I also like to paint little, intricate things. I spend more time with the paint itself."

YOUR HOROSCOPE by JEANE DIXON

Forecast for Monday

Your birthday today: This year you go on to bigger things. Your starting point can be foreign travel or its symbolic analogy — dawning awareness in which the sense of what you've learned up to now starts to take coherent form. Relationships run recurring cycles of tension, detachment, reallignee. Today's natives show literary talent, tell a fascinating tale, often on behalf of social reform. Those born this year have a gift for politics, the judiciary, finding the right word.

Aries (March 21-April 19): You share reluctance to plunge into work, yet jump right in, talk before thinking on personal and political conflicts. Make amends the best you can.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Experts procrastinate. Complaining does no good. Stay busy while or instead of waiting. Learn details despite distractions from those emotionally involved.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Matters you find amusing might be another person's tragedy; be careful what you say. Enough leverage gets a rush job done. Tonight is quite but very satisfying.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Large projects are sketchily defined. Take preliminary steps in good faith. Show regard for the sensitivity of those who don'tttt understand what's up or why.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): With everyone off on his own ego trip, your efforts at leadership take all day to catch hold. Intuition is deep: take your fantasies seriously, make notes.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Local help is achieved at a price. Something you can't afford points up your limitations. Revising finances is of long-range benefit, no immediate relief.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Don't add to others' discontent by passing the buck or repeating criticism. Stay out of ongoing wrangles unless you have authority to impose a solution.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You must put all available resources on the line to resume productive activity. Next, choose between old friends and long-ignored duty for your own welfare.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You're free to do as you like, by the same token won't get much help. Avoid fault-finding. Verify news from far-away places before you act on it.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Close down unprofitable sidelines. Be kind to people who get upset about what's happening. Others can't see you're busy, make demands on your time.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): In determining the truth, keep in mind no natural law says anybody has it all in view. Recognize others' right to err. Forming purposeful groups is favored.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Put off purchases until you find the right items, not ersatz brands. Help guide others as you thread your way through complexities of competitive scrambles.

Summary of Secret Witness cases, rewards

The Independent, Press-Telegram's Secret Witness program has resulted in the arrest of 69 criminal suspects and fugitives from justice since the program was inaugurated on June 10, 1972, with rewards totaling $48,000 paid or committed on conviction of suspects awaiting trial. Additional reward money available for informants is specified in the case list below, one of the selected and varying summaries of 10 Secret Witness cases printed in the Independent and Press-Telegram each Sunday and Thursday.

Cases are dropped from the summaries from time to time, but rewards will remain in effect until such cases have been closed by police or until notification in print that reward offers have been withdrawn.

Rewards also will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of suspects in any other major criminal cases, whether covered in these summaries or not, and for the apprehension of fugitives from justice. These rewards will vary in amount depending on the seriousness of the offense.

To insure eligibility for Secret Witness rewards, informants are required to channel all information DIRECTLY through Secret Witness — that is, to notify Secret Witness FIRST — either by calling the special Secret Witness telephone number or by writing to the I.P-T Secret Witness Editor.

In cases in which outside organizations or individuals pledge additional rewards to that guaranteed by Secret Witness, the Independent, Press-Telegram assumes responsibility for payment only of that amount guaranteed by Secret Witness.

Today's summaries follow:

— Rewards totaling $6,000 to $12,000, depending on the offense, will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of persons responsible for the disappearance of Long Beach businessman Evan Allan Snider, 34, last seen Oct. 22 when he was checking on some property he owned on Cedar Avenue. Secret Witness guarantees a $1,000 reward for a kidnap conviction and $2,000 for a murder conviction. The victim's father, Dr. Allan Snider, has pledged $5,000 for a kidnap conviction and $10,000 for a murder conviction.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of 38-year-old Henry Quezada, of Compton, shot and killed by an unknown assailant as he was changing a tire on his car at Acacia and Rosecrans Avenues in Compton at 9:30 p.m. on Dec. 31, 1976.

— A $500 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest of fugitives Samuel Law, 23, and Robert Gary Lewis, 23, both formerly of Compton, sought in connection with the slaying of Lavern Speer, 50, who was shot to death execution-style before the eyes of his wife and young son after two bandits accosted them as they were getting out of their car in a parking lot next to their Elm Avenue apartment at 7:15 p.m. on Nov. 2, 1976. If a murder conviction results from the arrests, the informant will be eligible for an additional $1,500 reward.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the street robber who shot and fatally wounded 72-year-old Jeanette Glade, of Long Beach, while attempting to take her purse on Burnett Street near Pasadena Avenue at 8:30 p.m. on Aug. 8, 1976. Mrs. Glade died on Sept. 31 as a result of her wound.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Raymond E. Lamphear, 49, stabbed to death by two young men in an apparent robbery attack as he was walking on Raymond Avenue at Anaheim Street near his home at 9 p.m. June 30, 1976.

— A $1,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and manslaughter conviction of the hit-run driver who struck and killed Alexander Burdelas, 53, of Norwalk, at the intersection of San Antonio Drive and Firestone Boulevard in Norwalk at 1 p.m. Sept. 27, 1975. The hit-run car was described as a 1964 light-colored Pontiac with chrome rims.

— A $500 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest of fugitive Charles Mack, 23, wanted in connection with a series of apartment house armed robberies throughout the Southland since last February, with bodily injury suffered in two of the robberies and the rape of a woman manager in another. Mack is a black man, 5 feet 9 inches tall, 150 pounds, with black hair and brown eyes. In the event he is convicted on armed robbery charges, the Secret Witness providing information leading to his capture will be eligible for an additional $500 reward.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the slayers of George W. Harrison, 50-year-old chef at Peppy's Steak House in San Pedro, found stabbed to death in his home on S. Pacific Avenue in San Pedro at 7 p.m. on Aug. 22, 1975.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of 30-year-old Bernadine Lewis, of Anaheim, last seen alive at 4 p.m. Jan 30, 1975, when she left a bar at 2299 E. Anaheim St. in Long Beach with a man about 35 years old. Her nude and battered body was found in a trash can in Venice three weeks later. The man sought for questioning is about 5 feet 10 inches, 180 pounds, and speaks French as a second language.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Robert George Zeiger, 18-year-old clerk who was killed by a shotgun blast during a holdup at the Red Carpet Liquor Store, 85 Alamitos Ave., on Oct. 13, 1975.

S.F. officials guarded after car bomb blast

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A tight web of police security was drawn Saturday around members of the Board of Supervisors and Dist. Atty. Joseph Freitas, as police launched a dragnet for the underground revolutionaries who bombed Freitas' car.

Plainclothesmen, backed up by police radio cars, were staked out at the homes of potential targets for the terrorists, police said.

Police were reluctant to disclose details of the security measures, but termed the precautions the most stringent in local history.

Police guards were posted at all the entrances of City Hall Friday, after an anonymous caller warned a bomb was planted in the building. No explosive was found.

The beefed-up security effort came in the wake of the predawn explosion Friday that wrecked the car parked in the driveway of the Freitas home and startled residents 14 blocks away.

The New World Liberation Front purportedly claimed responsiblity for the bombing in a written communique that warned the district attorney against using NWLF courier Jacques Rogiers as a "scapegoat."

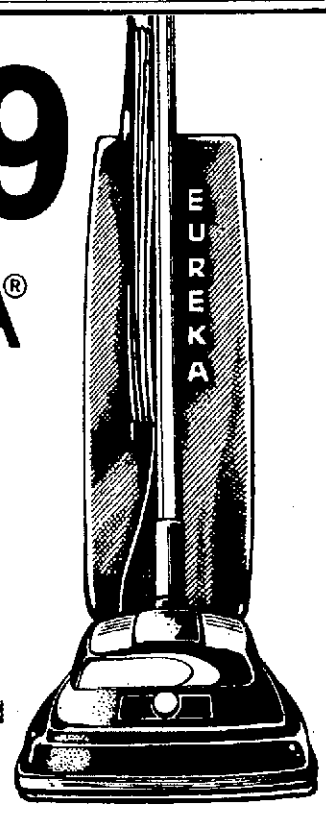

Less than 24 hours before the bombing, a grand jury here had indicted Rogiers on charges of threatening public officials.

The message also threatened several supervisors, declaring, "If necessary, the poor and oppressed will take freedom over your dead bodies."

Freitas said he refused to be intimidated by the attacks and promised those responsible would be arrested and prosecuted.

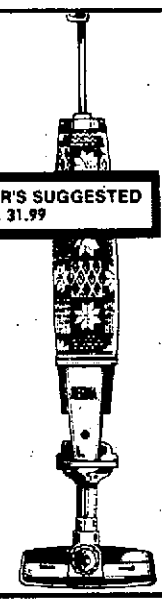

Freitas, his wife and four children were at home at the time of the blast, but were unharmed.

CALIFORNIA NEWSPAPER PUBLISHERS ASSN. BETTER NEWSPAPER CONTEST

Of all the major daily California newspapers, only one can be first in each of the categories judged by the California Newspaper Publishers Association.
We did it, in two categories.
The Independent Press-Telegram's sports coverage was judged best in the state in competition with the largest newspapers in California. This is the third time in four years that Sports Editor John Dixon and his team of reporters have been credited for excellence by CNPA.
Reporter Stan Leppard took first place in best human interest reporting. When mobster Mickey Cohen died, Leppard drew together his personal insights on the man—gathered from years of covering Cohen's activities—to develop an unusual, fascinating obituary.
The best award of all, however, is the one we strive for daily: to win your approval, confidence and acceptance by publishing a quality newspaper.

Pat yourself on the back. You chose a winner!

'Disco' movie

Columbia Pictures, Casablanca Filmworks and Motown Productions have joined to produce "Disco," a movie based on today's recording industry.

Earl Wilson

O.J. is calling himself an actor now

NEW YORK — "When I sign something where I list my occupation," said O.J. Simpson, "'I don't write 'football player.' I write 'actor.'

"I'm getting to old to be a football player and I'm tryirg to adjust — I consider myself an actor now. I'm limited as a football player. I don't know what my horizons are as an actor."

The Buffalo Bills' great ground-gainer sat in his suite at the Sherry-Netherland contemplating his new life. He believes his last movie, "The Cassandra Crossing," his fourth, has prepared him to play a lead role and that'll be coming next. "But there are a couple of things I would like to accomplish in football before I quit," he admitted. "First, I'd like to be on a championship team.

"I'D BE disappointed in myself if I didn't break Jim Brown's ground-gained record of 12,000 and something yards. I'm 2,600 yards away from it. I've an average of over 1,500 yards a season. If the Bills do everything right we wouldn't be a championship team till the second year. That would be my last year, the '78 season, when I should break Jim's record."

Football stars suddenly find when they leave football that they're not special people any more. O.J., whose real name is Orenthal James Simpson, wants to continue being special. But he is not studying acting. His first director, Terence Young, warned him not to go to acting school, and his new friend, Lee Strasberg, who appears in "The Cassandra Crossing," agrees.

"Privacy," O.J. said, "Is a football star's problem. I'm away from my family about five months. My wife didn't want me to be an actor because she says they always seem to have love affairs.

"AND THESE young girls do come after you. Stories get around. Maude Adams is a good friend of mine and also of my wife's, yet somebody printed some suspicions.

"My wife," O.J. laughed, "tends to look different at times.

"She fixes her hair different ways. One day an agent phoned my agent and said, 'We saw O.J. out with a young filly. He ought to be more discreet.' I told him. 'That young filly was my wife.' I've been married 10 years and I'm going to be married forever."

O.J. finds himself fitting into the actor atmosphere. He became a pal of Lee Strasberg while shooting the film in Rome. They were seen around the streets of the city, the 6-foot-1, not-yet-30 athlete and the short, mid-70ish inventor of the method school of acting.

"WE WERE an unlikely combination. We walked from one bookstore to another. I never saw anybody buy so many books!"

O.J. has been tempted with starring roles, but he asked himself, "Why do they want me to play the lead? They really want O.J. Simpson. I swore that I would never play the role of an athlete, because it will prolong the image I want to get away from. Finally, now, I believe I am ready for a lead."

He is serious about everything. In football, he wore a beard because he didn't have to think about shaving. He wanted to blot all non-football things out of his mind. Now he sees a chance of playing a boxer in a remake of "Body and Soul," but it is not a story of an athlete as much as of a person, he says.

The phones ring with the calls from a lawyer and an agent about the commercials for an orange juice and a car rental system. He's due back in Hollywood to work on another film, "Capricorn I." He worries about his weight. He keeps it around 210. He decides not to go to Regine's for the evening. Better stay in his suite. "Those girls flirt more than they used to."

Jukes trying to escape Springsteen's shadow

RED BANK, N.J. (AP) — Southside Johnny and the Asbury Jukes have overcome the biggest hurdle facing any new group — becoming nationally known.

Now the Asbury Park, N.J., band is trying to emerge from the shadow of the man responsible for much of that recognition, Bruce Springsteen.

The 10-piece group, fronted by Johnny Lyon, sold 100,000 copies of its first album, better than usual for a new group. But most of the early interest stems from the association with Springsteen, who also came out of Asbury Park and helped the band land a contract, wrote two songs and the liner notes for the first album.

Lyon declines to talk about the connection. The band is cutting its second album and has completed six tracks without Springsteen's help.

The album, due in April, will contain all new material, whereas the rushed first album which contained five cover versions of songs from the 1950s and early '60s.

Lyon, 27, was born in nearby Neptune and grew up with the rhythm and blues of the 1950s and early 1960s. He played in a variety of shore-area bands with Springsteen and Steve Van Zandt before forming the Jukes with Van Zandt last year. "Miami Steve" returned to Springsteen's band, but remains the Jukes' producer.

Federal probe hits corruption on waterfront

By NICHOLAS GAGE
New York Times Service

NEW YORK — A continuing investigation by the Justice Department has produced information charging "wholesale corruption" involving one of the nation's largest waterfront unions and companies with which it does business, according to sources close to the inquiry.

This past week, the FBI announced it was looking into "reported irregularities" in major ports, and its agents subpoenaed 350 persons to appear before federal grand juries in New York and Miami hearing evidence produced by the investigation.

The FBI did not disclose the nature of the irregularities, who was involved in them or to what degree they had affected waterfront operations.

BUT THE sources said that the corruption being investigated by the FBI and the grand juries involved "a majority" of the 30-member executive council of the International Longshoremen's Association, many officers of ILA locals and numerous officials of shipping companies and waterfront corporations.

(The investigation apparently does not involve the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, which holds contracts at West Coast ports.)

These union officials and businessmen allegedly engaged in extortion, kickbacks, price-fixing and so-called sweetheart contract deals that have added billions of dollars to shipping costs, according to the sources.

The corruption has been so extensive in the ports that ILA officials participating in it were said to have divided the country into territories over which they had exclusive jurisdiction to make illegal deals and exact payoffs.

A spokesman for Thomas W. Gleason, president of the ILA, said Gleason knew nothing about such charges and could not comment on them.

The investigation began 18 months ago when FBI agents in Miami received information that certain ILA officials there were receiving systematic payoffs from businessmen operating waterfront companies.

IN EXCHANGE for the payoffs, according to the sources, the union officials provided labor peace, helped the businessmen fix prices and conspired with the businessmen to drive out competitors who were not making payoffs.

In time, information was developed through a combination of undercover agents, court-authorized wiretaps and confidential informants that showed that similar practices prevailed in many other ports, the sources said.

The investigation was then expanded from Miami to such cities as Tampa, Jacksonville, Mobile, New Orleans, Savannah, Charleston, Houston, Cleveland, Baltimore, Philadelphia, Chicago, New York City, Elizabeth, N.J., Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

Several participants in the reported rackets have agreed to cooperate with the investigation, one of the biggest ever conducted by the government, and have been placed under federal protection.

ONE SUCH witness from Miami was said to have told investigators that for almost 10 years, ILA officials there pressured him to make systematic payoffs to them to be able to operate his family's waterfront business, to keep equipment from being damaged, to get favorable contracts and to be able to expand his business to Jacksonville, Savannah and Mobile.

Through such cooperating witnesses and the use of undercover agents and court-authorized electronic surveillance, federal investigators have developed information that a number of high ILA vice presidents, allegedly received payoffs worth at least $50,000 in the last 18 months, according to the sources.

They identified the three international vice presidents who are the targets of this phase of the investigation as William Boyle, secretary of Local 1922 in Miami; Landon Williams, president of Locals 1408 and 1408A in Jacksonville, Fla., and Isom Clemon, president of Local 1410 in Mobile, Ala.

BOYLE AND Williams did not respond to telephone messages left at their locals over a two-day period. Clemon denied through an attorney being involved in any wrongdoing, but would not comment further.

Other ILA officials named by sources as being under investigation for allegedly receiving direct payments include Cleveland Turner, president of Locals 1416 and 1416A in Miami, and Robert Bateman, president of Locals 1422 and 1422A in Charleston, S.C. They did not respond to messages left at their locals over a two-day period.

The broad federal investigation has also involved a number of other high ILA officials in alleged illegal activities.

The most prominent is Fred R. Field Jr., the ILA general organizer and the fourth most important official in the union hierarchy. Field, who could not be reached for comment, was indicted last month by a federal grand jury in New York City on charges of shaking down United Brands Corp. for nearly $90,000.

Others include Anthony Scotto, president of Local 1814 in Brooklyn and an international vice president; George Barone, president of Local 1922 in Miami and an international vice president; James Vanderwyde, another Miami ILA official, and Anthony Anastasio, who is secretary-treasurer of Local 1277-1 and a cousin of Scotto's wife.

Millions affected by USW election

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The bitter struggle for control of the United Steelworkers ends Tuesday in an election that promises to affect millions who have never seen the inside of a steel mill.

The USW, with 1.4 million members in the United States and Canada, is the largest unit of the AFL-CIO, and is a recognized pace-setter in bargaining. What happens within this union can affect not only other labor groups, but the prices Americans pay for products ranging from paper clips to automobiles.

For the first time in its 40-year history, no incumbent is running for the USW's top office. President I. W. Abel must retire in June after guiding the union through 10 years of stability and growth.

Battling for his $75,000-a-year position are Lloyd McBride, a 60-year-old union stalwart who has Abel's support, and Edward Sadlowski, 38, a militant out of the grimy mills of south Chicago.

BOTH MEN agree the USW must continue to fight for higher wages and improved benefits and the union's vaguely defined goal of "lifetime security." But that's where their similarity ends.

Sadlowski's insurgency has the tone of a crusade. "What's wrong with our union is our leaders think they know what's right for the members and they don't need input from anybody else. They think working people work for them," he said.

McBride says "integrity and dedication" are the overriding issues of the campaign. He has expended much energy and money in an attempt to depict Sadlowski as an opportunist duped by outsiders trying to muscle in on the labor movement.

The USW is one of only three large unions to hold referendum elections, and this week's balloting may hold clues to the mood of America's blue collar workers.

IN THESE days of economic uncertainty, will they take a chance on an insurgent scrapping for a fight with their employers? Would a Sadlowski victory ignite discontent in other unions? Is the drift toward more cooperation between management and labor in the union's best interest?

While the membership ponders those questions, other labor chieftains and the steel industry itself have made unprecedented departures from their usual silence on the union's internal affairs.

Earlier this month, AFL-CIO President George Meany warned against a threat by "businessmen and limousine liberals" to take control of the union, a thinly veiled reference to Sadlowski's fund-raising activity among people associated with liberal causes.

And the steel industry's chief negotiator, J. Bruce Johnston, sharply criticized both candidates for running a "dismal" campaign that ignores vital issues, notably the historic Experimental Negotiating Agreement — ENA — that bans nationwide steel strikes through 1980.

JOHNSTON'S comments merely scratch the surface of deep concern within the industry over the election. "The steelworkers have been a pretty responsible union and we regard ENA as a milestone. Sadlowski could change all that," an industry source said.

ENA bans nationwide strikes and requires binding arbitration for unresolved contract issues. Abel considers it the capstone of his career, but to Sadlowski it's a sellout.

"It strips the collective bargaining fiber and muscle of the steelworkers," he tells supporters who crowd into bars and union halls on the campaign trail.

"I find the union now becoming very compatible with the steel industry rather than with the membership," said Sadlowski. "What I propose is to go back to bargaining with equal strength with the employer."

MCBRIDE dismisses such arguments as a display of irresponsibility and recklessness. His campaign hammers at a single theme — that Sadlowski's support comes not from steelworkers he claims to speak for, but from "outsiders."

"There is a very obvious attempt on the part of certain people not in the labor movement to change the direction of the movement," he said.

McBride's campaign staff recently put out a computer list of his opponent's contributors which purportedly showed only 5 per cent of the donors were members of the union, contrary to Sadlowski's claims of widespread membership support.

In turn, Sadlowski has accused McBride of "dunning" the union's paid staff and office employes. McBride freely admits that most of his money comes from the union's 800 staffmen, but he rejects the notion that the contributions were coerced.

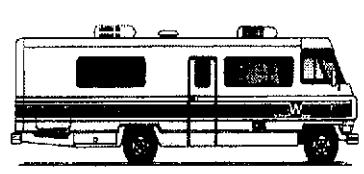

THE CANDIDATES have released figures showing each has solicited more than $150,000.

Harsh rhetoric and a flurry of lawsuits have been a standard part of the campaign. But aside from the gunshot wounding of a Sadlowski supporter in Texas and some other minor scuffling, there has been no physical violence.

McBride, who took a 6-1 edge in local union nominations, appears to be the front-runner. Yet there is a traditional reservoir of discontent within the union which could surprise the oddsmakers.

Decadent or not

Moscow is making electronic music

By SETH MYDANS

MOSCOW (AP) —The sign on the door of a small side street reads, "Experimental Studio for Electronic Music." Inside, laser-generated shafts of color play across the room, and a young man in denim and horn-rimmed glasses twists the dials of a sophisticated electronic synthesizer.

"I have the feeling that the Soviet Union is really ready for electronic music, and that nothing is going to hold it back," said American composer John Eaton as he completed a recent concert tour here.

"There's still a government policy that electronic music is too decadent, but they're not going to be able to keep that alive much longer. People are too eager," he said.

Avant-garde music, including music generated by electronic synthesizers, has for many years been officially frowned on in the Soviet Union, and experimental techniques like those being tried in the West are still foreign to most Russians.

But the Electronic Music studio, which has existed quietly in the center of Moscow since 1959, is now bubbling with creative ferment, and the eager reception Eaton found convinced him that Soviet music is on the threshold of a step forward.

"Everywhere I went, there was interest and enthusiasm in my music," said Eaton, who performs with a small synthesizer and with hammers and brushes on the insides of a piano.

"Their questions were not the questions you would expect from someone who had really done work in the field," he said. "But you thought were going to, and rather soon."

Eaton, a music professor at the University of Indiana, was taken to the Moscow studio—the only one of its kind in the country—on the last day of his tour, after playing in Leningrad, Riga and Tallinn.

Although he said the experimental composers here are "about five years behind what we ard doing in the West," he added that he was impressed that in Moscow, where even rock music is still viewed with suspicion, "they are actually doing it, and doing it in a way that's aware of fairly recent developments in the West."

Elsewhere on his tour, where there were no such electronic music studios, Eaton said he came across a "bewildering variety" of new musical work, almost all of which is unknown in the West.

"It ranged from simple melodies after folk songs all the way to pieces very much influenced by Steve Reich and the marijuana composers of the West— the minimal composers."

Delbert Mann to direct 'Trinity'

Associated Press

Delbert Mann, winner of an Academy Award for directing "Marty," will direct the film version of Leon Uris' best-seller "Trinity."

Uris is writing his own screenplay, the first he has done since "Gunfight at the OK Corral" in 1957. Fred Brogger will produce the film, which will be shot in Ireland. "Trinity" concerns the tragedies and hardships of the Irish people.

PSYCHEDELIA'S PETER MAX RETURNS TO WORLD

Knight News Service

NEW YORK — In 1972 the kinetic, frenetic, psychedelic world of Peter Max spun into a mass-marketed, Day-Glo frenzy of pressurized commitments and burst the artist's mind, propelling him from Main Street to seclusion.

"It got to me — within me and around me. I had to retreat to give myself some space to get back to heavy painting and yoga and creating," says Max, who returned to the world's rushing waters little by little last year. "The demands on my body were too great. The celebrity trip was too explosive."

Yep, Peter Max. Remember now? This is the guy whose colorful, kaleidoscopic, fantasy-filled art adorned everything from posters to puzzles, towels to tattoos, clocks to china. This is the man Madison Avenue selected to help sell merchandise to a mind-expanded youth that had come to covet swirling, surreal design.

By the late 1960s, Max was a millionaire.

Now, resurfacing but subdued, Max — sans mustache — is all caution.

"I still love flat colors and blends," Max says. "But now I also like to paint little, intricate things. I spend more time with the paint itself."

YOUR HOROSCOPE by JEANE DIXON

Forecast for Monday

Your birthday today: This year you go on to bigger things. Your starting point can be foreign travel or its symbolic analogy — dawning awareness in which the sense of what you've learned up to now starts to take coherent form. Relationships run recurring cycles of tension, detachment, realliance. Today's natives show literary talent, tell of fascinating tale; often on behalf of social reform. Those born this year have a gift for oddities, the judiciary, finding the right word.

Aries (March 21-April 19): You share reluctance to plunge into work, yet jump right in, talk before thinking on personal and political conflicts. Make amends the best you can.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Experts procrastinate. Complaining does no good. Stay busy while or instead of waiting. Learn details despite distractions from those emotionally involved.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Matters you find amusing might be another person's tragedy; be careful what you say. Enough leverage gets a rush job done. Tonight is quite but very satisfying.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Large projects are sketchily defined. Take preliminary steps in good faith. Show regard for the sensitivity of those who don'tttt understand what's up or why.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): With everyone off on his own ego trip, your efforts at leadership take all day to catch hold. Intuition is deep: take your fantasies seriously, make notes.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Local help is achieved at a price. Something you can't afford points up your limitations. Revising finances is of long-range benefit, no immediate relief.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Don't add to others' discontent by passing the buck or repeating criticism. Stay out of ongoing wrangles unless you have authority to impose a solution.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You must put all available resources on the line to resume productive activity. Next, choose between old friends and long-ignored duty for your own welfare.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You're free to do as you like, by the same token won't get much help. Avoid fault-finding. Verify news from far-away places before you act on it.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Close down unprofitable sidelines. Be kind to people who get upset about what's happening. Others can't see you're busy, make demands on your time.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): In determining the truth, keep in mind no natural law says anybody has it all in view. Recognize others' right to err. Forming purposeful groups is favored.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Put off purchases until you find the right items, not ersatz brands. Help guide others as you thread your way through complexities of competitive scrambles.

Primitive village enhances a regal resort

UNSPOILED BEACHES OF IXTAPA ARE ATTRACTION OF NEW MEXICAN RIVIERA DEVELOPMENT

By DENISE KUSEL
Staff Writer

IXTAPA, Mexico — Maria Gonzalez sat on the red clay floor of her two-room adobe.

She potted out five tortillas and placed them on a brick stove which she fed with small pieces of wood.

Three miles and two centuries away, tourists lounged in a swimming pool in Ixtapa, the second in a series of planned resorts built by the Mexican Government and FONATUR (a government trust).

Maria has never been to the tourist resort, although she said two of her friends who live nearby have passed by the gleaming white towers and red tile roofs of the two hotels and have told her about it.

Maria explained that her friends were on their way to the small village of Zihuatanejo to trade their corn and baked goods for fresh fish in the maket place.

SHE ADDED with a shrug that there's really too much for her to do at home and she was not really interested in seeing Ixtapa. She was busy baking the bread her son and husband carry to the corn fields seven miles away.

The dirt floor in her home was worn smooth.

Tourists in the hotels, the El Presidente Las Palmas and the towering Aristos walk on lavish Spanish tiles.

The Ixtapa complex, which includes an 18-hole golf course, two hotels, and an international jetport (served by Mexico's two major airlines), stretches along 24 miles of the Pacific Ocean.

Ixtapa is 125 miles north of Acapulco, and like Cancun — the first fully developed resort under the direction of FONATUR on Mexico's Caribbean coast — it is complemented by beautiful waters and climate.

Unlike Cancun, Ixtapa seems more natural in its setting against a peninsula that looks like a Palos Verdes of yesterday.

THE BEACHES are indented with seven caves and most are desolate and quiet.

Ten miles south of Ixtapa, which is located in the State of Guerrero, is the village of Zihuatanejo. For two American dollars a day you can rent a room and receive two meals. For 20 cents, you can buy a beer.

The harbor in Zihuatanejo is quiet in the afternoon. Most of the fishing fleet is out. There are occasional fishermen throwing nets to catch fish that will within seconds be popped into a frying pan and served up as lunch minutes later.

The western terrain and mild climate create a comfortable ambiance for Southern Californians. Ixtapa comes from an obscure Indian name to which no one could seem to attach a meaning.

Gentle seaward slopes are filled with lush jungle vegetation. The beach sands are white and the solitude is refreshing.

Given the choice of Acapulco or Ixtapa, this traveler would take Ixtapa without hesitation.

Perhaps it's finding the luring promise of solidad. Perhaps it was the lack of crowds and the charm of a fishing village.

Maybe it was sitting on the clay floor of an adobe sharing tortillas with a few people who never asked my name.

Beat inflation around the world

Condominium rentals are THE thing in Hawaii. If you have a family, breakfasts and lunches at home will save your life. Get folders from BOTH of these:

Creative Leisure: Free phone in California: (800) 652-1440. United Airlines has one, too.

Condominiums Unlimited: All Western Airlines offices will mail it to you. (Rentals should be booked through travel agents. Lot easier.)

I've done both. Condominiums in the islands are new, modern and on beaches. (Hawaii is overbuilt with condos and prices are GOOD. Owners fighting to rent them out.)

Condominiums Unlimited builds a free car rental into the price.

Creative Leisure will get you a car. Also has condominiums for rent in Mexico: Puerto Vallarta, Acapulco, Mazatlan, Guadalarjara.

In Great Britain, Farmhouse Accomodations. Some of these sound like estates. Include grouse shooting. Salmon fishing. Others more modest. List from British Tourist Authority, 612 S. Flower St., Los Angeles, Calif. 90017.

SAME FOR Ireland through Irish Tourist Board, 510 W. Sixth St., Los Angeles, Calif. 90014.

Had my children in two of these. They helped milk cows. Picked up eggs. Had a great time.

And another in Ireland: Irish-Rent-A-Cottage from the Irish Tourist board. Thatched Irish cottages with peat fires — (but an all-electric modern kitchen) — in the best Irish villages.

They're called paradors in Spain. Pousadas in Portugal. Live in a remodeled castle at cottage prices. Spanish National Tourist Office, 665 Fifth Avenue, New York 10020. Portuguese Tourist Office, 3250 Wilshire Blvd., Suite 1305, Los Angeles, Calif. 90010.

"What's the best way to get our mail in Europe?"

I always used American Express — you still can — but the lines are long. You wait and wait and wait. Easier to have it sent care of "Poste Restante" at the city where you'll be. This is like our "General Delivery". There's a "Poste Restante" window in every post office no matter what the local language is. Even England uses "Poste Restante".

An alternative: Have it sent "Hold For Arrival" at the biggest hotel in town. Ask for your mail at the concierge's desk. (Hall porter in England and Ireland.) If there's mail waiting for you, give him a dollar for his trouble. He'll adore you.

"Can we cash checks while we're overseas?"

Yes, with a lot of introductions in advance from your bank. It's too much trouble. Travelers' checks cash anywhere. And on Sunday when banks are closed.

While nobody will CASH your check, most tourist shops will TAKE your personal check. In the exact amount for what you buy. I've given a check of $500 for a Swiss watch. No problem. They just asked to see my passport.

CALIFORNIA NEWSPAPER PUBLISHERS ASSN. BETTER NEWSPAPER CONTEST

Of all the major daily California newspapers, only one can be first in each of the categories judged by the California Newspaper Publishers Association.
We did it, in two categories.
The Independent Press-Telegram's sports coverage was judged best in the state in competition with the largest newspapers in California.
This is the third time in four years that Sports Editor John Dixon and his team of reporters have been credited for excellence by CNPA.
Reporter Stan Leppard took first place in best human interest reporting.
When mobster Mickey Cohen died, Leppard drew together his personal insights on the man—gathered from years of covering Cohen's activities—to develop an unusual, fascinating obituary.
The best award of all, however, is the one we strive for daily: to win your approval, confidence and acceptance by publishing a quality newspaper.

Festival time in Salzburg

SALZBURG, Austria — Under a ceiling frescoed with buxom ladies clothed in gossamer clouds and warriors in flowing red tunics, we listened to an ensemble from Sweden play Baroque music. It was composed by Dowland in the 17th century as an accompaniment for falsetto voices.

I never have been addicted to Baroque chamber music. However, the Music Festival in this lovely Austrian city is famous throughout the world. Our hosts were not about to let us escape a single evening's program.

Under the influence of romantic cherubs stroking the manes of plaster lions over the stage and the 18-foot ceiling, I found myself floating in spirit back to the 17th and 18th centuries. In those days, the ladies in the audience would have been corseted into padded skirts.

When I opened my eyes to match reality with the dream, I was astonished to find a youthful, jean-clad audience.

WHEN I flew here from Zurich on Austrian Airlines, Mozart's music filled the plane while we awaited takeoff. When I took a short walk before dressing for dinner, classical music resounded from walled courtyards all through the city.

Salzburg is crowded and I am staying at a second-class hotel, the Bayrischer Hof at 12 Elisabethstrasse. It has an old section with a charming outdoor restaurant under the trees, but the new part is the upper two floors of a commercial building located next door.

My room has a bath with all the modern accouterments. The bed is furnished with a down puff, typical of these Germanic countries, and the furniture is a sort of un-chic '30s. However, the room is spotlessly clean, quiet, comfortable and reasonably priced, which is remarkable in Salzburg during the festival.

I am doing things here that I would never do at home, like attending the Baroque chamber music recital. An Austrian acquaintance is seated on a chair in the row in front of me. His body is moving with the music, much as our American youths would react to Rock.

I envy him. He is experiencing the music in the most profound sense. There is nothing brash about a harpsichord — no high decibel nor demanding electronic beat. The Austrian is responding to it intellectually, rather than purely emotionally.

Most Americans are not educated to hear these sounds. Following his lead, I try to play the "inner game" of music by not consciously listening.

IT WORKS. I begin to hear the flute, the bass, the harpsichord. The subtleties escape me, but I am accepting it for what it is. To my surprise, I am enjoying it. Then I look up at the delicately painted clouds overhead and stately gilt columns supporting them. To paraphrase Shakespeare, would Baroque music in any other setting sound so sweet?

Music of the 17th and 18th centuries played on antique instruments and sung by a true falsetto is rarely heard. For that matter, a true falsetto is next to impossible to find. The Swedish singer who performs with this ensemble possesses one of two natural falsettos in the world.

During the Renaissance, an operation was performed so the voices of eunuchs would maintain their boyhood high. That may explain Baroque music's subsequent drop in popularity.

If not this group, other musicians of equal significance to the music world will be performing during the Salzburg Music Festival next summer. From this experience, I have learned that it would be regrettable for a visitor to miss any part of the program, even the Chamber music recitals. Here, in a setting where many famous classical composers actually performed their works for the first time, music assumes a new dimension for any American.

Federal probe hits corruption on waterfront

By NICHOLAS GAGE
New York Times Service

NEW YORK — A continuing investigation by the Justice Department has produced information charging "wholesale corruption" involving one of the nation's largest waterfront unions and companies with which it does business, according to sources close to the inquiry.

This past week, the FBI announced it was looking into "reported irregularities" in major ports, and its agents subpoenaed 350 persons to appear before federal grand juries in New York and Miami hearing evidence produced by the investigation.

The FBI did not disclose the nature of the irregularities, who was involved in them or to what degree they had affected waterfront operations.

BUT THE sources said that the corruption being investigated by the FBI and the grand juries involved "a majority" of the 30-member executive council of the International Longshoremen's Association, many officers of ILA locals and numerous officials of shipping companies and waterfront corporations.

(The investigation apparently does not involve the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, which holds contracts at West Coast ports.)

These union officials and businessmen allegedly engaged in extortion, kickbacks, price-fixing and so-called sweetheart contract deals that have added billions of dollars to shipping costs, according to the sources.

The corruption has been so extensive in the ports that ILA officials participating in it were said to have divided the country into territories over which they had exclusive jurisdiction to make illegal deals and exact payoffs.

A spokesman for Thomas W. Gleason, president of the ILA, said Gleason knew nothing about such charges and could not comment on them.

The investigation began 18 months ago when FBI agents in Miami received information that certain ILA officials there were receiving systematic payoffs from businessmen operating waterfront companies.

IN EXCHANGE for the payoffs, according to the sources, the union officials provided labor peace, helped the businessmen fix prices and conspired with the businessmen to drive out competitors who were not making payoffs.

In time, information was developed through a combination of undercover agents, court-authorized wiretaps and confidential informants that showed that similar practices prevailed in many other ports, the sources said.

The investigation was then expanded from Miami to such cities as Tampa, Jacksonville, Mobile, New Orleans, Savannah, Charleston, Houston, Cleveland, Baltimore, Philadelphia, Chicago, New York City, Elizabeth, N.J., Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

Several participants in the reported rackets have agreed to cooperate with the investigation, one of the biggest ever conducted by the government, and have been placed under federal protection.

ONE SUCH witness from Miami was said to have told investigators that for almost 10 years, ILA officials there pressured him to make systematic payoffs to them to be able to operate his family's waterfront business, to keep equipment from being damaged, to get favorable contracts and to be able to expand his business to Jacksonville, Savannah and Mobile.

Through such cooperating witnesses and the use of undercover agents and court-authorized electronic surveillance, federal investigators have developed information that a number of high ILA vice presidents, allegedly received payoffs worth at least $50,000 in the last 18 months, according to the sources.

They identified the three international vice presidents who are the targets of this phase of the investigation as William Boyle, secretary of Local 1922 in Miami; Landon Williams, president of Locals 1408 and 1408A in Jacksonville, Fla., and Isom Clemon, president of Local 1410 in Mobile, Ala.

BOYLE AND Williams did not respond to telephone messages left at their locals over a two-day period. Clemon denied through an attorney being involved in any wrongdoing, but would not comment further.

Other ILA officials named by sources as being under investigation for allegedly receiving direct payments include Cleveland Turner, president of Locals 1416 and 1416A in Miami, and Robert Bateman, president of Locals 1422 and 1422A in Charleston, S.C. They did not respond to messages left at their locals over a two-day period.

The broad federal investigation has also involved a number of other high ILA officials in alleged illegal activities.

The most prominent is Fred R. Field Jr., the ILA general organizer and the fourth most important official in the union hierarchy. Field, who could not be reached for comment, was indicted last month by a federal grand jury in New York City on charges of shaking down United Brands Corp. for nearly $90,000.

Others include Anthony Scotto, president of Local 1814 in Brooklyn and an international vice president; George Barone, president of Local 1922 in Miami and an international vice president; James Vanderwyde, another Miami ILA official, and Anthony Anastasio, who is secretary-treasurer of Local 1277-1 and a cousin of Scotto's wife.

Millions affected by USW election

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The bitter struggle for control of the United Steelworkers ends Tuesday in an election that promises to affect millions who have never seen the inside of a steel mill.

The USW, with 1.4 million members in the United States and Canada, is the largest unit of the AFL-CIO, and is a recognized pace-setter in bargaining. What happens within this union can affect not only other labor groups, but the prices Americans pay for products ranging from paper clips to automobiles.

For the first time in its 40-year history, no incumbent is running for the USW's top office. President I. W. Abel must retire in June after guiding the union through 10 years of stability and growth.

Battling for his $75,000-a-year position are Lloyd McBride, a 60-year-old union stalwart who has Abel's support, and Edward Sadlowski, 38, a militant out of the grimy mills of south Chicago.

BOTH MEN agree the USW must continue to fight for higher wages and improved benefits and the union's vaguely defined goal of "lifetime security." But that's where their similarity ends.

Sadlowski's insurgency has the tone of a crusade. "What's wrong with our union is our leaders think they know what's right for the members and they don't need input from anybody else. They think working people work for them," he said.

McBride says "integrity and dedication" are the overriding issues of the campaign. He has expended much energy and money in an attempt to depict Sadlowski as an opportunist duped by outsiders trying to muscle in on the labor movement.

The USW is one of only three large unions to hold referendum elections, and this week's balloting may hold clues to the mood of America's blue collar workers.

IN THESE days of economic uncertainty, will they take a chance on an insurgent scrapping for a fight with their employers? Would a Sadlowski victory ignite discontent in other unions? Is the drift toward more cooperation between management and labor in the union's best interest?

While the membership ponders those questions, other labor chieftains and the steel industry itself have made unprecedented departures from their usual silence on the union's internal affairs.

Earlier this month, AFL-CIO President George Meany warned against a threat by "businessmen and limousine liberals" to take control of the union, a thinly veiled reference to Sadlowski's fund-raising activity among people associated with liberal causes.

And the steel industry's chief negotiator, J. Bruce Johnston, sharply criticized both candidates for running a "dismal" campaign that ignores vital issues, notably the historic Experimental Negotiating Agreement — ENA — that bans nationwide steel strikes through 1980.

JOHNSTON'S comments merely scratch the surface of deep concern within the industry over the election. "The steelworkers have been a pretty responsible union and we regard ENA as a milestone. Sadlowski could change all that," an industry source said.

ENA bans nationwide strikes and requires binding arbitration for unresolved contract issues. Abel considers it the capstone of his career, but to Sadlowski it's a sellout.

"It strips the collective bargaining fiber and muscle of the steelworkers," he tells supporters who crowd into bars and union halls on the campaign trail.

"I find the union now becoming very compatible with the steel industry rather than with the membership," said Sadlowski. "What I propose is to go back to bargaining with equal strength with the employer."

MCBRIDE dismisses such arguments as a display of irresponsibility and recklessness. His campaign hammers at a single theme — that Sadlowski's support comes not from steelworkers he claims to speak for, but from "outsiders."

"There is a very obvious attempt on the part of certain people not in the labor movement to change the direction of the movement," he said.

McBride's campaign staff recently put out a computer list of his opponent's contributors which purportedly showed only 5 per cent of the donors were members of the union, contrary to Sadlowski's claims of widespread membership support.

In turn, Sadlowski has accused McBride of "dunning" the union's paid staff and office employes. McBride freely admits that most of his money comes from the union's 800 staffmen, but he rejects the notion that the contributions were coerced.

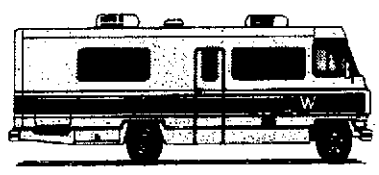

THE CANDIDATES have released figures showing each has solicited more than $150,000.

Harsh rhetoric and a flurry of lawsuits have been a standard part of the campaign. But aside from the gunshot wounding of a Sadlowski supporter in Texas and some other minor scuffling, there has been no physical violence.

McBride, who took a 6-1 edge in local union nominations, appears to be the front-runner. Yet there is a traditional reservoir of discontent within the union which could surprise the oddsmakers.

Primitive village enhances a regal resort

UNSPOILED BEACHES OF IXTAPA ARE ATTRACTION OF NEW MEXICAN RIVIERA DEVELOPMENT

By DENISE KUSEL
Staff Writer

IXTAPA, Mexico — Maria Gonzalez sat on the red clay floor of her two-room adobe.

She potted out five tortillas and placed them on a brick stove which she fed with small pieces of wood.

Three miles and two centuries away, tourists lounged in a swimming pool in Ixtapa, the second in a series of planned resorts built by the Mexican Government and FONATUR (a government trust).

Maria has never been to the tourist resort, although she said two of her friends who live nearby have passed by the gleaming white towers and red tile roofs of the two hotels and have told her about it.

Maria explained that her friends were on their way to the small village of Zihuatanejo to trade their corn and baked goods for fresh fish in the maket place.

SHE ADDED with a shrug that there's really too much for her to do at home and she was not really interested in seeing Ixtapa. She was busy baking the bread her son and husband carry to the corn fields seven miles away.

The dirt floor in her home was worn smooth.

Tourists in the hotels, the El Presidente Las Palmas and the towering Aristos walk on lavish Spanish tiles.

The Ixtapa complex, which includes an 18-hole golf course, two hotels, and an international jetport (served by Mexico's two major airlines), stretches along 24 miles of the Pacific Ocean.

Ixtapa is 125 miles north of Acapulco, and like Cancun — the first fully developed resort under the direction of FONATUR on Mexico's Caribbean coast — it is complemented by beautiful waters and climate.

Unlike Cancun, Ixtapa seems more natural in its setting against a peninsula that looks like a Palos Verdes of yesterday.

THE BEACHES are indented with seven caves and most are desolate and quiet.

Ten miles south of Ixtapa, which is located in the State of Guerrero, is the village of Zihuatanejo. For two American dollars a day you can rent a room and receive two meals. For 20 cents, you can buy a beer.

The harbor in Zihuatanejo is quiet in the afternoon. Most of the fishing fleet is out. There are occasional fishermen throwing nets to catch fish that will within seconds be popped into a frying pan and served up as lunch minutes later.

The western terrain and mild climate create a comfortable ambiance for Southern Californians. Ixtapa comes from an obscure Indian name to which no one could seem to attach a meaning.

Gentle seaward slopes are filled with lush jungle vegetation. The beach sands are white and the solitude is refreshing.

Given the choice of Acapulco or Ixtapa, this traveler would take Ixtapa without hesitation.

Perhaps it's finding the luring promise of solidad. Perhaps it was the lack of crowds and the charm of a fishing village.

Maybe it was sitting on the clay floor of an adobe sharing tortillas with a few people who never asked my name.

Beat inflation around the world

Honolulu

Auwe, brudda! Looks like an expensive year all over the world. Inflation eating up Europe. Runaway Mexico inflation rapidly overtaking the devalued peso.

Strikes in Italy. Higher prices in France.

Condominium rentals are THE thing in Hawaii. If you have a family, breakfasts and lunches at home will save your life. Get folders from BOTH of these:

Creative Leisure: Free phone in California: (800) 652-1440. United Airlines has one, too.

Condominiums Unlimited: All Western Airlines offices will mail it to you. (Rentals should be booked through travel agents. Lot easier.)

I've done both. Condominiums in the islands are new, modern and on beaches. (Hawaii is overbuilt with condos and prices are GOOD. Owners fighting to rent them out.)

Condominiums Unlimited builds a free car rental into the price.

Creative Leisure will get you a car. Also has condominiums for rent in Mexico: Puerto Vallarta, Acapulco, Mazatlan, Guadalarjara.

In Great Britain, Farmhouse Accomodations. Some of these sound like estates. Include grouse shooting. Salmon fishing. Others more modest. List from British Tourist Authority, 612 S. Flower St., Los Angeles, Calif. 90017.

SAME FOR Ireland through Irish Tourist Board, 510 W. Sixth St., Los Angeles, Calif. 90014.

Had my children in two of these. They helped milk cows. Picked up eggs. Had a great time.

And another in Ireland: Irish-Rent-A-Cottage from the Irish Tourist board. Thatched Irish cottages with peat fires — (but an all-electric modern kitchen) — in the best Irish villages.

They're called paradors in Spain. Pousadas in Portugal. Live in a remodeled castle at cottage prices. Spanish National Tourist Office, 665 Fifth Avenue, New York 10020. Portuguese Tourist Office, 3250 Wilshire Blvd., Suite 1305, Los Angeles, Calif. 90010.

"What's the best way to get our mail in Europe?"

I always used American Express — you still can — but the lines are long. You wait and wait and wait. Easier to have it sent care of "Poste Restante" at the city where you'll be. This is like our "General Delivery". There's a "Poste Restante" window in every post office no matter what the local language is. Even England uses "Poste Restante".

An alternative: Have it sent "Hold For Arrival" at the biggest hotel in town. Ask for your mail at the concierge's desk. (Hall porter in England and Ireland.) If there's mail waiting for you, give him a dollar for his trouble. He'll adore you.

"Can we cash checks while we're overseas?"

Yes, with a lot of introductions in advance from your bank. It's too much trouble. Travelers' checks cash anywhere. And on Sunday when banks are closed.

While nobody will CASH your check, most tourist shops will TAKE your personal check. In the exact amount for what you buy. I've given a check of $500 for a Swiss watch. No problem. They just asked to see my passport.

Top cat's secretary

Mary's boss is purrty good fellow

By MOLLY BURRELL
Staff Writer

Mary Holtman thinks her boss is a pussycat.

She met him for the first time last week and they hit it off fine: she rubbed his neck and he purred.

She's been answering his fan mail for more than a year. She herself was a fan long before that, admiring him on TV, secretly wondering if he was really that cool a cat.

MARY HOLTMAN

Suddenly, there he was in her office on Terminal Island, en route from Hawaii to Illinois, "looking just like he looks on the screen. . . . maybe a little thinner. He's really very trim."

She adds: "He has this great cool. All the flash bulbs going off and everyone making a big fuss, and he was just taking it like it was all very normal."

That's what happens when you're top cat and your name is Morris.

What also happens with Morris is that he gets 100 letters a day from all over the country — including proposals, propositions and requests for autographed pictures.

IT IS this sort of detail that Mary handles for him, writing personal replies to about 25 per cent of the letter-writers and mailing form letters to the rest, along with color prints of himself in a haughty pose. All are signed with a rubber stamp paw print.

Now that they're finally personally acquainted, Mary says, it is all right to reveal some of Morris's background: he's 13 years old (making him a theoretical 91 on the human scale), has made 46 television commercials, hates to dance, prefers tuna to all the other products he sells, is in excellent health and very sexy.

His owner, Bob Martwick, who paid $10 for him at an animal shelter 10 years ago, says he'll find a lady cat for Morris sometime this spring because it's time there was a Morris, Jr.

Morris, obviously not your average "take-a-letter" and "be-sure-you're-back-in-15-minutes" boss, wasn't much interested in his mail the day he came to the office, Mary says. "I was hoping he'd give me a little help on a couple of the answers but he never even meowed all the time he was here — just purred," she said.

The ones she doesn't need help with come from youngsters and oldsters, many of whom send pictures of their own cats, cats that they think look like Morris. Also a lot of fan mail from New York, where a lot of people are named Morris.

Her favorite, a neatly typed, well-spelled letter from "Trooper" in Natick, Mass., goes like this:

"Dear Morris, I am a five year old dog. I like to watch television with my lovely master Debbie Marks. I am a mongrel. A collie cross. I happen to think I am very handsome. A lot of other people and animals think so too! I have a hard time typing so I asked Debbie to type for me. Well, to get back to you, (us). As I said I watch television a lot. I have seen many a cat in my day and I have three cat brothers. And I know a good cat when I see one. You are a good cat. A great one even. I like the way you look, "talk," walk, and everything. I think we would make a great couple. I can see it now, "Morris and Trooper, first dog and cat to get married!" We would make a million!!! What do you say Morrey? I know it will work out just great. Signed TROOPER P.S. FORGET THE WHOLE LETTER, I JUST FOUND OUT I WAS A BOY."

In Mary's reply, Morris also apologized for typing, saying he "tends to put his paw in it," and would "really rather just lie down and catch a nap."

Mary, 24, a published poet, lives with a silver-furred feline named "Shadow," adopted from a litter at the pet food research lab next to the cannery where she works.

SHE CAME to Long Beach more than six years ago from Pennsylvania, graduated from Lakewood High, has gone to Long Beach City College, and plans to enroll at Long Beach State University for a creative writing course.

One of her works, "Belief," was published in Seventeen magazine, and others have appeared in American Girl and the Lakewood

High literary magazine. She got her first typewriter at 12 and has written 75 poems, none of them since she went to work for Morris.

Mary got her job by answering an I,P-T ad, but had no idea she'd end up working for the world's most famous feline.

Now when people ask her what she does, she gets a kick out of letting the cat out of the bag.

Ex-LBSU student becomes Canadian

By WALT MURRAY
Staff Writer

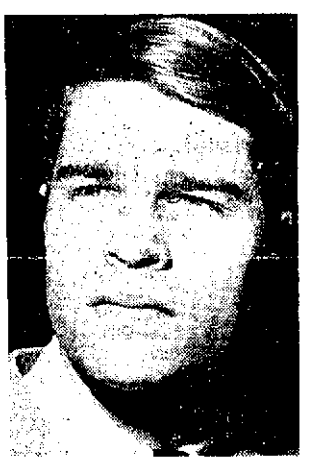

When friends find out that Toronto psychologist Tony Formo used to be an American, Formo shrugs his shoulders and says, "I can't help it — it's a birth defect."

Formo, who left Long Beach and the United States the day after his final exams at Long Beach State University in 1968, celebrated the bicentennial by becoming a Canadian citizen.

Ultraconservatives would call Formo a draft dodger. He left the country to avoid being conscripted for the Vietnam war. And he doesn't care much that President Carter decreed Jan. 21 that he can come home again without getting arrested.

"I'm home already," the former LBSU student leader said in a telephone interview from Toronto. "I don't know any expatriates up here who intend to return permanently to the States."

Judging from Canadian press reports, Formo is typical of the Pacific Terrace 'on schedule'

By DENISE KUSEL
Staff Writer

The circus was in town, but the days when elephants helped hoist the Big Top were long since gone.

Instead of a tent, there was a room called a convention center inside the 1931-vintage Long Beach Auditorium. The only way to get the elephants into the building was to make them get on their knees and crawl up a makeshift wooden ramp.

Everything was going along smoothly until one elephant panicked and stood up, lodging himself firmly between the ramp and the ceiling. It took the trainer two hours to calm the elephant to get him back on his knees and continue up the ramp.

The Long Beach Auditorium has gone the way of the Big Top.

The wrecker's ball crashed into its walls 25 months ago.

Rising in its place is the mammoth Pacific Terrace Convention Center, a three-building complex which will include the already built Long Beach Arena.

BUILDING operations are 77 per cent completed.

Surrounded by churning cement mixers, scaffolding and electrical cords draped over naked cement stair casings, Dick Shaff rubbed his hands together against an early morning chill and surveyed the scene.

"We're right on schedule," said Shaff, assistant manager of the Pacific Terrace complex.

"Things are moving along smoothly, without a hitch."

He'd probably have knocked on wood, but there wasn't any — not yet.

Wood accents will be a few of the finishing touches to the $51.5 million project expected to be completed by next January.

Shaff walked into a big room that resembles an airport hanger. Usually a placid man, Shaff became animated.

"This is great, just great," said Shaff. "It's 100,000 square feet with a movable wall. We can break the facility down into two exhibit halls. Run two events at once.

"We'll be able to run five events at the same time once the whole center is completed.

"The ceiling will be finished with acoustical tile. The doors are 132 linear feet — large enough to drive 30 semis through at the same time.

"Did I ever tell you the story about the elephant?" Shaff asked.

He didn't wait for an answer. Instead Shaff adjusted his hard hat and continued the tour, working his way through a maze of air-conditioning ducts.

Outside the exhibition hall, Shaff scrambled over several piles of waist-high dirt and shifted his attention to the theater complex, expected to be the focal point of Long Beach cultural activity for drama and music buffs.

It also will be the home of both the Long Beach Symphony and the Civic Light Opera associations.

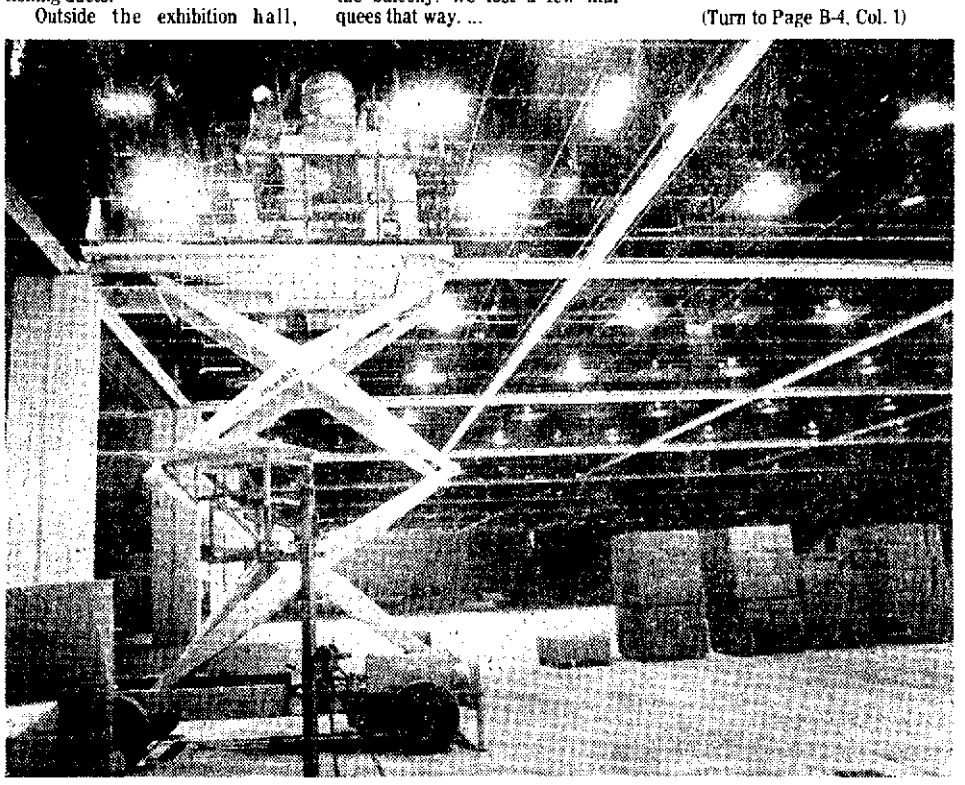

"We're standing on a drive-in hydraulic loader," Shaff announced. "We can move entire truckloads of scenery into the theaters. In the old auditorium, we'd have to hoist the stage props onto the second floor over the brass marquee by crane and drop it onto the balcony. We lost a few marquees that way. ...

"Then there was the time the elephant got stuck between the floor and the ceiling," Shaff's voice trailed off.

"This will be the Center Theater," he said, walking into a conical-shaped room. "It has a seating capacity of 850 and has a five-sided stage that thrusts out into the audience.

"The whole theater will be carpeted. Seating will be in a matching color of blue," Shaff said. "This is where we'll have our chamber music concerts, recitals, drama series. It's like the Mark Taper Forum at the (Los Angeles) Music

Long Beach Board of Education incumbents Elizabeth Wallace and James Zarifes have issued appeals for their re-election in one of the quietest campaigns on record.

Only two of the seven challengers — Elliott J. Dixon, attorney, and Iva D. Hartman, retired teacher — have submitted information on their candidacies for the sample ballot since the Jan. 6 close of filing for the March 15 election.

The incumbents, running as a team with support of the Keep Good Schools Committee, issued a joint statement.

Mrs. Wallace, a board member since 1967, said: "It is our good fortune to be a part of a community that has demonstrated repeatedly that it values quality education and sound fiscal management.

"We have good schools in Long Beach, Lakewood, Signal Hill and Avalon because citizens expect excellence. This does not mean that our schools are perfect, however. They can and must be strengthened through the best efforts of an experienced team."

F.C. Anderson

HARRY GORNISH looks like a country doctor we used to know, a man who made house calls through ice and snow, a man who treated his patients with good medicine leavened by compassion and homespun common sense.

Look at Harry Gornish and you might see the Dr. Christian of Jean Hersholt. He has a full mustache, hair of pepper and salt, a courtly yet kindly manner, and a face furrowed by his care and concern for his fellow man.

Harry Gornish, however, is not a physician. He is a retired plumber whose working life was spent in the service of the Long Beach Unified School District. Even so, Harry Gornish is a doctor of humanity trying to prescribe for one of the great ills afflicting Long Beach — crimes against senior citizens.

Harry is coordinator of the senior citizens' task force of Long Beach Area Citizens Involved. He takes his job seriously, as well he might, for his life and ours may depend on finding a solution to the problem of juvenile crime.

We're talking about punks, the teen-age and adolescent hoodlums who prey on our elderly citizens. We're talking about muggers, purse snatchers, rapists, murderers and maimers. We're talking about juveniles who shoot 88-year-old women in the back for a few dollars, about juveniles who beat a 79-year-old man with a steel pipe because he resists the robbery of his Social Security check.

Stories like those have become a daily news diet in Long Beach and other metropolitan centers in this country. The street is the jungle, and we are the prey.

Harry Gornish says Long Beach has a senior citizen population of 72,616. That's 20.9 per cent of the inhabitants of this community.

But statistics don't tell us how many of the 72,616 senior citizens in Long Beach are prisoners in their houses and apartments, too terrified to venture out on a shopping trip, too afraid to answer the ring of a bell or a knock on the door.

I know a woman in her 70s who has not been out of her apartment in more than three years. Three elderly women in her building have been assaulted and robbed while on shopping trips. She won't risk the street; she wants to live. A young friend shops for her. And that's one life in Long Beach, if you can call it living.

I've been privy to the terror of citizens — on the telephone, by mail and face-to-face. It's a terror that brutalizes the spirit, agonizes the mind and makes the body cower.

Long Beach is fighting the problem of juvenile crime. Ten thousand police whistles have been distributed to senior citizens; a 20-man police task force patrols areas where the elderly gather; there is a Chamber of Commerce drive to increase police manpower.

Harry Gornish says police alone cannot attack the causes of juvenile crime. "Instead, they act to feed a justice system which is little more than a revolving door for delinquents in trouble year in and year out."

There are federal and state programs and millions of dollars addressed to law enforcement technology, jobs and job-training programs, sociological studies and economic impact surveys. Maybe they'll put a dent in the juvenile crime problem, maybe they won't. Money's track record in solving social ills is not encouraging.

Harry Gornish thinks the schools can help by giving scholastic credit to high school and college students who become involved in senior citizens' action groups, including a shopping service and escort duty.

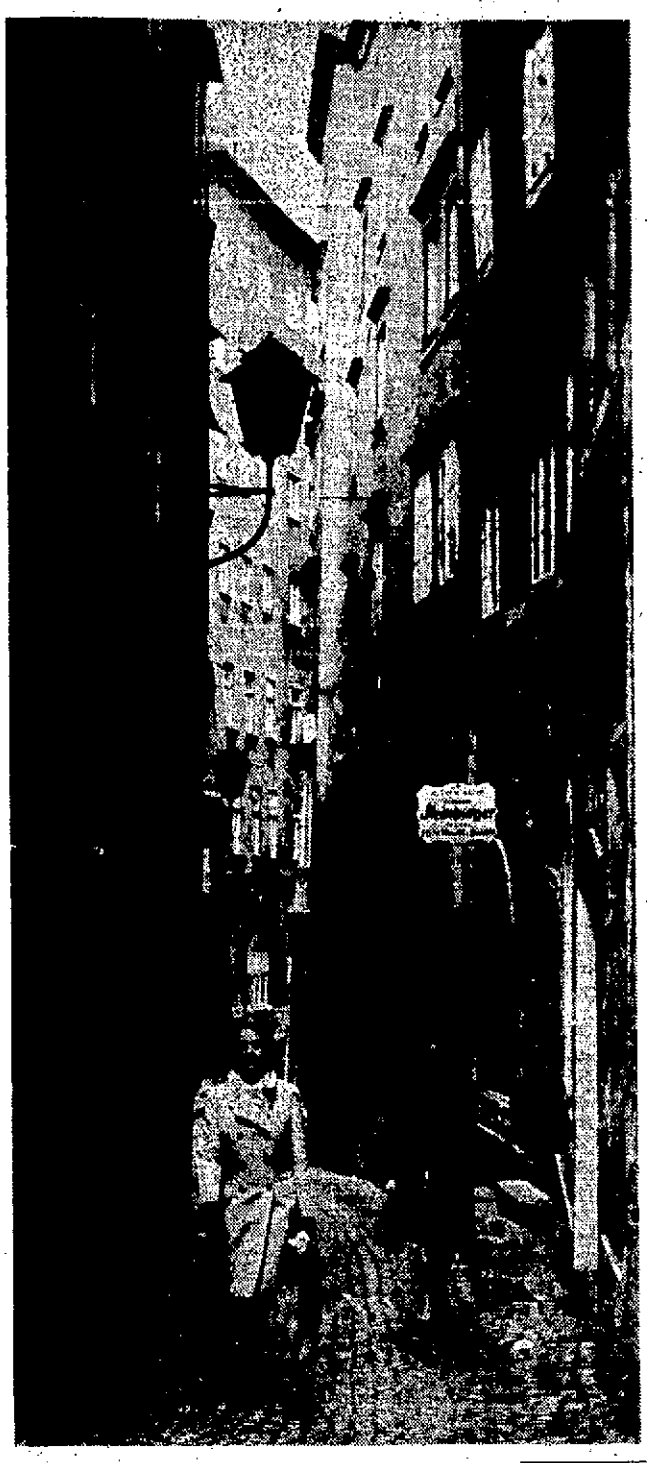

I'd like to think such steps would help, but I think student escorts for the elderly could well join them as gang victims. The street punks hit anything, anybody. They don't care; they're feeding a dope habit, a yen for quick money or maybe just a kick for kick's sake.

I agree with Harry that a revived California Civilian Conservation Corps is a big step ahead in giving jobless youth and potential troublemakers an alternative to crime and violence. But the program is geared for only 1,000 youngsters. We need 100 times that in CCC jobs.

Maybe a Neighborhood Youth Service Corps could help in Long Beach. Cleanup, paintup, sweepup, washup work at, say, $2 an hour would serve urban renewal and keep kids out of malicious mischief. It's better than jail for a restless kid with time and emptiness on his hands and the streets to roam.

But the fact is, neither Harry Gornish nor I have a sure solution. Like you, we're groping for answers, groping against time and a bash in the head.

If you have any workable ideas on how to combat juvenile crime, write or telephone me. And hurry — time's running out on all of us.

Festival time in Salzburg

SALZBURG, Austria — Under a ceiling frescoed with buxom ladies clothed in gossamer clouds and warriors in flowing red tunics, we listened to an ensemble from Sweden play Baroque music. It was composed by Dowland in the 17th century as an accompaniment for falsetto voices.

I never have been addicted to Baroque chamber music. However, the Music Festival in this lovely Austrian city is famous throughout the world. Our hosts were not about to let us escape a single evening's program.

Under the influence of romantic cherubs stroking the manes of plaster lions over the stage and the 18-foot ceiling, I found myself floating in spirit back to the 17th and 18th centuries. In those days, the ladies in the audience would have been corseted into padded skirts.

When I opened my eyes to match reality with the dream, I was astonished to find a youthful, jean-clad audience.

WHEN I flew here from Zurich on Austrian Airlines, Mozart's music filled the plane while we awaited takeoff. When I took a short walk before dressing for dinner, classical music resounded from walled courtyards all through the city.

Salzburg is crowded and I am staying at a second-class hotel, the Bayrischer Hof at 12 Elisabethstrasse. It has an old section with a charming outdoor restaurant under the trees, but the new part is the upper two floors of a commercial building located next door.

My room has a bath with all the modern accouterments. The bed is furnished with a down puff, typical of these Germanic countries, and the furniture is a sort of un-chic '30s. However, the room is spotlessly clean, quiet, comfortable and reasonably priced, which is remarkable in Salzburg during the festival.

I am doing things here that I would never do at home, like attending the Baroque chamber music recital. An Austrian acquaintance is seated on a chair in the row in front of me. His body is moving with the music, much as our American youths would react to Rock.

I envy him. He is experiencing the music in the most profound sense. There is nothing brash about a harpsichord — no high decibel nor demanding electronic beat. The Austrian is responding to it intellectually, rather than purely emotionally.

Most Americans are not educated to hear these sounds. Following his lead, I try to play the "inner game" of music by not consciously listening.

IT WORKS. I begin to hear the flute, the bass, the harpsichord. The subtleties escape me, but I am accepting it for what it is. To my surprise, I am enjoying it. Then I look up at the delicately painted clouds overhead and stately gilt columns supporting them. To paraphrase Shakespeare, would Baroque music in any other setting sound so sweet?

Music of the 17th and 18th centuries played on antique instruments and sung by a true falsetto is rarely heard. For that matter, a true falsetto is next to impossible to find. The Swedish singer who performs with this ensemble possesses one of two natural falsettos in the world.

During the Renaissance, an operation was performed so the voices of eunuchs would maintain their boyhood high. That may explain Baroque music's subsequent drop in popularity.

If not this group, other musicians of equal significance to the music world will be performing during the Salzburg Music Festival next summer. From this experience, I have learned that it would be regrettable for a visitor to miss any part of the program, even the Chamber music recitals. Here, in a setting where many famous classical composers actually performed their works for the first time, music assumes a new dimension for any American.

Too much ethics?

"With too much policing, the Senate will lose its appeal for the best qualified, the younger men, those with aspirations."

This warning was sounded last week by Sen. John Stennis, D-Miss., to a special Senate panel charged with devising a new code of ethics.

The question is, how much is "too much"?

Certainly congressmen should be required to disclose any conflict of interest they might have on any pending legislation — and to refrain from voting on such matters.

CONGRESSMEN ALSO should be required to disclose the source of their funds. There must be reasonable guidelines, however. If an officer of a labor union takes a legislator to lunch and picks up the tab, we can't believe this will "buy" that congressman's vote. If, however, a congressman gets a large contribution from labor, or is making a series of speeches to labor unions for which he is being paid a large sum, the public has a right to this information.

There has been no indication, to date, that the Senate or the House is considering unreasonable standards for the conduct of members. In recent years, there seems to have been virtually no policing at all.

On Monday, the House Committee on Administrative Review begins two days of meetings to discuss recommendations for standards on financial disclosure, limits on outside income, acceptance of gifts and general office accounts.

Peter G. Peterson, chairman of the Commission on Executive, Legislative and Judicial Salaries, which has recommended pay hikes for congressmen, said any such raises must be accompanied by reform of ethical standards.

Failure to address these questions, Peterson said, has contributed to "an alarming drop in the levels of trust and confidence held by Americans in their public officials."

Peterson said that "at the very least," there should be disclosure of "significant" aspects of income, debt, investment, capital transactions, gifts and reimbursements for travel and expense.

WE TRUST THAT when Sen. Stennis expresses concern about "too much policing," he does not object to disclosure of significant aspects of income, debt and other financial matters. These are matters of ethics for which Congress must set guidelines, and must provide for policing.

Of course, there is no guarantee than a code of ethics will make all legislators honest. There is even a chance that adoption of a code of ethics could lull citizens into a sense of false security that all is now well on Capitol Hill. Vigilance still is the price of honest government.

Press, governor square off

SACRAMENTO — Some folks are less fond of Jerry Brown than other folks, it seems, and the less-fond group has been getting on the press lately for allowing itself to be manipulated by the governor.

"Why," asked one critic scornfully, "did you guys make such a big deal of it when the governor spent the night in a San Francisco tenement or dropped in unannounced at some state mental hospitals?

"He's 38 years old and he's just finding out that poor people live in slums and that slums are not nice places? He's just discovering that a mental hospital is not the Beverly Hilton?

"And instead of the press asking him where he's been all his life, you help him score a public relations coup."

Other observers have taken to saying much the same thing. That the observers are lacking in affection for Jerry Brown does not diminish the validity of their contention that the governor has not been subjected to the same intensive press scrutiny that, for instance, Ronald Reagan was.

THE PRESS IS a sensitive social organ, and when it is charged with having been manipulated, it reacts with some violence.

It reacted with violence Thursday, at a press conference called by the governor.

Political leaders since the year one have followed a custom of identifying themselves with commendable efforts in which the government they head is engaged, and disassociating themelves with activities producing an adverse public response.

The news conference was called, a press release stated, for the purpose of having Gov. Brown announce that California was loaning a considerable amount of natural gas to "weather-stricken eastern and midwestern states."

Utilities within the state, the California Public Utilities Commission, federal authorities and President Carter had already announced that western natural-gas surpluses were going to be piped to places where supplies were short, so what the governor was going to say was hardly news.

But, while he declines to participate in some of the ritual usually engaged in by those in high office, he does choose to participate in others, including the custom of claiming credit where none is due.

Bob Schmidt

View From Our State Bureau

The occasion also permitted him to make a plea to Californians to practice conservation because of the emergency, and he wore a sweater under his suit jacket to emphasize the point that the thermostat had been turned down in his office.

The governor doesn't have many press conferences, although he makes himself available frequently in and about his office.

But now the press had him up there in front of them, vulnerable. At least part of what he was saying was suspect, and the reporters chose that time to show, by gosh, that they were not simply tools of Jerry Brown.

There have always been guarded exchanges between Brown and reporters, and sometimes impatience on both sides. But there has rarely been open hostility. Thursday, there was open hostility.

Brown obviously was startled, first that the subject chosen by the press for elaboration was not natural gas but his asserted effort to be publicly identified with California's good-samaritan effort, and second by the reporters' ferociousness. They refused to let the subject go, and nagged and ragged and chewed on Brown until he finally said, in exasperation, that his questioners were "quibbling about whether it (the decision to ship natural gas east) is an instruction, request or a communication."

Finally, he was asked if he were not trying to claim credit "for something that was going to be done anyway to help these dying people, for something that was already done?"

"I don't think this is the time for journalistic credit or political credit," he said, and tried vainly to steer the questioning to another aspect of the subject.

There was grumbling on both sides when the news conference ended, and it was clear that, 25 months after it began, Jerry Brown's "honeymoon" with the California press was over.

He may not realize it yet, but it's good for him.

He knows now, or should know, that if he wants to claim credit for his administration for state actions people approve of, he is also going to have to accept responsibility for state actions or proposals the public deems less than commendable.

WHAT COMES immediately to mind, as an example, is the State Transportation Plan recently proposed by the State Transportation Board under the obvious influence of the Brown administration. Some parts of the plan were not explained very well, there was strong adverse public reaction, and the governor tried to throw his hands up in horror and say, "That's not my doing; don't hold me accountable for it!"

If the public had found the plan to be a panacea for all of California's transportation troubles, Jerry Brown would have had a grin from ear to ear and happily accepted congratulations for another accomplishment of his administration.

Well, it doesn't work that way, and now that he knows it, perhaps another ritual will be dispensed with and he'll have a little more time to do what he says he wants to do: Make California a better place to live for all the people who live here.

Which, after all, is what reporters living in California want, too.

Draft dodgers aren't heroes

By BOB WIEDRICH
Knight News Service

The draft dodgers apparently want a brass band before they'll come home. President Carter's pardon isn't enough to suit them.

They evidently want a draft evader's bill of rights. They want to be honored as heroes. They want garlands of flowers and rose petals at their feet.

They want more for their perfidy than was accorded those who actually served their country.

And that, we suspect, is something the American people will never give them. The GIs who did their duty have been maltreated enough by unemployment and public indifference to their lot.

So, if the lads who elected to take a duck to far off places to avoid military service have any sense at all, they'll accept President Carter's full pardon and shut up.

That is, of course, if they want to come back to the United States and resume the lives they interrupted six and seven years ago. Otherwise, let them remain in Canada or Sweden or wherever and continue the turncoat existence they adopted when they found the thought of being drafted repugnant.

BECAUSE HEROES they are not. They can rationalize otherwise, but the chorus of whining that has risen since the Carter pardon from the enclaves of draft dodgers around the world is only serving to curdle a few million more stomachs.

And such bellyaching can only serve to stiffen the public resistance to the pardon that already is growing each day in a nation grown weary of whiners.

In a transparent attempt to bolster their own position in the public eye, the draft evaders are also demanding amnesty for military deserters, men who took an oath to serve their flag and then defected.

They say that a pardon implies guilt and that they are guilty of nothing. They assert that their wisdom and perception permitted them to discern before others that the Viet Nam War was wrong.

They also declare that it was their right to selectively break those laws that did not happen to coincide with their points of view instead of working within the democratic system to change the course of government policy.

THEY WANTED TO do their own thing. They did so. Now, they want to return. But, only on their own terms will they elect to resume enjoying the full benefits of the freedom for which others gave their lives.

It is an arrogance that transcends all that is rational.

The United States has extended itself for them far beyond what many of its citizens consider reasonable. President Carter has given the draft dodgers an absolute, unconditional pass in a spirit of conciliation.

Yet, like spoiled children, they are not sharp enough to recognize a break when they get one.

They think they have the upper hand. They think they can further pressure Carter into giving them the whole ball game.

Frankly, we think they are overplaying their hand. Carter is not about to be pushed further.

For he is a man who obviously is trying to build during his first weeks in office the image of a strong and assertive leader who will guide the nation out of a wilderness of doubt and divisiveness.

The last thing we imagine Carter needs is to be pummeled into a posture of giving in to a bunch of guys who not only would not serve their country, but ran rather than face the consequences of the acts they claim to have committed out of conviction.

If they shove hard enough, the draft dodgers may turn off Carter, just as they are turning off a host of Americans who initially were sympathetic to their cause but are now getting a bellyful of their crybaby tactics.

ONE OTHER THING: The transition from draft evader to useful citizen for those who choose to return is going to be tough enough. Already, there are people in this country demanding that draft dodgers be publicly identified as such upon their return.

The tide of whatever public sentiment is with them could easily be reversed. Thus, why make it rougher on themselves upon returning to a country beset by unemployment and filled with Viet Nam veterans who cannot find jobs?

Some people will be sympathetic to the draft dodger's job hunt. Others will not share the same feeling. Some might be antagonistic to shirkers. And some prospective employers might prove to have fought in the Viet Nam War or lost a son there.

So, it does not make sense for the draft evaders to push their luck by risking further public alienation.

Jimmy Carter definitely stuck out his neck for them. If this is their way of saying thanks, who needs it?

Advice from Aesop

"We often give our enemies the means of our own destruction," wrote Aesop many years ago.

A decision by the California Fair Political Practices Commission last week recalls the proverb by Aesop, and causes us some concern.

The commission ruled that a Communist candidate for public office — unlike any other California politician — does not have to disclose fully the sources of his campaign contributions, as required by state law.

The ruling, approved on a 3-2 vote, was based on the concern that disclosure of contributors might subject them to possible harassment from the FBI, reprisals by employers, violence by citizens, or put a crimp in efforts to raise funds.

Under the law, the candidate concerned — attorney Michael C. Miller of the Communist Labor Party, an unsuccessful candidate for the San Francisco school board last November — would have had to publicly disclose the names, addresses and occupations of anyone who contributed $50 or more to his campaign.

The FPPC exempted Miller from this requirement. It said he will have to report the dates and amounts of contributions of $50 or more — but need not identify the donors publicly. Instead, he will file a secret, sealed report of their identities to preserve what the FPPC called "an audit trail, if future investigation proves necessary."

Miller will have to disclose full identities of contributors of $1,000 or more, but we suspect there would be few such contributions in a school board election.

Two other Communist Labor Party candidates — one in San Jose and the other, Luis Javier Rodriguez, who is seeking a seat on the Los Angeles Board of Education in an April 5 election — have requested similar exemptions.

Some of our bureaucrats always seem to be leaning over backwards to be nice to the Communists. We would just like to see it work the other way for a change.

Republican's low political IQ

Perhaps the Republican Party needs a good "shrink." A psychiatrist, who is a registered independent, might tell the Republicans that they have a death wish for their party, and that a dyed-in-the-wool, Grade A, "I'll go down with the ship" doctrinaire Republican does not want to see the party survive.

There is a flaw in this suggestion. Republicans would consult only a Republican "head shrinker," who would be politically myopic.

It is grotesque that no Republican has ever been able to perceive what every Democrat knows, that the GOP could increase membership by doing as little as no longer using the denigrating phrase, "the Democrat Party."

The kindest Democrats say that Republicans are often intelligent, well educated, good citizens, but that they are to be pitied because they have a political intelligence quotient equivalent to that of a guinea pig.

Other Democrats charge that doctrinaire Republicans use the phrase "Democrat Party" out of the pure malice that is one of the cardinal sins. As an example, at a congressional hearing a few days ago, Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., began a sentence about "my good friend, Bob Strauss, when he was chairman of the Democrat Party," and then be broke off and corrected it to "Democratic Party."

"Now that the election is over, I'll use Democratic again," the former vice presidential nominee said.

If Republicans want more registered Republicans, it is elementary that they will have to come from the ranks of independents and Democrats. Most independents are former complaining Democrats who passed beyond the bounds of complaining tolerance. Even so, there are so many complaining Democrats that they constitute a party wing. Many have said they are perfectly willing to vote for a good Republican, who is also modest and gracious such as President Ford, but that they detest the arrogance of Republicans who say, "Democrat Party."

A lifelong complaining Democrat said she shies like an Indian pony that sees a rattlesnake when she hears that offensive phrase because it demeans the Jeffersonian concepts held by her ancestors. This woman is between the devil and the deep blue sea.

Letters to the editor

Competence first

During recent weeks a number of articles have appeared in the Independent, Press-Telegram relative to the Long Beach Harbor Department, its plans, functions, etc. The most prominent, of course, have been those pertaining to the planned Sohio project. The ones that concern me most, however, are those dealing with the selection of persons for the position of harbor commissioner (the latest being on Feb. 1) and also regarding public hearings at the budget meetings (on Jan. 30).

Let me insert here that I am not now, nor have I ever been, an employe of the harbor department or of the city of Long Beach.

As a lifetime resident of Long Beach, however, I have watched our port grow and develop, and am proud of and grateful for the accomplishments of the harbor department. It is of real concern to me now, that we make sure we do not embark on a course of meddling or of politically jeopardizing the department.

It is important that we ask ourselves, "what has made the Long Beach Harbor Department succeed while other ports failed?" "Why has Long Beach Harbor been developed into one of the world's finest ports while other ports have fallen into disarray?" Whatever it is, let us maintain it.

For one thing, our harbor department operates under a city charter provision that rightly stipulates that it (harbor department) shall function as an autonomous entity. In this fashion political interference has been kept to a minimum, and dedicated, knowledgeable businessmen have conducted the department affairs and future planning in a realistic, no-nonsense manner. They have thoroughly understood what makes a business fail or succeed, and have practiced methods that have assured success.

The Board of Harbor Commissioners and the staff of the harbor department are composed of persons of high professional competence, fine moral character and finely tuned business acumen. Over the years, these men have functioned for their day while at the same time, laying and executing sound plans for the benefit of future generations. We are even now enjoying the benefits planned for us during the 1920s and 1930s.

It is my fervent hope in the selection of future harbor commissioners that political, ethnic, and popular cause considerations will be put aside and persons will be selected on the basis of merit, professional competence and what each has to offer that will realistically benefit the commission and the harbor department. I further hope that we will not encourage needless or pointless meddling in the affairs of the department, but will permit some to operate with the flexibility, professional expertise and sound business judgment that has consistently produced a job well done.

Perhaps I should add that the harbor department is financially completely self-sustaining, does not receive any input from city taxes, and operates upon port-generated revenues.

A parent's view

I am a parent who pays the customary taxes to support our public school system, and who also believes that the amount required by our Catholic schools for tuition does not exceed the benefits which the Catholic school system gives my children. I am deeply grateful for the atmosphere which permeates here — one of respect, dedication and concern with spiritual values.

I am convinced that the Catholic school system is an indispensable component to our American commitment to education. The non-public school system supplements in an important way the public school system by providing a diversity and a choice to those of us who prefer one system over the other.

Those of us who send our children to a Catholic school lessen the burden to the taxpayer in a tremendous way. At present, there are 293 Catholic schools in the Los Angeles area. There are 110,629 students enrolled in these schools. The expense of the education of these children rests in a very great degree on those of us who pay for their tuition, the donated services of many who see the value of this kind of education, and the church which subsidizes the schools in a very significant way.

I value our public schools for the tremendous work they are doing, but I choose the Catholic school system because of the Christian values and discipline which they give my children.

Parking problems

On a recent visit to City Hall, I was informed that there had been no complaints concerning the new Long Beach weekly street-cleaning service. I can hardly believe this, because I haven't talked to anyone who isn't perturbed.

I strongly encourage other upset citizens to write to their city officials.

I have lived in Naples for 36 years and we have been satisfied with our clean streets. The people who live in this area take care of their property, as anyone can plainly observe.

We, as citizens, were never asked whether we wanted this new service in which, on a certain day, all cars must be moved from one side of the street. We had absolutely no say on this issue and did not vote for it. If the vote were placed on a ballot today, it would be promptly defeated.

In this highly taxed area of Naples, we have a serious parking problem; as do the people who live on the peninsula. The streets are very narrow and parking areas are extremely limited. Also, a great number of people frequent the beaches during the summer (swimmers, sailboat enthusiasts, etc.) and take up parking spaces, which presents serious problems for those who reside here. Having to move cars on a certain day of each week for street cleaning service is difficult enough during the winter, but impossible during the summer months.

We are taxed exorbitantly on our property and now have the added burden of being ticketed if we fail to move our vehicles and fined $5, which is ridiculous.

Editorial helped

The Independent, Press-Telegram's support for local hospitals over the years has been a major factor in the turnabout of the city's former mediocre medical service to today's position of excellence. Certainly, Community Hospital would have never been able to achieve the broad coverage — such as occurred because of your editorial today (Feb. 2) — that the I, P-T has given the development of our cancer programs over the past six years.

Apparently, our expanded Cancer Detection Center has struck a real need both in our community and in surrounding areas. Since the news has spread, our telephone switchboard has been swamped with inquiries. More than 600 appointments have been made with calls and letters continuing to flow in.

Since the hospital is committed to continuing the examinations on a below—cost basis. Your editoral is not only timely, but greatly appreciated by the hospital staff in relaying the need for help to the people of Long Beach. It is a fine example of how a local newspaper can best serve the needs of its community in depth in contrast to a large metropolitan newspaper which attempts to cover outlying areas with suburban sections. We thank you for your ongoing support and offer ours in return.

Papers 'aid criminals'

Why oh why, do the newspapers of this country foster crime by printing instructions on how to commit crimes?

For example, the article you published today (Jan. 30) on the front page, "Clever thieves use tax refunds in royal scams," written by Richard D. Lyons of the New York Times, gives details about how to commit a crime.

If "freedom of the press" entitles newspapers to publish detailed instructions on how to commit a crime, it is no wonder that so many Americans have no respect for the newspapers of this country.

Missed the concert

I was dismayed and surprised that this paper had no review of the Robert Merrill concert with the Long Beach Symphony. It is fine that you review concerts at El Camino College, Ambassador Auditorium and the Music Center, but certainly you have an obligation to Long Beach musical events. The next concert on Feb. 19 features Eugene Fodor, an unbelievably gifted violinist. I do hope your paper will have a qualified music critic there and report to your readers what excellent music can be heard here in Long Beach.

The full story

The article on the "People's Gallery" in the Leisure section of the Jan. 28 I, P-T missed the point of the Long Beach Gallery since the story has a much wider scope and meaning than filling a room with art for the "man in the street."

The main thrust of the marvelous experiment happening at the Long Beach Gallery is the cooperation between the Recreation Department providing space and the Long Beach Art Association in providing money and manpower for the benefit of the entire community.

In a city becoming known as "anti-art" it is a pleasure to work with Recreation Department Director Robert Van Antwerp and Robert Barrett, creative arts director. They are not anti-culture.

However, in these trying tax-times, the public should know that the operation of this public gallery is mainly funded by the Long Beach Art Association. Our dues accounted for the main expense of refurbishing the gallery and is paying for the programs presented monthly featuring artists of the stature of Robert E. Wood in February and Claire Falkenstein (April) and others. We sponsor, organize and take responsibility for the bus tours to various museums offered at a minimum cost to the public.

All of our meetings are free and open to the public but we pay rent for the auditorium where they are held.

Our volunteers are pleased to man the gallery, pay the jurors and hang six shows of professional caliber during the year to further the love of good art.

The Long Beach Art Association Open Show, now at the Gallery until Feb. 28 is representative of the whole of Southern California art. Jurored by Tom Enman of the Laguna Beach Museum, it is good art and not another "hobby show." The Art Association has funded and manned the entire show in the space at 155 Queen's Way Landing provided by the Recreation Department.

The scholarship show held each spring showcases work of local high school students. The other four shows are of interest to everyone, novice to professional artist.

Through our efforts, the Long Beach Gallery was made a member of the Western Association of Art Museums and eligible for their traveling shows when we can raise enough money.

I assure our members and friends that we have not been absorbed by the Recreation Department, but that both organizations are working to build on the Long Beach Art Association's 52 years of expertise and the available resources of the best recreation department in the nation to provide an art center for both the artists and citizens in the city. We welcome the assistance (both time and money) of everyone concerned with art in our community.

It is not an embarrassment of riches to have a "forward looking" museum and a "now" gallery to show and promote local artists. I urge our friends to support both of us.

Ancient atrocities

From the 5th through 17th centuries, waves of Huns, Moors, Khazars, Seljuk Turks, Mongols, Ottoman Turks and Tartars tried to invade and conquer Europe.

Many of the invasions seem to have been wars of extermination, for whenever the horde captured a village or town, they frequently put all the inhabitants — men, women and children — to the sword, sparing only artisans and young girls, preferably blondes. These were taken back to the invaders' homelands as captives.

Even so, let's not hate the outer world for these unprovoked atrocities of long ago.

Many reasons have been forwarded for these persistent assaults. They couldn't have been for food, for the relatively poor soil of Europe was certainly no inducement. They couldn't have been for revenge, for this was long before the alleged white crimes of "imperialism" or "colonialism" could be cited to justify such attempts. They couldn't have been for loot, for the Byzantine, Arabic and Persian civilizations were far richer than poor, medieval Europe.

No, they must have had another reason for trying to conquer and exterminate Europeans. But take heart; the outer world abandoned these frontal assaults long ago. Besides, isn't it a relief to know that we're not Europeans?

By the way, I found the TV series, "Roots," to be very interesting. I didn't realize there were so many ways to say, "Sic 'em, sic 'em!" without really seeming to. Evidently, in some quarters, the crime rate in America isn't deemed high enough.

And the beat goes on, baby.

Seek Spanish books

For years, we have donated to a Boys' Home in Mexico. It is called Hogar Infantil. We started our donations when an article appeared in the Sunday magazine regarding the need and worthiness of this home.

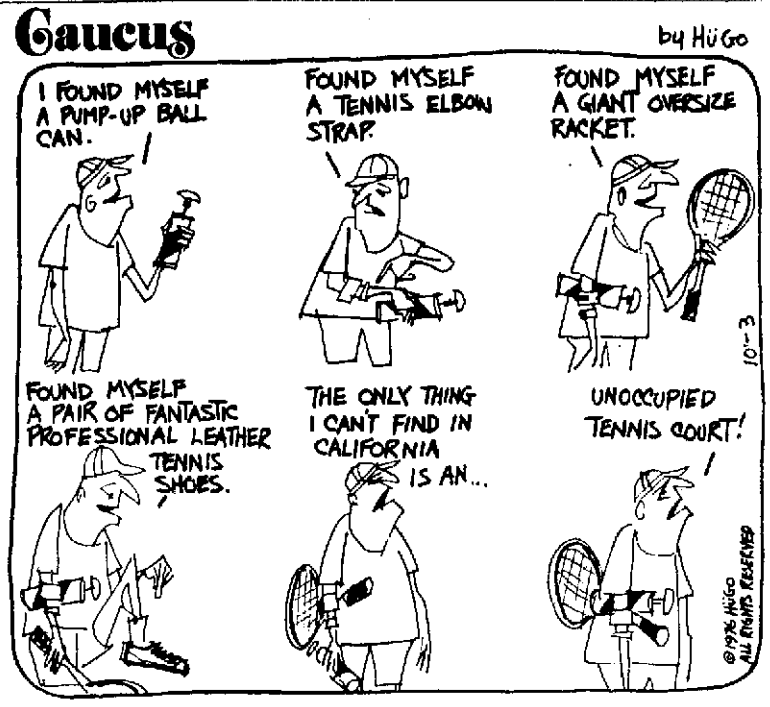

We have found that the article was true in every respect. The home now has 100 boys and will top 100 by late fall of this year.

Now, the reason for this letter. The junior high school that 30 of these boys attend has no library. Funds are being raised, but the immediate requirement is for books in the Spanish language that would be suitable for this library.

If our Spanish-speaking readers have any books they would like to donate, please bring them to 3042 Chestnut Ave., Long Beach. We will see that they get to the school in Mexico. Books of every type will be appreciated.

Women in danger

Last week, I attended a class with a woman friend at CSULB. The reason for the attendance is disconcerting. The woman refuses to walk the campus at night. Some of you may say, "Then she shouldn't take night classes." I can walk those halls free of fear, and believe women should have this same basic right of movement.

The murders of three women at Santa Barbara explain a depressive example about the rising incidents of rape and aggression towards women. Rapes take place throughout Long Beach, but the focus seems to occur around the colleges. The City Council has a basic responsibility to provide safety to its community. The city derives many benefits from having a university within its boundaries. Women need to know that they can attend classes without fear.

What can be done to improve the safety at night? At CSULB, the lighting on and off campus is horrible. Bellflower and Margo, two streets that students park on, have no lighting at all in some areas. The tram service on campus stops at 4 p.m. and no other means of travel to parking is available. The parking lots are not guarded in the evenings either. Why has not better lighting been placed on and off campus? Why is the tram service stopped at such an early hour? What is the responsibility of the city to provide these services?

The result, psychic and physical, to a victim of rape is monumental. The anguish and loss to a community by a damaged mind is worth any cost to the city to provide the minimal safety. Lighting, guards and transportation are the minimum.

The facts state that the university is unsafe at night and rapes do occur at the campus. The city can no longer ignore its responsibility to the women in this community. Santa Barbara speaks a warning to Long Beach.

Women must have freedom of movement and safety within this city. The City Council must begin to focus on alleviating rape here. Funding its share to the college could be a significant step to the elimination of this horrible crime.

Bitter disappointment

El Dorado tennis courts are now available for all Orange County residents and out-of-towners. Through the new city reservation system, our courts may be filled at any time. The taxpayers' boycott has raised some serious issues ignored by our tax-paid representatives.

The condition of the courts do not warrant the maximum charge of $3 an hour. Parking is sadly lacking. Two incomplete planters are mosquito pits. The sidewalk is a flood area. There are no restrooms or locker area. Loose dogs are barking, fighting and defecating throughout the park. Noisy motorcycles speed down the streets and cruise without restriction over the grass.

We have paid our taxes and waited a long time for a beautiful tennis facility. Now we must pay to play and make reservations on the same basis as out-of-towners, and our facility is a bitter disappointment.

The Latino beat

As I sat there watching the American Music Awards, I thought to have caught the words Salsa music. But as I continued to watch and listen, it was to no avail.

It angered me to think that we Latinos (Mexican-Americans, Puerto Riquenos, Cubanos and Latin Americans) were left out of the awards.

The three categories were pop/rock, soul and country. Why couldn't there be a fourth category: Salsa music, or Latino?

Isn't our music a part of America? Then why weren't we recognized? What minorities or majorities did the producers of this program poll? I don't think they made too much of an effort to poll the Latinos. They might have been surprised to find out that we do have singers like Ralphi Pagan or Johnny Pacheco, etc.

What I'm trying to say is: Come on, Latinos! Wake up! Get yourselves together! Get yourselves known! We are all one, and it's time to get our music, our style awarded and rewarded.

I have yet to see an awards program recognize us. Maybe we should help them see us.

A place to unwind

I just read the article about Chief Kortz's directive to our policemen. I can see the screams and hollers from the citizens now.

In the first place, I imagine (no, I would bet on it) that the chief and this newspaper have exaggerated the situation. If you think about it, wouldn't someone have noticed long ago 100 policemen having an orgy in a parking lot? Even 20?

I can see one solution for this problem. Since there are more than just a few policemen who enjoy drinking beer after work, why not give them a place to go? Bars and cocktail lounges are closed when many policemen get off work, so they have to find their own place to go. And their main reason is to unwind and just talk shop with each other. Sounds a lot like you and I, doesn't it?

They're going to drink and no matter who tells them to stop. And if the department allowed them to have a building, the drinking and "sex party" problem would be under control.

A gripe about cops

This is a gripe about the Long Beach Police Department. It seems just because they drive a black and white, they can get away with anything they do.

On Feb. 3 at 12:30 p.m. in the 4200 block on Atlantic Avenue, black and white car #42 parked in the red zone directly in front of a fire hydrant just to go to Russell's for a sandwich. I have seen the police make left turns when not permitted and make turns in the middle of the street just to park on the opposite side. Are they privileged persons that they get away with these things? Let a private citizen do these things and they get a ticket. I say they are no better than the private citizen when driving on the streets.

Top cat's secretary

Mary's boss is purrty good fellow

By MOLLY BURRELL
Staff Writer

Mary Holtman thinks her boss is a pussycat.

She met him for the first time last week and they hit it off fine: she rubbed his neck and he purred.

She's been answering his fan mail for more than a year. She herself was a fan long before that, admiring him on TV, secretly wondering if he was really that cool a cat.

MARY HOLTMAN

Suddenly, there he was in her office on Terminal Island, en route from Hawaii to Illinois, "looking just like he looks on the screen. . . . maybe a little thinner. He's really very trim."

She adds: "He has this great cool. All the flash bulbs going off and everyone making a big fuss, and he was just taking it like it was all very normal."

That's what happens when you're top cat and your name is Morris.

What also happens with Morris is that he gets 100 letters a day from all over the country — including proposals, propositions and requests for autographed pictures.

IT IS this sort of detail that Mary handles for him, writing personal replies to about 25 per cent of the letter-writers and mailing form letters to the rest, along with color prints of himself in a haughty pose. All are signed with a rubber stamp paw print.

Now that they're finally personally acquainted, Mary says, it is all right to reveal some of Morris's background: he's 13 years old (making him a theoretical 91 on the human scale), has made 46 television commercials, hates to dance, prefers tuna to all the other products he sells, is in excellent health and very sexy.

His owner, Bob Martwick, who paid $10 for him at an animal shelter 10 years ago, says he'll find a lady cat for Morris sometime this spring because it's time there was a Morris, Jr.

Morris, obviously not your average "take-a-letter" and "be-sure-you're-back-in-15-minutes" boss, wasn't much interested in his mail the day he came to the office, Mary says. "I was hoping he'd give me a little help on a couple of the answers but he never even meowed all the time he was here — just purred," she said.

The ones she doesn't need help with come from youngsters and oldsters, many of whom send pictures of their own cats, cats that they think look like Morris. Also a lot of fan mail from New York, where a lot of people are named Morris.

Her favorite, a neatly typed, well-spelled letter from "Trooper" in Natick, Mass., goes like this:

"Dear Morris, I am a five year old dog. I like to watch television with my lovely master Debbie Marks. I am a mongrel. A collie cross. I happen to think I am very handsome. A lot of other people and animals think so too! I have a hard time typing so I asked Debbie to type for me. Well, to get back to you, (us). As I said I watch television a lot. I have seen many a cat in my day and I have three cat brothers. And I know a good cat when I see one. You are a good cat. A great one even. I like the way you look, "talk," walk, and everything. I think we would make a great couple. I can see it now, "Morris and Trooper, first dog and cat to get married!" We would make a million!!! What do you say Morrey? I know it will work out just great. Signed TROOPER P.S. FORGET THE WHOLE LETTER, I JUST FOUND OUT I WAS A BOY."

In Mary's reply, Morris also apologized for typing, saying he "tends to put his paw in it," and would "really rather just lie down and catch a nap."

Mary, 24, a published poet, lives with a silver-furred feline named "Shadow," adopted from a litter at the pet food research lab next to the cannery where she works.

SHE CAME to Long Beach more than six years ago from Pennsylvania, graduated from Lakewood High, has gone to Long Beach City College, and plans to enroll at Long Beach State University for a creative writing course.

One of her works, "Belief," was published in Seventeen magazine, and others have appeared in American Girl and the Lakewood

High literary magazine. She got her first typewriter at 12 and has written 75 poems, none of them since she went to work for Morris.

Mary got her job by answering an I,P-T ad, but had no idea she'd end up working for the world's most famous feline.

Now when people ask her what she does, she gets a kick out of letting the cat out of the bag.

Ex-LBSU student becomes Canadian

By WALT MURRAY
Staff Writer

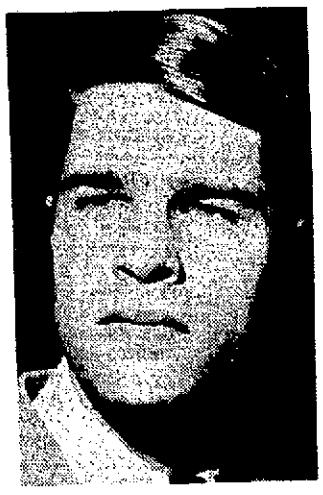

When friends find out that Toronto psychologist Tony Formo used to be an American, Formo shrugs his shoulders and says, "I can't help it — it's a birth defect."

Formo, who left Long Beach and the United States the day after his final exams at Long Beach State University in 1968, celebrated the bicentennial by becoming a Canadian citizen.

Ultraconservatives would call Formo a draft dodger. He left the country to avoid being conscripted for the Vietnam war. And he doesn't care much that President Carter decreed Jan. 21 that he can come home again without getting arrested.

"I'm home already," the former LBSU student leader said in a telephone interview from Toronto. "I don't know any expatriates up here who intend to return permanently to the States."

Judging from Canadian press reports, Formo is typical of the Pacific Terrace 'on schedule'

By DENISE KUSEL
Staff Writer

The circus was in town, but the days when elephants helped hoist the Big Top were long since gone.

Instead of a tent, there was a room called a convention center inside the 1931-vintage Long Beach Auditorium. The only way to get the elephants into the building was to make them get on their knees and crawl up a makeshift wooden ramp.

Everything was going along smoothly until one elephant panicked and stood up, lodging himself firmly between the ramp and the ceiling. It took the trainer two hours to calm the elephant to get him back on his knees and continue up the ramp.

The Long Beach Auditorium has gone the way of the Big Top.

The wrecker's ball crashed into its walls 25 months ago.

Rising in its place is the mammoth Pacific Terrace Convention Center, a three-building complex which will include the already built Long Beach Arena.

BUILDING operations are 77 per cent completed.

Surrounded by churning cement mixers, scaffolding and electrical cords draped over naked cement stair casings, Dick Shaff rubbed his hands together against an early morning chill and surveyed the scene.

"We're right on schedule," said Shaff, assistant manager of the Pacific Terrace complex.

"Things are moving along smoothly, without a hitch."

He'd probably have knocked on wood, but there wasn't any — not yet.

Wood accents will be a few of the finishing touches to the $51.5 million project expected to be completed by next January.

Shaff walked into a big room that resembles an airport hanger. Usually a placid man, Shaff became animated.

"This is great, just great," said Shaff. "It's 100,000 square feet with a movable wall. We can break the facility down into two exhibit halls. Run two events at once.

"We'll be able to run five events at the same time once the whole center is completed.

"The ceiling will be finished with acoustical tile. The doors are 132 linear feet — large enough to drive 30 semis through at the same time.

"Did I ever tell you the story about the elephant?" Shaff asked.

He didn't wait for an answer. Instead Shaff adjusted his hard hat and continued the tour, working his way through a maze of air-conditioning ducts.

Outside the exhibition hall, Shaff scrambled over several piles of waist-high dirt and shifted his attention to the theater complex, expected to be the focal point of Long Beach cultural activity for drama and music buffs.

It also will be the home of both the Long Beach Symphony and the Civic Light Opera associations.

"We're standing on a drive-in hydraulic loader," Shaff announced. "We can move entire truckloads of scenery into the theaters. In the old auditorium, we'd have to hoist the stage props onto the second floor over the brass marquee by crane and drop it onto the balcony. We lost a few marquees that way. ...

"Then there was the time the elephant got stuck between the floor and the ceiling," Shaff's voice trailed off.

"This will be the Center Theater," he said, walking into a conical-shaped room. "It has a seating capacity of 850 and has a five-sided stage that thrusts out into the audience.

"The whole theater will be carpeted. Seating will be in a matching color of blue," Shaff said. "This is where we'll have our chamber music concerts, recitals, drama series. It's like the Mark Taper Forum at the (Los Angeles) Music

Long Beach Board of Education incumbents Elizabeth Wallace and James Zarifes have issued appeals for their re-election in one of the quietest campaigns on record.

Only two of the seven challengers — Elliott J. Dixon, attorney, and Iva D. Hartman, retired teacher — have submitted information on their candidacies for the sample ballot since the Jan. 6 close of filing for the March 15 election.

The incumbents, running as a team with support of the Keep Good Schools Committee, issued a joint statement.

Mrs. Wallace, a board member since 1967, said: "It is our good fortune to be a part of a community that has demonstrated repeatedly that it values quality education and sound fiscal management.

"We have good schools in Long Beach, Lakewood, Signal Hill and Avalon because citizens expect excellence. This does not mean that our schools are perfect, however. They can and must be strengthened through the best efforts of an experienced team."

HARRY GORNISH looks like a country doctor we used to know, a man who made house calls through ice and snow, a man who treated his patients with good medicine leavened by compassion and homespun common sense.

Look at Harry Gornish and you might see the Dr. Christian of Jean Hersholt. He has a full mustache, hair of pepper and salt, a courtly yet kindly manner, and a face furrowed by his care and concern for his fellow man.

Harry Gornish, however, is not a physician. He is a retired plumber whose working life was spent in the service of the Long Beach Unified School District. Even so, Harry Gornish is a doctor of humanity trying to prescribe for one of the great ills afflicting Long Beach — crimes against senior citizens.

Harry is coordinator of the senior citizens' task force of Long Beach Area Citizens Involved. He takes his job seriously, as well he might, for his life and ours may depend on finding a solution to the problem of juvenile crime.

We're talking about punks, the teen-age and adolescent hoodlums who prey on our elderly citizens. We're talking about muggers, purse snatchers, rapists, murderers and maimers. We're talking about juveniles who shoot 88-year-old women in the back for a few dollars, about juveniles who beat a 79-year-old man with a steel pipe because he resists the robbery of his Social Security check.

Stories like those have become a daily news diet in Long Beach and other metropolitan centers in this country. The street is the jungle, and we are the prey.

Harry Gornish says Long Beach has a senior citizen population of 72,616. That's 20.9 per cent of the inhabitants of this community.

But statistics don't tell us how many of the 72,616 senior citizens in Long Beach are prisoners in their houses and apartments, too terrified to venture out on a shopping trip, too afraid to answer the ring of a bell or a knock on the door.

I know a woman in her 70s who has not been out of her apartment in more than three years. Three elderly women in her building have been assaulted and robbed while on shopping trips. She won't risk the street; she wants to live. A young friend shops for her. And that's one life in Long Beach, if you can call it living.

I've been privy to the terror of citizens — on the telephone, by mail and face-to-face. It's a terror that brutalizes the spirit, agonizes the mind and makes the body cower.

Long Beach is fighting the problem of juvenile crime. Ten thousand police whistles have been distributed to senior citizens; a 20-man police task force patrols areas where the elderly gather; there is a Chamber of Commerce drive to increase police manpower.

Harry Gornish says police alone cannot attack the causes of juvenile crime. "Instead, they act to feed a justice system which is little more than a revolving door for delinquents in trouble year in and year out."

There are federal and state programs and millions of dollars addressed to law enforcement technology, jobs and job-training programs, sociological studies and economic impact surveys. Maybe they'll put a dent in the juvenile crime problem, maybe they won't. Money's track record in solving social ills is not encouraging.

Harry Gornish thinks the schools can help by giving scholastic credit to high school and college students who become involved in senior citizens' action groups, including a shopping service and escort duty.

I'd like to think such steps would help, but I think student escorts for the elderly could well join them as gang victims. The street punks hit anything, anybody. They don't care; they're feeding a dope habit, a yen for quick money or maybe just a kick for kick's sake.

I agree with Harry that a revived California Civilian Conservation Corps is a big step ahead in giving jobless youth and potential troublemakers an alternative to crime and violence. But the program is geared for only 1,000 youngsters. We need 100 times that in CCC jobs.

Maybe a Neighborhood Youth Service Corps could help in Long Beach. Cleanup, paintup, sweepup, washup work at, say, $2 an hour would serve urban renewal and keep kids out of malicious mischief. It's better than jail for a restless kid with time and emptiness on his hands and the streets to roam.

But the fact is, neither Harry Gornish nor I have a sure solution. Like you, we're groping for answers, groping against time and a bash in the head.

If you have any workable ideas on how to combat juvenile crime, write or telephone me. And hurry — time's running out on all of us.

been on the board since 1971, said: "We must never lose sight of the fact that schools exist for children. Our schools have a record of outstanding success in serving children. Last year, for example, graduates of our high schools broke all previous scholarship records, amassing $2.9 million in academic scholarships. Many of these competitive awards for excellence were given by the top colleges and universities in the country.

"Despite the fact that one pupil in five in our schools comes from a family on welfare, local achievement in reading, writing and arithmetic continues to surpass national norms."

Dixon, in his candidate statement, said taxpayers deserve better value, contending that school budgets, property taxes and the bureaucracy have increased although test scores have not and enrollment has dropped.

"The voter deserves better accountability," he said, suggesting that board meetings should be held in the evening "when parents, teachers and taxpayers could see what is going on. Not even an annual report is available."

Dixon, 38, is associate dean of the Los Angeles College of Law, owner of the L.A.W. Review Course, an associate professor at East Los Angeles College and a speaker at other area institutions of learning.

Among his posts in community organizations are: chairman of the Naples Elementary School Community Advisory Council; president of the Wesley Foundation board of directors at Cal State Los Angeles, and vice president of the Naples Improvement Association.

Dixon and his wife, Dorothy, have two children.

Mrs. Hartman taught school in Arizona and is a substitute teacher in Long Beach.

She has a bachelor's degree from Arizona State University and a master's from Long Beach State University. She has an elementary life teaching credential and a counseling credential.

Among her platform positions:

Board members should be accessible to the public. Collective bargaining is better than teacher unions; teachers should have a say, and negotiations should be made cooperatively but realistically.

There should be a follow-through for absenteeism in the junior high school program.

Children have the right to learn; there must be protection against crime and vandalism.

There should be evaluation of teachers but also administrative accountability.

Lower class size would help for effective teaching.

A member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (Mormon), Mrs. Hartman is the mother of seven children. She is the wife of William Hartman, a professor at Long Beach State University.

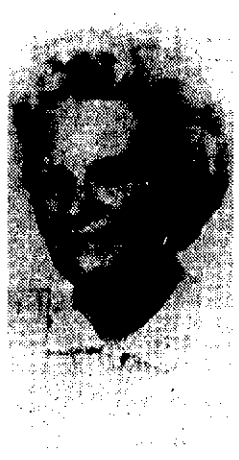

Two seats on the five-member board are at stake this year. Three members will be elected in 1979. Terms are for four years. Voter registration deadline for the March 15 election is Feb. 14.

Ex-L.B. student Canadian

He said that the American expatriates he knows in Toronto — where there are probably more former Americans than anywhere else in Canada — think the U.S. might be a nice place to visit, but wouldn't want to live here.

"There is one thing I'd like to do," he said. "Ever since I was in the first grade I wanted to visit the Baseball Hall of Fame in Cooperstown, N.Y. I think some friends and I might do that this summer."

"It has been a nuisance for my folks to have to come to Ontario to visit me," Formo said. "And it would be nice to see what the college campus is like now."

Formo, LBSU student body treasurer in 1967-68, now is a research psychologist for the Clarke Institute of Psychiatry in Toronto. He applied for landed immigrant status when he first arrived and knew he might never be able to visit the U.S. again.

One reason Formo doesn't care much that he can visit now is that Carter's amnesty decree was only what he calls "a halfway measure." It allows draft evaders to return, but not military deserters.

Formo compares himself with a American tourists there.

friend who attended a fundamentalist Bible college in Missouri before being drafted and later deserting.

"Our thinking about the war was basically the same, but I happened to be in California where there was a lot more political awareness," he said.

"My friend Dennis didn't reach the conclusions about the war that I did until he was already in the service and saw the mindlessness of it first hand."

Most of the conclusions Formo reaches today are more psychological than political. He says he has little interest in politics.

"The war was a symptom of a larger disease in the States," he said. "The disease is violent nationalism and a belief that violence is the answer to all problems. Too many people think they're John Wayne.

"If things in the States aren't settled by violence, they're settled by money," Formo said. "Americans think that if they have enough money they can do as they damn well want without saying please or thank you."

"You can often identify Americans in restaurants. They tend to be louder and more prone to flashing their money. When Canadians travel abroad, they wear maple leaf pins so people won't think they're Americans."

Canadians don't think that American draft evaders should return because Carter has granted them amnesty, Formo said.

He said he found Canadians receptive to Americans who fled the war because there has always been anti-American sentiment in Canada and because of the way the U.S. dominates Canada.

"It's partly a reaction to the high-powered obnoxiousness of many Americans and partly because of a Canadian inferiority complex," Formo said.

Formo, who enrolled in the University of Toronto's graduate psychology program after leaving Long Beach, said he believed the war was wrong so he refused to be drafted.

Being Canadian has many rewards, he said. To break the harsh Ontario winter, he's planning a week's vacation in Cuba, a favorite Canadian vacation spot that is off-limits to Americans.

Formo said he's not interested in Cuba's communist regime. What's attractive to him is that there won't be any obnoxious

Center, only with a few refinements."

The dusty little theater looked like a small amphitheater for the staging of a Greek tragedy. There were no seats. Shaff said they'll be installed later.

Two large proscenium arches, remaining traces of the Long Beach Auditorium, loomed behind the stage. The arches will hold up the ceiling and separate the little theater from the conventional Terrace Theater.

The larger theater has a seating capacity of 3,150—the orchestra level and two balconies. On the bottom level, continental fan-shaped seating will be installed to give the impression the audience is close to the stage.

Shaff walked down a series of narrow stairways to the interior of the theater.

"We have 14 dressing rooms, a VIP reception room, complete kitchen facilities, meeting rooms. And that narrow staircase" — his hand swept the air — "that's just for stage movement. Above us, a tri-level, cantilevered stairway rises to two balcony terraces overlooking the grand lobby.

"There are seven bar-lounge complexes. A full mirrored wall in the lobby. The plaza entrance is a natural for open-air art sales and exhibits set off by the reflecting pools. A sidewalk cafe also is planned.

"It's class. Pure class," Shaff said. "It's also exciting."

First-week openers already booked include a Van Cliburn recital, the Long Beach Symphony with guest conductor Akira Endo and a ballet performance.

Shaff is hoping to institute what he calls "black-tie rock and roll" — old-fashioned rock music that's a bit more sophisticated.

The rock group Jethro Tull grossed nearly $60,000 at a recent benefit concert at the Music Center's Dorothy Chandler Pavilion, Shaff said, noting that singers Diana Ross and Bette Midler also have sold out there in week-long engagements.

"Black-tie rock is a natural bridge between established musical events like opera and the contemporary music industry," Shaff said.

As far as the types of crowds that might frequent rock events at the new complex, Shaff has talked to security officials at the Music Center who have told him "they have no more problems with rock concert crowds than they do with the people who attend opera concerts."

"We're hoping for the same kind of reaction in Long Beach," Shaff said.

Shaff says when the Pacific Terrace Convention Center is completed, it will be the most modern facility of its kind on the West Coast.

Sophisticated enough for black-tie rock and rollers to rub elbows with symphonic aficionados . . . And big enough for a herd of elephants.

Too much ethics?

"With too much policing, the Senate will lose its appeal for the best qualified, the younger men, those with aspirations."

This warning was sounded last week by Sen. John Stennis, D-Miss., to a special Senate panel charged with devising a new code of ethics.

The question is, how much is "too much"?

Certainly congressmen should be required to disclose any conflict of interest they might have on any pending legislation — and to refrain from voting on such matters.

CONGRESSMEN ALSO should be required to disclose the source of their funds. There must be reasonable guidelines, however. If an officer of a labor union takes a legislator to lunch and picks up the tab, we can't believe this will "buy" that congressman's vote. If, however, a congressman gets a large contribution from labor, or is making a series of speeches to labor unions for which he is being paid a large sum, the public has a right to this information.

There has been no indication, to date, that the Senate or the House is considering unreasonable standards for the conduct of members. In recent years, there seems to have been virtually no policing at all.

On Monday, the House Committee on Administrative Review begins two days of meetings to discuss recommendations for standards on financial disclosure, limits on outside income, acceptance of gifts and general office accounts.

Peter G. Peterson, chairman of the Commission on Executive, Legislative and Judicial Salaries, which has recommended pay hikes for congressmen, said any such raises must be accompanied by reform of ethical standards.

Failure to address these questions, Peterson said, has contributed to "an alarming drop in the levels of trust and confidence held by Americans in their public officials."

Peterson said that "at the very least," there should be disclosure of "significant" aspects of income, debt, investment, capital transactions, gifts and reimbursements for travel and expense.

WE TRUST THAT when Sen. Stennis expresses concern about "too much policing," he does not object to disclosure of significant aspects of income, debt and other financial matters. These are matters of ethics for which Congress must set guidelines, and must provide for policing.

Of course, there is no guarantee than a code of ethics will make all legislators honest. There is even a chance that adoption of a code of ethics could lull citizens into a sense of false security that all is now well on Capitol Hill. Vigilance still is the price of honest government.

Press, governor square off

SACRAMENTO — Some folks are less fond of Jerry Brown than other folks, it seems, and the less-fond group has been getting on the press lately for allowing itself to be manipulated by the governor.

"Why," asked one critic scornfully, "did you guys make such a big deal of it when the governor spent the night in a San Francisco tenement or dropped in unannounced at some state mental hospitals?

"He's 38 years old and he's just finding out that poor people live in slums and that slums are not nice places? He's just discovering that a mental hospital is not the Beverly Hilton?

"And instead of the press asking him where he's been all his life, you help him score a public relations coup."

Other observers have taken to saying much the same thing. That the observers are lacking in affection for Jerry Brown does not diminish the validity of their contention that the governor has not been subjected to the same intensive press scrutiny that, for instance, Ronald Reagan was.

THE PRESS IS a sensitive social organ, and when it is charged with having been manipulated, it reacts with some violence.

It reacted with violence Thursday, at a press conference called by the governor.

Political leaders since the year one have followed a custom of identifying themselves with commendable efforts in which the government they head is engaged, and disassociating themelves with activities producing an adverse public response.

The news conference was called, a press release stated, for the purpose of having Gov. Brown announce that California was loaning a considerable amount of natural gas to "weather-stricken eastern and midwestern states."

Utilities within the state, the California Public Utilities Commission, federal authorities and President Carter had already announced that western natural-gas surpluses were going to be piped to places where supplies were short, so what the governor was going to say was hardly news.

But, while he declines to participate in some of the ritual usually engaged in by those in high office, he does choose to participate in others, including the custom of claiming credit where none is due.

Bob Schmidt

The occasion also permitted him to make a plea to Californians to practice conservation because of the emergency, and he wore a sweater under his suit jacket to emphasize the point that the thermostat had been turned down in his office.

The governor doesn't have many press conferences, although he makes himself available frequently in and about his office.

But now the press had him up there in front of them, vulnerable. At least part of what he was saying was suspect, and the reporters chose that time to show, by gosh, that they were not simply tools of Jerry Brown.

There have always been guarded exchanges between Brown and reporters, and sometimes impatience on both sides. But there has rarely been open hostility. Thursday, there was open hostility.

Brown obviously was startled, first that the subject chosen by the press for elaboration was not natural gas but his asserted effort to be publicly identified with California's good-samaritan effort, and second by the reporters' ferociousness. They refused to let the subject go, and nagged and ragged and chewed on Brown until he finally said, in exasperation, that his questioners were "quibbling about whether it (the decision to ship natural gas east) is an instruction, request or communication."

Finally, he was asked if he were not trying to claim credit "for something that was going to be done anyway to help these dying people, for something that was already done?"

"I don't think this is the time for journalistic credit or political credit," he said, and tried vainly to steer the questioning to another aspect of the subject.

There was grumbling on both sides when the news conference ended, and it was clear that, 25 months after it began, Jerry Brown's "honeymoon" with the California press was over.

He may not realize it yet, but it's good for him.

He knows now, or should know, that if he wants to claim credit for his administration for state actions people approve of, he is also going to have to accept responsibility for state actions or proposals the public deems less than commendable.

WHAT COMES immediately to mind, as an example, is the State Transportation Plan recently proposed by the State Transportation Board under the obvious influence of the Brown administration. Some parts of the plan were not explained very well, there was strong adverse public reaction, and the governor tried to throw his hands up in horror and say, "That's not my doing; don't hold me accountable for it!"

If the public had found the plan to be a panacea for all of California's transportation troubles, Jerry Brown would have had a grin from ear to ear and happily accepted congratulations for another accomplishment of his administration.

Well, it doesn't work that way, and now that he knows it, perhaps another ritual will be dispensed with and he'll have a little more time to do what he says he wants to do: Make California a better place to live for all the people who live here.

Which, after all, is what reporters living in California want, too.

Draft dodgers aren't heroes

By BOB WIEDRICH
Knight News Service

The draft dodgers apparently want a brass band before they'll come home. President Carter's pardon isn't enough to suit them.

They evidently want a draft evader's bill of rights. They want to be honored as heroes. They want garlands of flowers and rose petals at their feet.

They want more for their perfidy than was accorded those who actually served their country.

And that, we suspect, is something the American people will never give them. The GIs who did their duty have been maltreated enough by unemployment and public indifference to their lot.

So, if the lads who elected to take a duck to far off places to avoid military service have any sense at all, they'll accept President Carter's full pardon and shut up.

That is, of course, if they want to come back to the United States and resume the lives they interrupted six and seven years ago. Otherwise, let them remain in Canada or Sweden or wherever and continue the turncoat existence they adopted when they found the thought of being drafted repugnant.

BECAUSE HEROES they are not. They can rationalize otherwise, but the chorus of whining that has risen since the Carter pardon from the enclaves of draft dodgers around the world is only serving to curdle a few million more stomachs.

And such bellyaching can only serve to stiffen the public resistance to the pardon that already is growing each day in a nation grown weary of whiners.

In a transparent attempt to bolster their own position in the public eye, the draft evaders are also demanding amnesty for military deserters, men who took an oath to serve their flag and then defected.

They say that a pardon implies guilt and that they are guilty of nothing. They assert that their wisdom and perception permitted them to discern before others that the Viet Nam War was wrong.

They also declare that it was their right to selectively break those laws that did not happen to coincide with their points of view instead of working within the democratic system to change the course of government policy.

THEY WANTED TO do their own thing. They did so. Now, they want to return. But, only on their own terms will they elect to resume enjoying the full benefits of the freedom for which others gave their lives.

It is an arrogance that transcends all that is rational.

The United States has extended itself for them far beyond what many of its citizens consider reasonable. President Carter has given the draft dodgers an absolute, unconditional pass in a spirit of conciliation.

Yet, like spoiled children, they are not sharp enough to recognize a break when they get one.

They think they have the upper hand. They think they can further pressure Carter into giving them the whole ball game.

Frankly, we think they are overplaying their hand. Carter is not about to be pushed further.

For he is a man who obviously is trying to build during his first weeks in office the image of a strong and assertive leader who will guide the nation out of a wilderness of doubt and divisiveness.

The last thing we imagine Carter needs is to be pummeled into a posture of giving in to a bunch of guys who not only would not serve their country, but ran rather than face the consequences of the acts they claim to have committed out of conviction.

If they shove hard enough, the draft dodgers may turn off Carter, just as they are turning off a host of Americans who initially were sympathetic to their cause but are now getting a bellyful of their crybaby tactics.

ONE OTHER THING: The transition from draft evader to useful citizen for those who choose to return is going to be tough enough. Already, there are people in this country demanding that draft dodgers be publicly identified as such upon their return.

The tide of whatever public sentiment is with them could easily be reversed. Thus, why make it rougher on themselves upon returning to a country beset by unemployment and filled with Viet Nam veterans who cannot find jobs?

Some people will be sympathetic to the draft dodger's job hunt. Others will not share the same feeling. Some might be antagonistic to shirkers. And some prospective employers might prove to have fought in the Viet Nam War or lost a son there.

So, it does not make sense for the draft evaders to push their luck by risking further public alienation.

Jimmy Carter definitely stuck out his neck for them. If this is their way of saying thanks, who needs it?

Advice from Aesop

"We often give our enemies the means of our own destruction," wrote Aesop many years ago.

A decision by the California Fair Political Practices Commission last week recalls the proverb by Aesop, and causes us some concern.

The commission ruled that a Communist candidate for public office — unlike any other California politician — does not have to disclose fully the sources of his campaign contributions, as required by state law.

The ruling, approved on a 3-2 vote, was based on the concern that disclosure of contributors might subject them to possible harassment from the FBI, reprisals by employers, violence by citizens, or put a crimp in efforts to raise funds.

Under the law, the candidate concerned — attorney Michael C. Miller of the Communist Labor Party, an unsuccessful candidate for the San Francisco school board last November — would have had to publicly disclose the names, addresses and occupations of anyone who contributed $50 or more to his campaign.

The FPPC exempted Miller from this requirement. It said he will have to report the dates and amounts of contributions of $50 or more — but need not identify the donors publicly. Instead, he will file a secret, sealed report of their identities to preserve what the FPPC called "an audit trail, if future investigation proves necessary."

Miller will have to disclose full identities of contributors of $1,000 or more, but we suspect there would be few such contributions in a school board election.

Two other Communist Labor Party candidates — one in San Jose and the other, Luis Javier Rodriguez, who is seeking a seat on the Los Angeles Board of Education in an April 5 election — have requested similar exemptions.

Some of our bureaucrats always seem to be leaning over backwards to be nice to the Communists. We would just like to see it work the other way for a change.

Republican's low political IQ

Perhaps the Republican Party needs a good "shrink." A psychiatrist, who is a registered independent, might tell the Republicans that they have a death wish for their party, and that a dyed-in-the-wool, Grade A, "I'll go down with the ship" doctrinaire Republican does not want to see the party survive.

There is a flaw in this suggestion. Republicans would consult only a Republican "head shrinker," who would be politically myopic.

It is grotesque that no Republican has ever been able to perceive what every Democrat knows, that the GOP could increase membership by doing as little as no longer using the denigrating phrase, "the Democrat Party."

The kindest Democrats say that Republicans are often intelligent, well educated, good citizens, but that they are to be pitied because they have a political intelligence quotient equivalent to that of a guinea pig.

Other Democrats charge that doctrinaire Republicans use the phrase "Democrat Party" out of the pure malice that is one of the cardinal sins. As an example, at a congressional hearing a few days ago, Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., began a sentence about "my good friend, Bob Strauss, when he was chairman of the Democrat Party," and then he broke off and corrected it to "Democratic Party."

"Now that the election is over, I'll use Democratic again," the former vice presidential nominee said.

If Republicans want more registered Republicans, it is elementary that they will have to come from the ranks of independents and Democrats. Most independents are former complaining Democrats who passed beyond the bounds of complaining tolerance. Even so, there are so many complaining Democrats that they constitute a party wing. Many have said they are perfectly willing to vote for a good Republican, who is also modest and gracious such as President Ford, but that they detest the arrogance of Republicans who say, "Democrat Party."

A lifelong complaining Democrat said she shies like an Indian pony that sees a rattlesnake when she hears that offensive phrase because it demeans the Jeffersonian concepts held by her ancestors. This woman is between the devil and the deep blue sea.

3 nominated for Point

Three Long Beach youths are among 15 students from six Southland communities nominated for appointment to West Point by Rep. Glenn M. Anderson, D-Harbor City.

Nominated from Long Beach were Frederick Freed, Michael Rounds and Todd Terris.

More students from Carson were nominated than from any other area in Anderson's 32nd Congressional District. Carson nominees were Audrey Abang, Reynaldo Antonio, Jerald Berry, John Brudvig, Mark Da Silva, Johnny Raquel and John Zabel.

Nominees from other communities were Kevin Kekoa, Harbor City; Ismael Alcala, Wilmington; Mitchell McMurray, Torrance, and Robert Bailey and Odell Milligan, both of San Pedro.

Anderson has used the competitive basis for all academy appointments since he was first elected to Congress in 1968. The students will now face a final screening by the military academy admissions board which will make the final selection for appointments.

The nominees for the Navy and Air Force academies will be announced soon, Anderson said, adding that young men or women interested in a 1978 academy appointment should contact his office at 300 Long Beach Blvd. as soon as possible.

Applicants should be in their junior year of high school and letters of inquiry may be mailed to Rep. Anderson at P.O. Box 2349. Long Beach, Ca. 90801.

Letters to the editor

Competence first

During recent weeks a number of articles have appeared in the Independent, Press-Telegram relative to the Long Beach Harbor Department, its plans, functions, etc. The most prominent, of course, have been those pertaining to the planned Sohio project. The ones that concern me most, however, are those dealing with the selection of persons for the position of harbor commissioner (the latest being on Feb. 1) and also regarding public hearings at the budget meetings (on Jan. 30).

Let me insert here that I am not now, nor have I ever been, an employe of the harbor department or of the city of Long Beach.

As a lifetime resident of Long Beach, however, I have watched our port grow and develop, and am proud of and grateful for the accomplishments of the harbor department. It is of real concern to me now, that we make sure we do not embark on a course of meddling or of politically jeopardizing the department.

It is important that we ask ourselves, "what has made the Long Beach Harbor Department succeed while other ports failed?" "Why has Long Beach Harbor been developed into one of the world's finest ports while other ports have fallen into disarray?" Whatever it is, let us maintain it.

For one thing, our harbor department operates under a city charter provision that rightly stipulates that it (harbor department) shall function as an autonomous entity. In this fashion political interference has been kept to a minimum, and dedicated, knowledgeable businessmen have conducted the department affairs and future planning in a realistic, no-nonsense manner. They have thoroughly understood what makes a business fail or succeed, and have practiced methods that have assured success.

The Board of Harbor Commissioners and the staff of the harbor department are composed of persons of high professional competence, fine moral character and finely tuned business acumen. Over the years, these men have functioned for their day while at the same time, laying and executing sound plans for the benefit of future generations. We are even now enjoying the benefits planned for us during the 1920s and 1930s.

It is my fervent hope in the selection of future harbor commissioners that political, ethnic, and popular cause considerations will be put aside and persons will be selected on the basis of merit, professional competence and what each has to offer that will realistically benefit the commission and the harbor department. I further hope that we will not encourage needless or pointless meddling in the affairs of the department, but will permit some to operate with the flexibility, professional expertise and sound business judgment that has consistently produced a job well done.

Perhaps I should add that the harbor department is financially completely self-sustaining, does not receive any input from city taxes, and operates upon port-generated revenues.

A parent's view

I am a parent who pays the customary taxes to support our public school system, and who also believes that the amount required by our Catholic schools for tuition does not exceed the benefits which the Catholic school system gives my children. I am deeply grateful for the atmosphere which permeates here — one of respect, dedication and concern with spiritual values.

I am convinced that the Catholic school system is an indispensable component to our American commitment to education. The non-public school system supplements in an important way the public school system by providing a diversity and a choice to those of us who prefer one system over the other.

Those of us who send our children to a Catholic school lessen the burden to the taxpayer in a tremendous way. At present, there are 293 Catholic schools in the Los Angeles area. There are 110,629 students enrolled in these schools. The expense of the education of these children rests in a very great degree on those of us who pay for their tuition, the donated services of many who see the value of this kind of education, and the church which subsidizes the schools in a very significant way.

I value our public schools for the tremendous work they are doing, but I choose the Catholic school system because of the Christian values and discipline which they give my children.

Parking problems

On a recent visit to City Hall, I was informed that there had been no complaints concerning the new Long Beach weekly street-cleaning service. I can hardly believe this, because I haven't talked to anyone who isn't perturbed.

I strongly encourage other upset citizens to write to their city officials.

I have lived in Naples for 36 years and we have been satisfied with our clean streets. The people who live in this area take care of their property, as anyone can plainly observe.

We, as citizens, were never asked whether we wanted this new service in which, on a certain day, all cars must be moved from one side of the street. We had absolutely no say on this issue and did not vote for it. If the vote were placed on a ballot today, it would be promptly defeated.

In this highly taxed area of Naples, we have a serious parking problem; as do the people who live on the peninsula. The streets are very narrow and parking areas are extremely limited. Also, a great number of people frequent the beaches during the summer (swimmers, sailboat enthusiasts, etc.) and take up parking spaces, which presents serious problems for those who reside here. Having to move cars on a certain day of each week for street cleaning service is difficult enough during the winter, but impossible during the summer months.

We are taxed exorbitantly on our property and now have the added burden of being ticketed if we fail to move our vehicles and fined $5, which is ridiculous.

Editorial helped

The Independent, Press-Telegram's support for local hospitals over the years has been a major factor in the turnabout of the city's former mediocre medical service to today's position of excellence. Certainly, Community Hospital would have never been able to achieve the broad coverage — such as occurred because of your editorial today (Feb. 2) — that the I, P-T has given the development of our cancer programs over the past six years.

Apparently, our expanded Cancer Detection Center has struck a real need both in our community and in surrounding areas. Since the news has spread, our telephone switchboard has been swamped with inquiries. More than 600 appointments have been made with calls and letters continuing to flow in.

Since the hospital is committed to continuing the examinations on a below—cost basis. Your editoral is not only timely, but greatly appreciated by the hospital staff in relaying the need for help to the people of Long Beach. It is a fine example of how a local newspaper can best serve the needs of its community in depth in contrast to a large metropolitan newspaper which attempts to cover outlying areas with suburban sections. We thank you for your ongoing support and offer ours in return.

Papers 'aid criminals'

Why oh why, do the newspapers of this country foster crime by printing instructions on how to commit crimes?

For example, the article you published today (Jan. 30) on the front page, "Clever thieves use tax refunds in royal scams," written by Richard D. Lyons of the New York Times, gives details about how to commit a crime.

If "freedom of the press" entitles newspapers to publish detailed instructions on how to commit a crime, it is no wonder that so many Americans have no respect for the newspapers of this country.

Missed the concert

I was dismayed and surprised that this paper had no review of the Robert Merrill concert with the Long Beach Symphony. It is fine that you review concerts at El Camino College, Ambassador Auditorium and the Music Center, but certainly you have an obligation to Long Beach musical events. The next concert on Feb. 19 features Eugene Fodor, an unbelievably gifted violinist. I do hope your paper will have a qualified music critic there and report to your readers what excellent music can be heard here in Long Beach.

The full story

The article on the "People's Gallery" in the Leisure section of the Jan. 28 I, P-T missed the point of the Long Beach Gallery since the story has a much wider scope and meaning than filling a room with art for the "man in the street."

The main thrust of the marvelous experiment happening at the Long Beach Gallery is the cooperation between the Recreation Department providing space and the Long Beach Art Association in providing money and manpower for the benefit of the entire community.

In a city becoming known as "anti-art" it is a pleasure to work with Recreation Department Director Robert Van Antwerp and Robert Barrett, creative arts director. They are not anti-culture.

However, in these trying tax-times, the public should know that the operation of this public gallery is mainly funded by the Long Beach Art Association. Our dues accounted for the main expense of refurbishing the gallery and is paying for the programs presented monthly featuring artists of the stature of Robert E. Wood in February and Claire Falkenstein (April) and others. We sponsor, organize and take responsibility for the bus tours to various museums offered at a minimum cost to the public.

All of our meetings are free and open to the public but we pay rent for the auditorium where they are held.

Our volunteers are pleased to man the gallery, pay the jurors and hang six shows of professional caliber during the year to further the love of good art.

The Long Beach Art Association Open Show, now at the Gallery until Feb. 28 is representative of the whole of Southern California art. Jurored by Tom Enman of the Laguna Beach Museum, it is good art and not another "hobby show." The Art Association has funded and manned the entire show in the space at 155 Queen's Way Landing provided by the Recreation Department.

The scholarship show held each spring showcases work of local high school students. The other four shows are of interest to everyone, novice to professional artist.

Through our efforts, the Long Beach Gallery was made a member of the Western Association of Art Museums and eligible for their traveling shows when we can raise enough money.

I assure our members and friends that we have not been absorbed by the Recreation Department, but that both organizations are working to build on the Long Beach Art Association's 52 years of expertise and the available resources of the best recreation department in the nation to provide an art center for both the artists and citizens in the city. We welcome the assistance (both time and money) of everyone concerned with art in our community.

It is not an embarrassment of riches to have a "forward looking" museum and a "now" gallery to show and promote local artists. I urge our friends to support both of us.

Ancient atrocities

From the 5th through 17th centuries, waves of Huns, Moors, Khazars, Seljuk Turks, Mongols, Ottoman Turks and Tartars tried to invade and conquer Europe.

Many of the invasions seem to have been wars of extermination, for whenever the horde captured a village or town, they frequently put all the inhabitants — men, women and children — to the sword, sparing only artisans and young girls, preferably blondes. These were taken back to the invaders' homelands as captives.

Even so, let's not hate the outer world for these unprovoked atrocities of long ago.

Many reasons have been forwarded for these persistent assaults. They couldn't have been for food, for the relatively poor soil of Europe was certainly no inducement. They couldn't have been for revenge, for this was long before the alleged white crimes of "imperialism" or "colonialism" could be cited to justify such attempts. They couldn't have been for loot, for the Byzantine, Arabic and Persian civilizations were far richer than poor, medieval Europe.

No, they must have had another reason for trying to conquer and exterminate Europeans. But take heart: the outer world abandoned these frontal assaults long ago. Besides, isn't it a relief to know that we're not Europeans?

By the way, I found the TV series, "Roots," to be very interesting. I didn't realize there were so many ways to say, "Sic 'em, sic 'em!" without really seeming to. Evidently, in some quarters, the crime rate in America isn't deemed high enough.

And the beat goes on, baby.

Seek Spanish books

For years, we have donated to a Boys' Home in Mexico. It is called Hogar Infantil. We started our donations when an article appeared in the Sunday magazine regarding the need and worthiness of this home.

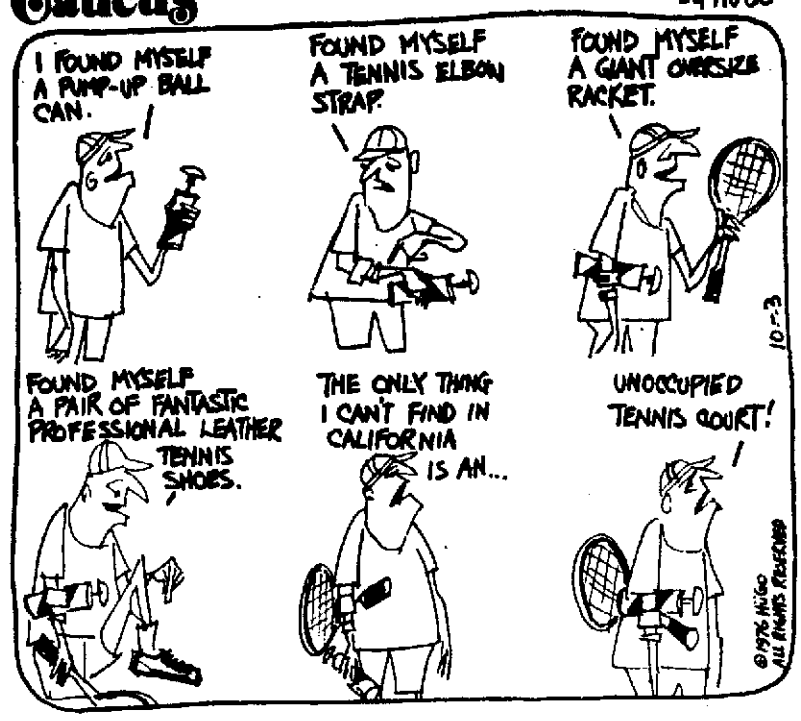

We have found that the article was true in every respect. The home now has 100 boys and will top 100 by late fall of this year.

Now, the reason for this letter. The junior high school that 30 of these boys attend has no library. Funds are being raised, but the immediate requirement is for books in the Spanish language that would be suitable for this library.

If our Spanish-speaking readers have any books they would like to donate, please bring them to 3042 Chestnut Ave., Long Beach. We will see that they get to the school in Mexico. Books of every type will be appreciated.

Women in danger

Last week, I attended a class with a woman friend at CSULB. The reason for the attendance is disconcerting. The woman refuses to walk the campus at night. Some of you may say, "Then she shouldn't take night classes." I can walk those halls free of fear, and believe women should have this same basic right of movement.

The murders of three women at Santa Barbara explain a depressive example about the rising incidents of rape and aggression towards women. Rapes take place throughout Long Beach, but the focus seems to occur around the colleges. The City Council has a basic responsibility to provide safety to its community. The city derives many benefits from having a university within its boundaries. Women need to know that they can attend classes without fear.

What can be done to improve the safety at night? At CSULB, the lighting on and off campus is horrible. Bellflower and Margo, two streets that students park on, have no lighting at all in some areas. The tram service on campus stops at 4 p.m. and no other means of travel to parking is available. The parking lots are not guarded in the evenings either. Why has not better lighting been placed on and off campus? Why is the tram service stopped at such an early hour? What is the responsibility of the city to provide these services?

The result, psychic and physical, to a victim of rape is monumental. The anguish and loss to a community by a damaged mind is worth any cost to the city to provide the minimal safety. Lighting, guards and transportation are the minimum.

The facts state that the university is unsafe at night and rapes do occur at the campus. The city can no longer ignore its responsibility to the women in this community. Santa Barbara speaks a warning to Long Beach.

Women must have freedom of movement and safety within this city. The City Council must begin to focus on alleviating rape here. Funding its share to the college could be a significant step to the elimination of this horrible crime.

Bitter disappointment

El Dorado tennis courts are now available for all Orange County residents and out-of-towners. Through the new city reservation system, our courts may be filled at any time. The taxpayers' boycott has raised some serious issues ignored by our tax-paid representatives.

The condition of the courts do not warrant the maximum charge of $3 an hour. Parking is sadly lacking. Two incomplete planters are mosquito pits. The sidewalk is a flood area. There are no restrooms or locker area. Loose dogs are barking, fighting and defecating throughout the park. Noisy motorcycles speed down the streets and cruise without restriction over the grass.

We have paid our taxes and waited a long time for a beautiful tennis facility. Now we must pay to play and make reservations on the same basis as out-of-towners, and our facility is a bitter disappointment.

The Latino beat

As I sat there watching the American Music Awards, I thought to have caught the words Salsa music. But as I continued to watch and listen, it was to no avail.

It angered me to think that we Latinos (Mexican-Americans, Puerto Riquenos, Cubanos and Latin Americans) were left out of the awards.

The three categories were pop/rock, soul and country. Why couldn't there be a fourth category: Salsa music, or Latino?

Isn't our music a part of America? Then why weren't we recognized? What minorities or majorities did the producers of this program poll? I don't think they made too much of an effort to poll the Latinos. They might have been surprised to find out that we do have singers like Ralphi Pagan or Johnny Pacheco, etc.

What I'm trying to say is: Come on, Latinos! Wake up! Get yourselves together! Get yourselves known! We are all one, and it's time to get our music, our style awarded and rewarded.

I have yet to see an awards program recognize us. Maybe we should help them see us.

A place to unwind

I just read the article about Chief Kortz's directive to our policemen. I can see the screams and hollers from the citizens now.

In the first place, I imagine (no, I would bet on it) that the chief and this newspaper have exaggerated the situation. If you think about it, wouldn't someone have noticed long ago 100 policemen having an orgy in a parking lot? Even 20?

I can see one solution for this problem. Since there are more than just a few policemen who enjoy drinking beer after work, why not give them a place to go? Bars and cocktail lounges are closed when many policemen get off work, so they have to find their own place to go. And their main reason is to unwind and just talk shop with each other. Sounds a lot like you and I, doesn't it?

They're going to drink and no matter who tells them to stop. And if the department allowed them to have a building, the drinking and "sex party" problem would be under control.

A gripe about cops

This is a gripe about the Long Beach Police Department. It seems just because they drive a black and white, they can get away with anything they do.

On Feb. 3 at 12:30 p.m. in the 4200 block on Atlantic Avenue, black and white car #42 parked in the red zone directly in front of a fire hydrant just to go to Russell's for a sandwich. I have seen the police make left turns when not permitted and make turns in the middle of the street just to park on the opposite side. Are they privileged persons that they get away with these things? Let a private citizen do these things and they get a ticket. I say they are no better than the private citizen when driving on the streets.

A portrait of the single home buyer

One hears much these days about the newly-liberated female homebuyer with equal borrowing power, but the typical unmarried buyer is young, successful — and male — according to a new study.

"While two-thirds of the single buyers and more than half of the divorced buyers are male, you have to look at the other side of the story," points out George Fulton, marketing vice president at Walker & Lee Inc. "Unmarried women really have not been able to buy a home for very long and already they account for 46.2 per cent of the divorced buyers and 33 per cent of the single buyers. And in the widowed market, they account for 72 per cent of the sales. The ladies are coming on strong.

"However, the big surprise is how many investment-minded young singles are buying homes. Amazingly, 25 per cent of the single buyers are under 25, 19 per cent are between 26 and 30, and another 25 per cent are 31 to 35. That means that 69 per cent of the single market is 35 or under!

"In comparison, the divorced market is a little older with identical percentages for the 26 to 30 and 31 to 35 group, but only two per cent under 25. However, 14 per cent are in the 36 to 40 group, meaning that 58 percent of divorced buyers are between 26 and 40.

"Another interesting fact about single buyers is that they stop buying houses after 45 with only 7 per cent of the buyers above that age. On the other hand, 29 per cent of the divorced buyers are over 45."

Exactly 50 per cent of the single buyers described their job as being in lower management while 29 per cent are in sales and service and 11 per cent are in middle management.

Thirty-one per cent of the single buyers reported their annual income is in the $15,000 to $20,000 bracket, 22 per cent in the $20,000 to $25,000 bracket, 17 per cent, $12,000 to $15,000 and 15 per cent, $25,000 to $35,000.

Four per cent of the singles said they have children living at home and the offspring ranged from under 6 to over 22.

Forty-eight per cent of the singles had been living in an apartment. Surprisingly, 17 per cent of them owned a home and 14 per cent owned a condominium or townhouse. Those who owned their previous residence were living relatively well: 25 per cent in a $50,000 to $60,000 home and 22 per cent in a $38,000 to $45,000 home.

Their monthly rent or house payments in their former residence varied from under $100 (two per cent) to over $300 (23 per cent). The biggest categories, however, were: from $211 to $250 payments, 29 per cent; and from $171 to $210, 18 per cent.

The majority of the singles, 52 per cent, said they bought their new home because they were tired of renting. The next biggest reasons: a larger home, 21 per cent, and a better area, 18 per cent.

Two bedrooms (68 per cent) and two-and-one-half baths (33 per cent) were the rule, although 27 per cent had three bedrooms and 31 per cent had two baths.

Most single buyers paid for their new house just about what many of them got for their old house: 29 per cent bought in the $38,000 to $45,000 range and 20 per cent in the $50,000 to $60,000 range. The average price was $46,667, but the prices were spread over a broad spectrum: 14 per cent in the $33,000 to $38,000; 11 per cent in the $28,000 to $33,000 and $45,000 to $50,000 ranges; 7 per cent, $24,000 to $28,000; 3 per cent, both under $24,000 and $60,000 to $70,000; and 2 per cent, $70,000 to $80,000.

The payments on the new house in 45 per cent of the cases were in the $301 to $400 range. The next most frequent ranges: $401 to $500, 20 per cent; and $251 to $300, 16 per cent.

"As might be expected, the divorced buyer, being generally somewhat older, is more affluent and buys a slightly larger home, but the differences are not tremendous," Fulton noted.

The divorced buyers' incomes closely paralleled that of the single buyers, but was a bit more evenly distributed: $8,000 to $12,000, 10 per cent; $12,000 to $15,000, 11 per cent; $15,000 to $20,000, 33 per cent; $20,000 to $25,000, 21 per cent; $25,000 to $35,000, 14 per cent, and over $35,000, 9 per cent.

A very big — and expected — difference between the two types of buyers: 36 per cent of the divorced have children living with them. While the children are in all age brackets, over two-thirds are of school age: 13 to 18, 35 per cent; and 7 to 12, 32 per cent. One quarter, 22 per cent, are pre-schoolers.

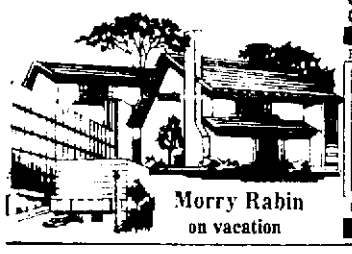

The survey shattered the myth about a large block of divorced buyers moving out of expensive homes. The value of the previously-owned home or condominium covered a very wide range, from under $24,000 (8 per cent) to over $100,000 (6 per cent). In between, the distribution was remarkably even with the two biggest categories, 16 per cent each, being $45,000 to $50,000 and $40,000 to $60,000.

The three biggest reasons for divorced people moving: tired of renting, 41 per cent; want a better area, 23 per cent; and want less maintenance, 20 per cent.

As could be anticipated, the divorced person paid more money, the most popular purchase price (24 per cent) between $50,000 and $60,000. The second and third most popular prices among divorced people: $45,000 to $50,000 range, 17 per cent; $38,000 to $45,000, 16 per cent. However, the new homes bought by divorced people covered a very broad range, from 4 per cent under $24,000 (2 per cent for singles) to 2 per cent over $80,000 (none for singles).

In 34 per cent of the cases, the payments on the new home were between $301 and $400 and, 25 per cent of the time, they were $401 to $500.

What's Your Problem?

Problems seldom on transferred mortgages

By DON CAMPBELL

How long is "forever?" It's an awesome thing to contemplate when forever is the duration of your financial responsibility for something you have sold. Would the manufacturer of a refrigerator dare to guarantee a buyer that his product would NEVER break down?

Fortunately, the word forever rarely applies in a literal sense.

Dear Mr. Campbell:

When selling a home with an FHA or VA mortgage on it, and the mortgage is assumed by the buyer, would the seller be responsible if the buyer failed to make payments and would there be a time limit on the responsibility? If the credit of the buyer was approved by FHA or VA, would that affect the seller's responsibility? — E. T. G., Tucson, Ariz.

ANSWER: I wouldn't get cold feet on this business of letting a buyer assume your FHA or VA mortgage — tens of thousands have changed hands this way without any hardships.

Theoretically, you are responsible for the buyer's retirement of your old mortgage in 15, 20 or 30 years — whatever life the mortgage still has at the time of the assumption. And this, admittedly, sounds like a long, long time in the future. From a practical standpoint, it is strictly an action of last resort as far as the lender (and behind him, his insurer, the FHA or VA) is concerned.

It's invariable better business for the VA and the FHA to fix the house up and put the repossession back on the market than it is to go back and try to track down the original buyer. Having the family assume the mortgage checked out and approved by the VA or FHA still wouldn't relieve you of the responsibility.

Dear Mr. Campbell:

On several occasions you have advised people with the ability to pay for three-quarters, or all of a home they desire to buy, to pay only about half or less because of "the tax advantage" resulting from interest they would pay on their mortgage.

I have worked this out in terms of my tax savings versus the amount I would have free for investment if I did not have mortgage payments to make.

It appears to me, that at my income bracket each dollar I spend on interest reduces my taxes about 28 cents and each dollar I can avoid spending on interest gives me increased spendable funds of 68 cents. (When state income tax is added, the tax savings is 36 cents and the increased spendable funds reduced to 60 cents).

If I am missing something in my reasoning, please advise me so that I will not reduce the amount of mortgage outstanding on my home. — J. H. H., Tempe, Ariz.

ANSWER: Working with the right combination of assumptions, one can always blow the "it's-better-to-have-a-mortgage" argument out of the water. And, if taxes were the only consideration, then I would gladly concede that in as many as half the cases, outright ownership would be preferable.

But the tax-savings situation is not the only argument — or even the best argument. A far better argument against paying off a house is the shrinking dollar. For example, the 1939 dollar that was worth 58 cents by '49, had eroded to 38 cents by '69 and was down to 25 cents by the end of 1975.

Since 1939 there have only been two years when the value of the dollar DIDN'T shrink. There's no reason to think the future is going to see any change in this: the inflation rate still stands as 5.4 per cent a year and some experts see double-digit inflation returning in 1977.

And you want to pay off a 20-year mortgage with 1976 dollars? Well, if you must...

Dear Mr. Campbell:

I've rented the same house for the past six years from the same landlord and it has been a very nice arrangement. It has been helpful to me as a widow to have the landlord's two sons mow and trim my yard regularly — even though it isn't written in the lease.

Now he has sold the house to another man who has agreed to continue the lease (it's an investment for both the old and the new owner), but when I asked him about the grass mowing he just laughed at me. Didn't the old landlord establish this as a precedence that has to be honored by the new one? — Mrs. L. L. K., Long Beach, Calif.

ANSWER: An interesting interpretation, but I'm afraid that it won't wash. Look on it as a nice courtesy that was extremely pleasant while it lasted. The new owner isn't bound by it, though.

Dear Mr. Campbell:

We are about to make a proposition on a house that has an almost new, wall-to-wall, carpet in the living room. Is this part of the deal?

ANSWER: Unless specifically exempted in the offering, yes. — R. R., Buffalo, N.Y.

LB Realtor will direct committee

A Long Beach Realtor, Melvin R. Mould, has been named chairman of the Realtors Political Action for the National Association of Realtors.

Announcement was made at the close of the association's annual mid-winter meeting in Anaheim.

The committee is responsible for promoting nationwide fund-raising campaigns to aid local, state and national candidates of all parties who have shown an understanding of Realtor positions.

The NAR, based in Chicago, has 500,000 members.

Crown Pointe reaches half-way point in sales

Crown Pointe, a new community of two and three bedroom single-family attached residences in the exclusive Virginia Country Club area of Long Beach, offers a condominium-style of living not usually available in a single-family home. Over half of the first phase's 42 homes have been sold.

Architecturally designed in pairs to be compatible with the large homes found in the neighborhood that surrounds Crown Pointe, the community offers a choice of five different floor plans ranging in size from about 2,000 to 2,600 square feet.

According to Clifton S. Jones, Jr., president of Long Beach Construction Company, the developer of Crown Pointe, a good selection of these new single-family attached residences is now available from $114,100.

"Since the homes are constructed in pairs and ownership includes the land on which the home has been built, Crown Pointe offers the feeling of a spacious single-family home," said Jones. "At the same time, this planned residential development also provides for landscaping maintenance, gated main entries, gated private entries, and an electronic security system. Crown Pointe, therefore, actually offers a resident the best of both single-family living and the low-maintenance, security-oriented life-style that is normally associated with condominiums and townhomes."

The42 homes in the first phase of development have been designed into and constructed on what was a private 12-acre estate. Ownership of the property has been in the Jones family for two generations, and members of the family still reside in four large manor homes that are within the security gates of Crown Pointe.

In addition to the 300 mature trees that have been designed into the open space within the community's environment, the homes themselves offer a wide range of convenience and design features, including: dramatic 9-foot or higher ceiling on the first floor; oversized wood entry doors; a full complement of built-in kitchen appliances; spacious master bedroom suites with separate dressing area and bath, many with fireplace, separate sitting room, and breakfast balcony; tile or hardwood entres with wall-to-wall carpeting throughout each home; and electronic garage door openers.

Computer matches buyers and sellers

By WAYNE MARKHAM
Knight News Service

Every hour of every day a computer is searching for buyers and sellers — object matchmaking.

This electronic "dating game," however, is part of a new computerized real estate system that experts predict could well revolutionize the way people buy and sell homes.

The computer is a giant memory bank that files away every home for sale, every prospective buyer looking for homes and performs a lightning-fast job of matching them up.

IN ADDITION, the computer can do complex mathematical analysis such as showing a buyer the economic advantages of purchasing a home compared to renting over a 20-year-period or giving a businessman detailed investment analysis and amortization schedule.

Buyers who want to look only at homes priced between $52,000 and $55,000 with four bedrooms, sauna, flagstone patio, and boat dock can get a split-second printout from the computer's electronic memory banks of every house that qualifies.

For sellers, the computer has an equally long memory that's able to produce a profile on prospective buyers by income, home price, decorating preferences or any of a dozen other criteria.

Real estate brokers say the computer ultimately will speed up the home buying and selling process, saving both parties money in the long run.

"The typical two-week lag time before all other offices are notified of new listings will be eliminated," notes realtor Phillip Thomas, immediate past president of the Miami Board.

"And if we speed up the sale of the typical $40,000 house by just that two weeks, we'll save the average seller $150, figuring it costs 10 per cent per year to own and maintain a home," he adds.

(The 10 per cent annual cost figures out to $4,000 a year on a $40,000 house, or approximately $11 a day. That reflects about $150 in a two-week period)

THE TWO-WEEK time lag in getting new listings exposed to the MLS offices occurred because of the printing deadlines in producing the Miami Board's four-inch thick listing book.

"It would take a salesman or clerk almost one day each week just to index the listings. Now the computer does all that automatically," Thomas says.

The technology for computerized real estate listing services has existed for some time, notes Don Williams, chairman of the Miami board's Multiple Listings Service committee. "But the prices were too high for the typical real estate office to afford."

The Detroit-based Realtron firm has a portable terminal available for brokers which can be taken to buyers' or sellers' homes. Using a telephone link to the central computer, the portable model can produce a list of comparable properties for sale, search a specific area for all homes on the market and various other functions.

The Miami Board's system is different because of the more extensive use of field terminals in brokers' offices that can provide instantaneous distribution of new listings and new buyer prospects.

Now brokers can list new homes for sale by just sitting down at the terminal in their office, which is connected to every other terminal in the system. The distribution process takes only a matter of seconds.

Similarly, prospective buyers' profiles are entered in the system and circulated to all the offices in equally speedy fashion.

"THINK of the great sales tool this becomes," says Thomas. "Punch in the area, price, amount of down payment, the number of bedrooms required, pinpoint requirements such as swimming pool, boat dock or whatever, and you get a list of what's available and can go right to those homes without driving around looking at homes the buyer's not interested in."

Williams cautions that salesmen "could do this type of thing with the old system, but they might miss a potential house or a prospective buyer.

Jaye L. Hunter, February program chairman for the Long Beach District Board of Realtors, has announced speakers for the month, Tuesdays at 7:15 a.m. in the Queen's Restaurant.

Tuesday- Douglas Ayres, professor, Center for Public Policy/Administration, Long Beach State University, "Can Problems of New York City Visit Long Beach or Are They Here Already?"

Feb. 15- Attorney Roger Sullivan, "Redevelopment Agencies."

Feb. 22- Ray Bisso, Independent, Press-Telegram classified ad manager, remarks and a film on Long Beach.

been on the board since 1971, said: "We must never lose sight of the fact that schools exist for children. Our schools have a record of outstanding success in serving children. Last year, for example, graduates of our high schools broke all previous scholarship records, amassing $2.9 million in academic scholarships. Many of these competitive awards for excellence were given by the top colleges and universities in the country.

"Despite the fact that one pupil in five in our schools comes from a family on welfare, local achievement in reading, writing and arithmetic continues to surpass national norms."

Dixon, in his candidate statement, said taxpayers deserve better value, contending that school budgets, property taxes and the bureaucracy have increased although test scores have not and enrollment has dropped.

"The voter deserves better accountability," he said, suggesting that board meetings should be held in the evening "when parents, teachers and taxpayers could see what is going on. Not even an annual report is available."

Dixon, 38, is associate dean of the Los Angeles College of Law, owner of the L.A.W. Review Course, an associate professor at East Los Angeles College and a speaker at other area institutions of learning.

Among his posts in community organizations are: chairman of the Naples Elementary School Community Advisory Council; president of the Wesley Foundation board of directors at Cal State Los Angeles, and vice president of the Naples Improvement Association.

Dixon and his wife, Dorothy, have two children.

Mrs. Hartman taught school in Arizona and is a substitute teacher in Long Beach.

She has a bachelor's degree from Arizona State University and a master's from Long Beach State University. She has an elementary life teaching credential and a counseling credential.

Among her platform positions:

Board members should be accessible to the public. Collective bargaining is better than teacher unions; teachers should have a say, and negotiations should be made cooperatively but realistically.

There should be a follow-through for absenteeism in the junior high school program.

Children have the right to learn; there must be protection against crime and vandalism.

There should be evaluation of teachers but also administrative accountability.

Lower class size would help for effective teaching.

A member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (Mormon), Mrs. Hartman is the mother of seven children. She is the wife of William Hartman, a professor at Long Beach State University.

Two seats on the five-member board are at stake this year. Three members will be elected in 1979. Terms are for four years. Voter registration deadline for the March 15 election is Feb. 14.

Ex-L.B. student Canadian

He said that the American expatriates he knows in Toronto — where there are probably more former Americans than anywhere else in Canada — think the U.S. might be a nice place to visit, but wouldn't want to live here.

"There is one thing I'd like to do," he said. "Ever since I was in the first grade I wanted to visit the Baseball Hall of Fame in Cooperstown, N.Y. I think some friends and I might do that this summer."

"It has been a nuisance for my folks to have to come to Ontario to visit me," Formo said. "And it would be nice to see what the college campus is like now."

Formo, LBSU student body treasurer in 1967-68, now is a research psychologist for the Clarke Institute of Psychiatry in Toronto. He applied for landed immigrant status when he first arrived and knew he might never be able to visit the U.S. again.

One reason Formo doesn't care much that he can visit now is that Carter's amnesty decree was only what he calls "a halfway measure." It allows draft evaders to return, but not military deserters.

Formo compares himself with a American tourists there.

friend who attended a fundamentalist Bible college in Missouri before being drafted and later deserting.

"Our thinking about the war was basically the same, but I happened to be in California where there was a lot more political awareness," he said.

"My friend Dennis didn't reach the conclusions about the war that I did until he was already in the service and saw the mindlessness of it first hand."

Most of the conclusions Formo reaches today are more psychological than political. He says he has little interest in politics.

"The war was a symptom of a larger disease in the States," he said. "The disease is violent nationalism and a belief that violence is the answer to all problems. Too many people think they're John Wayne.

"If things in the States aren't settled by violence, they're settled by money," Formo said. "Americans think that if they have enough money they can do as they damn well want without saying please or thank you."

"You can often identify Americans in restaurants. They tend to be louder and more prone to flashing their money. When Canadians travel abroad, they wear maple leaf pins so people won't think they're Americans."

Canadians don't think that American draft evaders should return because Carter has granted them amnesty, Formo said.

He said he found Canadians receptive to Americans who fled the war because there has always been anti-American sentiment in Canada and because of the way the U.S. dominates Canada.

"It's partly a reaction to the high-powered obnoxiousness of many Americans and partly because of a Canadian inferiority complex," Formo said.

Formo, who enrolled in the University of Toronto's graduate psychology program after leaving Long Beach, said he believed the war was wrong so he refused to be drafted.

Being Canadian has many rewards, he said. To break the harsh Ontario winter, he's planning a week's vacation in Cuba, a favorite Canadian vacation spot that is off-limits to Americans.

Formo said he's not interested in Cuba's communist regime. What's attractive to him is that there won't be any obnoxious

Center, only with a few refinements."

The dusty little theater looked like a small amphitheater for the staging of a Greek tragedy. There were no seats. Shaff said they'll be installed later.

Two large proscenium arches, remaining traces of the Long Beach Auditorium, loomed behind the stage. The arches will hold up the ceiling and separate the little theater from the conventional Terrace Theater.

The larger theater has a seating capacity of 3,150—the orchestra level and two balconies. On the bottom level, continental fan-shaped seating will be installed to give the impression the audience is close to the stage.

Shaff walked down a series of narrow stairways to the interior of the theater.

"We have 14 dressing rooms, a VIP reception room, complete kitchen facilities, meeting rooms. And that narrow staircase" — his hand swept the air — "that's just for stage movement. Above us, a tri-level, cantilevered stairway rises to two balcony terraces overlooking the grand lobby.

"There are seven bar-lounge complexes. A full mirrored wall in the lobby. The plaza entrance is a natural for open-air art sales and exhibits set off by the reflecting pools. A sidewalk cafe also is planned.

"It's class. Pure class," Shaff said. "It's also exciting."

First-week openers already booked include a Van Cliburn recital, the Long Beach Symphony with guest conductor Akira Endo and a ballet performance.

Shaff is hoping to institute what he calls "black-tie rock and roll" — old-fashioned rock music that's a bit more sophisticated.

The rock group Jethro Tull grossed nearly $60,000 at a recent benefit concert at the Music Center's Dorothy Chandler Pavilion, Shaff said, noting that singers Diana Ross and Bette Midler also have sold out there in week-long engagements.

"Black-tie rock is a natural bridge between established musical events like opera and the contemporary music industry," Shaff said.

As far as the types of crowds that might frequent rock events at the new complex, Shaff has talked to security officials at the Music Center who have told him "they have no more problems with rock concert crowds than they do with the people who attend opera concerts."

"We're hoping for the same kind of reaction in Long Beach," Shaff said.

Shaff says when the Pacific Terrace Convention Center is completed, it will be the most modern facility of its kind on the West Coast.

Sophisticated enough for black-tie rock and rollers to rub elbows with symphonic aficionados . . . And big enough for a herd of elephants.

Mission Hills:

Golf course villas are unique

Golf Course Villas at Mission Hills Country Club in the Palm Springs area are a "a unique desert product," according to Don Bird, sales agent.

The spacious homes are available in four plans from 1,899 to 2,867 square feet and are priced from $70,900 to $113,000.

A long list of custom quality appointments comes with each Golf Course Villa. These include soaring cathedral ceilings; commodious kitchens with all-elecric built-ins and hand-finished wood cabinetry; air conditioning; forced airheating; and, luxurious carpeting.

Wood-burningfireplaces, ceramic tile entries, sunken living rooms, wet bars and innovating skylights further enhance the Golf Course Villas.

Expansive widows throughout provide residents with panoramic views of the rolling green Mission Hills community and the desert landscape beyond.

Tiled roofs in the Southern California Spanish tradition, atriums and patios, enclosed garages with storage and golf cart parking are additional features

The St. Augustine, 2,615 square feet, is a two-story home with two bedrooms, den and two and a half baths. A lofted family room or upper living room which may be used as a third bedroom overlooks the formal living area. Lavish bathrooms include separate powder and dressing rooms.

The Willow, 2,867 squarefeet, is a luxuriant three bedroom, three bath home. The largest of the four plans it offers a separate formal dining room spacious enough for large parties. Its tinted wall-to-wall window integrates the in and outdoors.

At the front of the home, a wide, windowed hallway runs the length of the living room and provides a view of a walled, private patio/atrium.

The Joshua, 2,373 square feet is a single story with three bedrooms and three baths. It is lavishly designed with space in mind. All major rooms open to patios at the front and rear of the home.

The Bel Air, 1,902 squaare feet is just slighlly more compact. This plan has two bedrooms and two baths, lengths of closets and ample storage space.

Recreation facilities at Mission Hills enhance the desirability of the homes. The community offers a championship, 18-hole golf course, situated on 170 acres of rolling hills and lakes and an elegant 18,000-suare-foot clubhouse.

Located on the highest knoll, the clubhouse provides an 180-degree view of the overall community and the desert sands and mountains beyond. It is fully equipped with restaurant, bar, snack bar, pro shop and locker rooms.

Other recreational facilities at Mission Hills include a tennis complex which involves separate clubhouse, 13 courts and two air conditioned squash courts.

Located just minutes away from downtown Palm Springs, the Colgate-Palmolive community may be easily reached by taking I-10 to Date Palm Drive offramp, then to Avenue 36, approximately four miles. Turn left on 36th to DaVall and Mission Hills.

Homes will rise in cost during '77

The ever-increasing interest rate will be leveling off during 1977 but the average price of a home will continue to rise this year.

This picture was painted by three Southern California businessmen who were guest speakers at the Home Builders Council meeting recently in the Airporter Inn.

The dinner get-together featured John H. Owens, vice president in charge of Research and Analysis for Security Pacific National Bank; Ken Ackbarali, vice president and monetary economist fom United California Bank; and Dr. Gordon C. Bjork, professor of economics at Claremont Men's College.

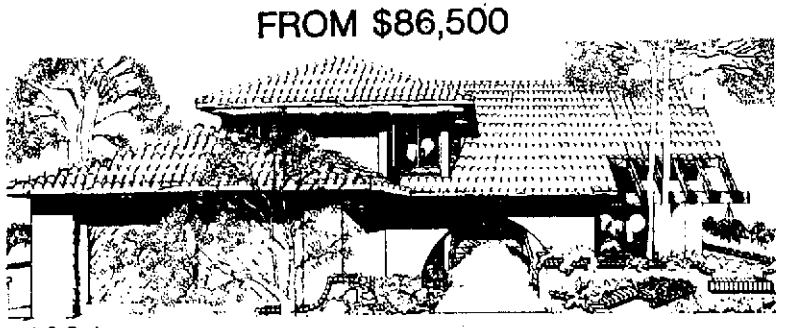

The general consensus was that because of myriad factors affecting every phase of daily living, interest rates, which have risen steadily in the past, will begin to level off sometime this year.

But the average home buyer will suffer in another area. Home prices, which have increased at an unprecedented rate, will continue to spiral upward.

3 nominated for Point

Three Long Beach youths are among 15 students from six Southland communities nominated for appointment to West Point by Rep. Glenn M. Anderson, D-Harbor City.

Nominated from Long Beach were Frederick Freed, Michael Rounds and Todd Terris.

More students from Carson were nominated than from any other area in Anderson's 32nd Congressional District. Carson nominees were Audrey Abang, Reynaldo Antonio, Jerald Berry, John Brudvig, Mark Da Silva, Johnny Raquel and John Zabel.

Nominees from other communities were Kevin Kekoa, Harbor City; Ismael Alcala, Wilmington; Mitchell McMurray, Torrance, and Robert Bailey and Odell Milligan, both of San Pedro.

Anderson has used the competitive basis for all academy appointments since he was first elected to Congress in 1968. The students will now face a final screening by the military academy admissions board which will make the final selection for appointments.

The nominees for the Navy and Air Force academies will be announced soon, Anderson said, adding that young men or women interested in a 1978 academy appointment should contact his office at 300 Long Beach Blvd. as soon as possible.

Applicants should be in their junior year of high school and letters of inquiry may be mailed to Rep. Anderson at P.O. Box 2349, Long Beach, Ca. 90801.

Board elected

The Marina Pacifica Homeowners Association elected a new Board of Directors for 1977.

The following persons were chosen by the more than 400 residents: Carl Verheyen, president; Tony Feldmann, secretary-treasurer Bob Thalimer, vice president; Jerry Kinsman and Carolyn Robison, board members. P.C. "Chris" Knoowlton, former president, was also re-elected too the Board.

Homeowners' deductions under government scrunity

Income tax deductions for homeowners for real estate taxes and interest on mortgage payments will come under heavy scrutiny in the next Congress, warned Congressman William A. Steiger (R-Wis.).

Speaking before the National Association of Realtors, he said: "There are two major goals in tax reform. One is to establish some sort of equity between those who pay their income taxes and those who do not pay. The other is to greatly simplify the tax code so that many more Americans can understand it."

Steiger, a member of the House Ways and Means Committee, said "tax reform is not about to go away." One of the major reasons the new administration and the new Congress will continue to promote greater tax reform is that "many Americans do not file income tax returns or do not file them fairly."

President Carter has called the income tax situation disgraceful, he said, and this is accented by the fact that many Americans are forced to go to tax attorneys because tax forms are too complicated to understand.

Quiet Quality.

"That's what we were looking for in Newport and Palos Verdes. But we found it at Crown Pointe. On a Sunday drive, we discovered a neighborhood of gracious mansions and rolling lawns that was more like rural Virginia than Southern California. When we saw the Crown Pointe sign, we couldn't believe it! Here were large, dramatic condominium-style homes that could offer us the spacious feeling of a private home, combined with the maintenance-free living we were seeking. The neighborhood and the quality of construction were outstanding, and the San Diego Freeway, only 5 minutes away, made commuting to work really quick and simple. We bought at Crown Pointe because it offered us the kind of life we'd been looking for... 'Quiet Quality' we call it."

A portrait of the single home buyer

One hears much these days about the newly-liberated female homebuyer with equal borrowing power, but the typical unmarried buyer is young, successful — and male — according to a new study.

"While two-thirds of the single buyers and more than half of the divorced buyers are male, you have to look at the other side of the story," points out George Fulton, marketing vice president at Walker & Lee Inc. "Unmarried women really have not been able to buy a home for very long and already they account for 46.2 per cent of the divorced buyers and 33 per cent of the single buyers. And in the widowed market, they account for 72 per cent of the sales. The ladies are coming on strong.

"However, the big surprise is how many investment-minded young singles are buying homes. Amazingly, 25 per cent of the single buyers are under 25, 19 per cent are between 26 and 30, and another 25 per cent are 31 to 35. That means that 69 per cent of the single market is 35 or under!

"In comparison, the divorced market is a little older with identical percentages for the 26 to 30 and 31 to 35 group, but only two per cent under 25. However, 14 per cent are in the 36 to 40 group, meaning that 58 percent of divorced buyers are between 26 and 40.

"Another interesting fact about single buyers is that they stop buying houses after 45 with only 7 per cent of the buyers above that age. On the other hand, 29 per cent of the divorced buyers are over 45."

Exactly 50 per cent of the single buyers described their job as being in lower management while 29 per cent are in sales and service and 11 per cent are in middle management.

Thirty-one per cent of the single buyers reported their annual income is in the $15,000 to $20,000 bracket, 22 per cent in the $20,000 to $25,000 bracket, 17 per cent, $12,000 to $15,000 and 15 per cent, $25,000 to $35,000.

Four per cent of the singles said they have children living at home and the offspring ranged from under 6 to over 22.

Forty-eight per cent of the singles had been living in an apartment. Surprisingly, 17 per cent of them owned a home and 14 per cent owned a condominium or townhouse. Those who owned their previous residence were living relatively well: 25 per cent in a $50,000 to $60,000 home and 22 per cent in a $38,000 to $45,000 home.

Their monthly rent or house payments in their former residence varied from under $100 (two per cent) to over $300 (23 per cent). The biggest categories, however, were: from $211 to $250 payments, 29 per cent; and from $171 to $210, 18 per cent.

The majority of the singles, 52 per cent, said they bought their new home because they were tired of renting. The next biggest reasons: a larger home, 21 per cent, and a better area, 18 per cent.

Two bedrooms (68 per cent) and two-and-one-half baths (33 per cent) were the rule, although 27 per cent had three bedrooms and 31 per cent had two baths.

Most single buyers paid for their new house just about what many of them got for their old house: 29 per cent bought in the $38,000 to $45,000 range and 20 per cent in the $50,000 to $60,000 range. The average price was $46,667, but the prices were spread over a broad spectrum: 14 per cent in the $33,000 to $38,000; 11 per cent in the $28,000 to $33,000 and $45,000 to $50,000 ranges; 7 per cent, $24,000 to $28,000; 3 per cent, both under $24,000 and $60,000 to $70,000; and 2 per cent, $70,000 to $80,000.

The payments on the new house in 45 per cent of the cases were in the $301 to $400 range. The next most frequent ranges: $401 to $500, 20 per cent; and $251 to $300, 16 per cent.

"As might be expected, the divorced buyer, being generally somewhat older, is more affluent and buys a slightly larger home, but the differences are not tremendous," Fulton noted.

The divorced buyers' incomes closely paralleled that of the single buyers, but was a bit more evenly distributed: $8,000 to $12,000, 10 per cent; $12,000 to $15,000, 11 per cent; $15,000 to $20,000, 33 per cent; $20,000 to $25,000, 21 per cent; $25,000 to $35,000, 14 per cent, and over $35,000, 9 per cent.

A very big — and expected — difference between the two types of buyers: 36 per cent of the divorced have children living with them. While the children are in all age brackets, over two-thirds are of school age: 13 to 18, 35 per cent; and 7 to 12, 32 per cent. One quarter, 22 per cent, are pre-schoolers.

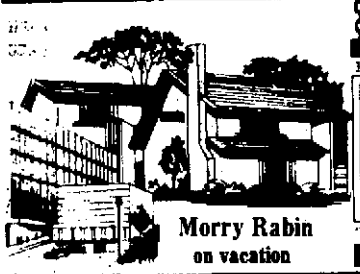

The survey shattered the myth about a large block of divorced buyers moving out of expensive homes. The value of the previously-owned home or condominium covered a very wide range, from under $24,000 (8 per cent) to over $100,000 (6 per cent). In between, the distribution was remarkably even with the two biggest categories, 16 per cent each, being $45,000 to $50,000 and $40,000 to $60,000.

The three biggest reasons for divorced people moving: tired of renting, 41 per cent; want a better area, 23 per cent; and want less maintenance, 20 per cent.

As could be anticipated, the divorced person paid more money, the most popular purchase price (24 per cent) between $50,000 and $60,000. The second and third most popular prices among divorced people: $45,000 to $50,000 range, 17 per cent; $38,000 to $45,000, 16 per cent. However, the new homes bought by divorced people covered a very broad range, from 4 per cent under $24,000 (2 per cent for singles) to 2 per cent over $80,000 (none for singles).

In 34 per cent of the cases, the payments on the new home were between $301 and $400 and, 25 per cent of the time, they were $401 to $500.

What's Your Problem?

Problems seldom on transferred mortgages

By DON CAMPBELL

How long is "forever?" It's an awesome thing to contemplate when forever is the duration of your financial responsibility for something you have sold. Would the manufacturer of a refrigerator dare to guarantee a buyer that his product would NEVER break down?

Fortunately, the word forever rarely applies in a literal sense.

Dear Mr. Campbell:

When selling a home with an FHA or VA mortgage on it, and the mortgage is assumed by the buyer, would the seller be responsible if the buyer failed to make payments and would there be a time limit on the responsibility? If the credit of the buyer was approved by FHA or VA, would that affect the seller's responsibility? — R. T. G., Tucson, Ariz.

ANSWER: I wouldn't get cold feet on this business of letting a buyer assume your FHA or VA mortgage — tens of thousands have changed hands this way without any hardships.

Theoretically, you are responsible for the buyer's retirement of your old mortgage in 15, 20 or 30 years — whatever life the mortgage still has at the time of the assumption. And this, admittedly, sounds like a long, long time in the future. From a practical standpoint, it is strictly an action of last resort as far as the lender (and behind him, his insurer, the FHA or VA) is concerned.

It's invariable better business for the VA and the FHA to fix the house up and put the repossession back on the market than it is to go back and try to track down the original buyer. Having the family assume the mortgage checked out and approved by the VA or FHA still wouldn't relieve you of the responsibility.

Dear Mr. Campbell:

On several occasions you have advised people with the ability to pay for three-quarters, or all of a home they desire to buy, to pay only about half or less because of "the tax advantage" resulting from interest they would pay on their mortgage.

I have worked this out in terms of my tax savings versus the amount I would have free for investment if I did not have mortgage payments to make.

It appears to me, that at my income bracket each dollar I spend on interest reduces my taxes about 28 cents and each dollar I can avoid spending on interest gives me increased spendable funds of 68 cents. (When state income tax is added, the tax savings is 36 cents and the increased spendable funds reduced to 60 cents).

If I am missing something in my reasoning, please advise me so that I will not reduce the amount of mortgage outstanding on my home. — J. H. H., Tempe, Ariz.

ANSWER: Working with the right combination of assumptions, one can always blow the "it's-better-to-have-a-mortgage" argument out of the water. And, if taxes were the only consideration, then I would gladly concede that in as many as half the cases, outright ownership would be preferable.

But the tax-savings situation is not the only argument — or even the best argument. A far better argument against paying off a house is the shrinking dollar. For example, the 1939 dollar that was worth 58 cents by '49, had eroded to 38 cents by '69 and was down to 25 cents by the end of 1975.

Since 1939 there have only been two years when the value of the dollar DIDN'T shrink. There's no reason to think the future is going to see any change in this: the inflation rate still stands as 5.4 per cent a year and some experts see double-digit inflation returning in 1977.

And you want to pay off a 20-year mortgage with 1976 dollars? Well, if you must...

Dear Mr. Campbell:

I've rented the same house for the past six years from the same landlord and it has been a very nice arrangement. It has been helpful to me as a widow to have the landlord's two sons mow and trim my yard regularly — even though it isn't written in the lease.

Now he has sold the house to another man who has agreed to continue the lease (it's an investment for both the old and the new owner), but when I asked him about the grass mowing he just laughed at me. Didn't the old landlord establish this as a precedence that has to be honored by the new one? — Mrs. L. L. K., Long Beach, Calif.

ANSWER: An interesting interpretation, but I'm afraid that it won't wash. Look on it as a nice courtesy that was extremely pleasant while it lasted. The new owner isn't bound by it, though.

Dear Mr. Campbell:

We are about to make a proposition on a house that has an almost new, wall-to-wall, carpet in the living room. Is this part of the deal?

ANSWER: Unless specifically exempted in the offering, yes. — R. R., Buffalo, N.Y.

Announcement was made at the close of the association's annual mid-winter meeting in Anaheim.

The NAR, based in Chicago, has 500,000 members.

Crown Pointe reaches half-way point in sales

Crown Pointe, a new community of two and three bedroom single-family attached residences in the exclusive Virginia Country Club area of Long Beach, offers a condominium-style of living not usually available in a single-family home. Over half of the first phase's 42 homes have been sold.

Architecturally designed in pairs to be compatible with the large homes found in the neighborhood that surrounds Crown Pointe, the community offers a choice of five different floor plans ranging in size from about 2,000 to 2,600 square feet.

According to Clifton S. Jones, Jr., president of Long Beach Construction Company, the developer of Crown Pointe, a good selection of these new single-family attached residences is now available from $114,100.

"Since the homes are constructed in pairs and ownership includes the land on which the home has been built, Crown Pointe offers the feeling of a spacious single-family home," said Jones. "At the same time, this planned residential development also provides for landscaping maintenance, gated main entries, gated private entries, and an electronic security system. Crown Pointe, therefore, actually offers a resident the best of both single-family living and the low-maintenance, security-oriented life-style that is normally associated with condominiums and townhomes."

The42 homes in the first phase of development have been designed into and constructed on what was a private 12-acre estate. Ownership of the property has been in the Jones family for two generations, and members of the family still reside in four large manor homes that are within the security gates of Crown Pointe.

In addition to the 300 mature trees that have been designed into the open space within the community's environment, the homes themselves offer a wide range of convenience and design features, including: dramatic 9-foot or higher ceiling on the first floor; oversized wood entry doors; a full complement of built-in kichen appliances; spacious master bedroom suites with separate dressing area and bath, many with fireplace, separate sitting room, and breakfast balcony; tile or hardwood entres with wall-to-wall carpeting throughout each home; and electronic garage door openers.

Crown Pointe is 5 minutes from the San Diego Freeway, and may be reached by exiting the freeway at Long Beach Boulevard. After traveling north on Long Beach Boulevard to San Antonio Drive, turn left on San Antonio and then right on Virginia to Country Club Drive. The community is located in the 4100 block of Country Club Drive. Furnished models are open daily from 10 a.m. to 6

Computer matches buyers and sellers

By WAYNE MARKHAM
Knight News Service

Every hour of every day a computer is searching for buyers and sellers — object matchmaking.

This electronic 'dating game," however, is part of a new computerized real estate system that experts predict could well revolutionize the way people buy and sell homes.

The computer is a giant memory bank that files away every home for sale, every prospective buyer looking for homes and performs a lightning-fast job of matching them up.

IN ADDITION, the computer can do complex mathematical analysis such as showing a buyer the economic advantages of purchasing a home compared to renting over a 20-year-period or giving a businessman detailed investment analysis and amortization schedule.

Buyers who want to look only at homes priced between $52,000 and $55,000 with four bedrooms, sauna, flagstone patio, and boat dock can get a split-second printout from the computer's electronic memory banks of every house that qualifies.

For sellers, the computer has an equally long memory that's able to produce a profile on prospective buyers by income, home price, decorating preferences or any of a dozen other criteria.

Real estate brokers say the computer ultimately will speed up the home buying and selling process, saving both parties money in the long run.

"The typical two-week lag time before all other offices are notified of new listings will be eliminated," notes realtor Phillip Thomas, immediate past president of the Miami Board.

"And if we speed up the sale of the typical $40,000 house by just that two weeks, we'll save the average seller $150, figuring it costs 10 per cent per year to own and maintain a home," he adds.

(The 10 per cent annual cost figures out to $4,000 a year on a $40,000 house, or approximately $11 a day. That reflects about $150 in a two-week period)

THE TWO-WEEK time lag in getting new listings exposed to the MLS offices occurred because of the printing deadlines in producing the Miami Board's four-inch thick listing book.

"It would take a salesman or clerk almost one day each week just to index the listings. Now the computer does all that automatically," Thomas says.

The technology for computerized real estate listing services has existed for some time, notes Don Williams, chairman of the Miami board's Multiple Listings Service committee." "But the prices were too high for the typical real estate office to afford."

The Detroit-based Realtron firm has a portable terminal available for brokers which can be taken to buyers' or sellers' homes. Using a telephone link to the central computer, the portable model can produce a list of comparable properties for sale, search a specific area for all homes on the market and various other functions.

The Miami Board's system is different because of the more extensive use of field terminals in brokers' offices that can provide instantaneous distribution of new listings and new buyer prospects.

Now brokers can list new homes for sale by just sitting down at the terminal in their office, which is connected to every other terminal in the system. The distribution process takes only a matter of seconds.

Similarly, prospective buyers' profiles are entered in the system and circulated to all the offices in equally speedy fashion.

"THINK of the great sales tool this becomes," says Thomas. "Punch in the area, price, amount of down payment, the number of bedrooms required, pinpoint requirements such as swimming pool, boat dock or whatever, and you get a list of what's available and can go right to those homes without driving around looking at homes the buyer's not interested in."

Williams cautions that salesmen "could do this type of thing with the old system, but they might miss a potential house or a prospective buyer.

Amazing reaction to 'Roots'

By PATRICIA de LUNA
Staff Writer

A tall, dark-skinned woman made her way quickly through the crowd, pressed unmindfully against a long velvet rope which gently barricaded her from the man she wanted to reach, a man seated on a high-backed wicker chair. She handed a guard the small beige envelope on which she had written in neat prim letters — Alex Haley.

The woman had taught members of Haley's family, his cousins back in Memphis, it seemed, and the woman was anxious to make contact with him. "Did you see what he did with the letter?" she asked, anxiously peering her head this way and that around the mix of people just in front of her.

"I know he won't read it now, not while he's autographing the books. I just want to make sure he gets it."

Finally assured that the note had been given to Haley's administrative assistant, who was seated next to him in the department store, the woman gazed for a moment, said aloud, "he seems such a fine man," then disappeared back through the crowd.

Her reaction was typical of many of those who had waited in line for as much as five hours last week for the chance to make contact, however brief, with the man who had written "Roots."

Haley was the black man who had traced his family history back seven generations through slavery to find the truth about "the African" ancestor who had been kidnapped away from freedom while chopping wood to make a drum.

His story, which made television history and was now making book publishing history, had been taken by thousands of other black Americans as their own.

DEPARTMENT stores where Haley was scheduled for two hours each day to autograph copies of the $12.50 Doubleday publication sold out long before the author arrived. The men and women purchased several copies each, one for each member in the family, in order to assure that their children would always be able to know the story of Kunta Kinte and his descendants.

At a store in the Crenshaw Shopping Center in southeast Los Angeles this past week, the line was so long it wound entirely around the exterior of the building. People took their turns to walk up to Haley, chat briefly, smile, kiss or shake the hand, reclaim their copy of his book, which now had the treasured signature, and file out.

Many carried bags full of several copies, if not for their own family and friends, then for strangers who for one reason or another were not able to wait in line but were willing to pay $1 or $5 to someone already in line.

To Haley, this reaction was "a phenomenon." A "good analogy" he said would compare this response to the reception he had received from the jet black Africans in the small villages outside Juffure, a few days up stream on The Gambia river.

He details the incident in the last chapter of his book: "Staring ahead, I realized that word of what had happened must have left there well before I did. The driver slowing down, I could see this village's people thronging the road ahead; they were waving, amid their cacophony of crying out something; I stood up in the Land-Rover, waving back as they seemed grudging to open a path for the Land-Rover.

"I guess we had moved a third

COULD A MAN do what Miss Welcome to Long Beach does for the city? The question was raised last week when the contract the Jaycees signed to conduct the Miss Welcome contest was labeled discriminatory. Wednesday, Laurie Johnson said she is happy with the job and the way the contest was run. Jaycee contest attacked

By JAMES M. LEAVY
Staff Writer

Last week the 25-year-old Miss Welcome to Long Beach contest teetered on the brink of oblivion while city officials wondered whether or not they should finance an activity and an organization which violates a policy of nondiscrimination.

The question, however, was not raised until after the Junior Chamber of Commerce signed a contract with the city to conduct the 1977 contest.

The issue was triggered by Sandy Roberts, administrative analyst for the city's Budget and Research Department. She attended a Christmas party with a member of the Jaycees and expressed interest in joining the organization. She was told she could not become a member because the national Jaycee charter specifies males only. Ms. Roberts decided to find out if the city was supporting the organization financially.

When she discovered the contract providing Jaycees with $2,000 for the contest, Ms. Roberts showed it to her boss, Budget Director James Phelps. His department is responsible for the community events portion of the budget.

Phelps sent the contract to Affirmative Action Officer Henry Taboada in the city manager's office.

TABOADA SAYS the contract violates the Civil Rights Act of 1964 on two counts: First, the Jaycees do not admit women to membership and secondly, the contest is sexist in nature.

Taboada made two suggestions to the Jaycees to correct the problem. He advised members of the organization to form a bilateral corporation which would allow them to accept women without violating the provisions of their national charter. He pointed to Jaycee operations in Palo Alto and San Francisco which have done just that.

He also recommended the Miss Welcome competition be converted into a "nonsex designated contest" . . . one which would allow anyone to be the city's official host or hostess. In short, he feels men should be able to enter the contest with as good a chance of winning as women. He even suggests the possibility of changing the name to "You're Welcome to Long Beach."

Taboada says the contract violated the idea that "no person should be denied the benefit of a program financed by the city." He admits the city does not have a written policy on the matter.

Jaycee President Elliott Thompson Jr. thinks the whole matter is ridiculous. "This is not our contest. It's the city's contest. We contract to put it on for them. We're not trying to save our own private beauty contest. It's up to the council to determine whether or not they want to do it."

Thompson does not think the city should determine Jaycee policy. A proposal to allow women to join was soundly defeated at a national convention two years ago.

HE DEFENDS the Miss Welcome contest by noting that unmarried Jaycees are not allowed to judge the competition and, member's wives, Jaycettes, do much of the work involved in staging the event. They plan to kick off this year's competition with a "tea" scheduled tentatively for May 1.

"We don't have a swimsuit competition and it is not a cheesecake contest. We select the girl with poise and the ability to meet people," Thompson says. Until two years ago candidates appeared for judging in swimsuits and their figures were assessed as part of the competition.

Jaycees also spend more than the $2,000 allotted them by the city for the contest and put in an estimated 700 man-hours on it each year, he says.

Taboada thought the matter could be resolved informally with Jaycees last Monday. Thompson was prepared to deal with it during the City Council meeting Tuesday if members chose to reconsider the contract they had approved at an earlier session.

But during council recess, Thompson was told by the mayor and city manager to go ahead with the event this year inasmuch as the contract had received approval and the city had yet to write a policy on its relationship with private organizations which may be discriminatory.

This is the first year the organization had to sign a written contract with the city, Thompson says. At this point, he is neutral on the contest. "We could do with it or without it," he says. But the organization has decided to go ahead with it this year.

SOME CITY officials, including Councilwoman Renee Simon, have expressed concern about spending money in the community events budget for such a contest. Phelps thinks the city may take a look at other special interest groups which receive money from the city.

Miss Welcome, often chosen from among college or junior college students, receives no money for her efforts as the city's official hostess. Thompson says she makes appearances three or four times a month, mostly at Chamber of Commerce functions.

This year's Miss Welcome is 20-year-old Laurie Johnson. She competed with 35 women in a contest which involved mostly an assessment of the candidates' personalities. They were taken to lunch and interviewed to determine how well they would relate to people at public events.

Miss Johnson is a travel consultant for World Travel Inc. in Fullerton. She studied at Cerritos College and is a graduate of Pius X High School in Downey. She has no reservations about doing her job as hostess for the city.

Mission Hills:
Golf course villas are unique

Golf Course Villas at Mission Hills Country Club in the Palm Springs area are a "a unique desert product," according to Don Bird, sales agent.

The spacious homes are available in four plans from 1,899 to 2,867 square feet and are priced from $70,900 to $113,000.

A long list of custom quality appointments comes with each Golf Course Villa. These include soaring cathedral ceilings; commodious kitchens with all-elecric built-ins and hand-finished wood cabinetry; air conditioning; forced airheating; and, luxurious carpeting.

Wood-burningfireplaces, ceramic tile entries, sunken living rooms, wet bars and innovating skylights further enhance the Golf Course Villas.

Expansive widows throughout provide residents with panoramic views of the rolling green Mission Hills community and the desert landscape beyond.

Tiled roofs in the Southern California Spanish tradition, atriums and patios, enclosed garages with storage and golf cart parking are additional features

The St. Augustine, 2,615 square feet, is a two-story home with two bedrooms, den and two and a half baths. A lofted family room or upper living room which may be used as a third bedroom overlooks the formal living area. Lavish bathrooms include separate powder and dressinng rooms.

The Willow, 2,867 squarefeet, is a luxuriant three bedroom, three bath home. The largest of the four plans it offers a separate formal dining room spacious enough for large parties. Its tinted wall-to-wall window integrates the in and outdoors.

At the front of the home, a wide, windowed hallway runs the length of the living room and provides a view of a walled, private patio/atrium.

The Joshua, 2,373 square feet is a single story with three bedrooms and three baths. It is lavishly designed with space in mind. All major rooms open to patios at the front and rear of the home.

The Bel Air, 1,902 squaare feet is just slightly more compact. This plan has two bedrooms and two baths, lengths of closets and ample storage space.

Recreation facilities at Mission Hills enhance the desirability of the homes. The community offers a championship, 18-hole golf course, situated on 170 acres of rolling hills and lakes and an elegant 18,000-suare-foot clubhouse.

Located on the highest knoll, the clubhouse provides an 180-degree view of the overall community and the desert sands and mountains beyond. It is fully equipped with restaurant, bar, snack bar, pro shop and locker rooms.

Other recreational facilities at Mission Hills include a tennis complex which involves separate clubhouse, 13 courts and two air conditioned squash courts.

Located just minutes away from downtown Palm Springs, the Colgate-Palmolive community may be easily reached by taking I-10 to Date Palm Drive offramp, then to Avenue 36, approximately four miles. Turn left on 36th to DaVall and Mission Hills.

Homes will rise in cost during '77

The ever-increasing interest rate will be leveling off during 1977 but the average price of a home will continue to rise this year.

This picture was painted by three Southern California businessmen who were guest speakers at the Home Builders Council meeting recently in the Airporter Inn.

The dinner get-together featured John H. Owens, vice president in charge of Research and Analysis for Security Pacific National Bank; Ken Ackbarali, vice president and monetary economist fom United California Bank; and Dr. Gordon C. Bjork, professor of economics at Claremont Men's College.

The general consensus was that because of myriad factors affecting every phase of daily living, interest rates, which have risen steadily in the past, will begin to level off sometime this year.

But the average home buyer will suffer in another area. Home prices, which have increased at an unprecedented rate, will continue to spiral upward.

"EQUAL HOUSING OPPORTUNITIES"

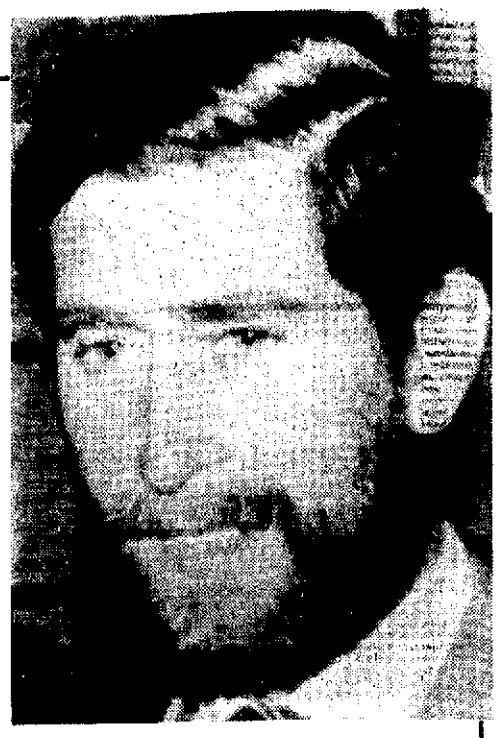

Glad you asked that!

While visiting in Hollywood, The Gardners ask their own questions of celebrities and old friends.

INSEPARABLE foursome through the years were George Burns and Gracie Allen and Jack Benny and Mary Livingston, above photo, before the death of Gracie and Benny — Burns continues to expand his career horizons, winning an Oscar last year for his performance n "The Sunshine Boys" with Walter Matthau.

PRINCE Charles of Great Britain — astrologer predicts unhappy future for the heir to British throne.

TENNIS star Jimmy Connors — losing not his style.

The girl in George Burns's life these days is pretty Lisa Miller, who acts as his hostess, audience, constant companion, handholder, and secretary. Responding to the rousing reviews his book "Living It Up" received from the critics, George said it was his first book in 21 years and "if it does well, I might write a book every 21 years."

He gets up at five every morning to report to Warner Brothers for another movie, titled "Oh, God!" "In this one I play the title role of God," he said. "After all I couldn't play John Denver, he's too young." Before being rediscovered and winning an Oscar in "The Sunshine Boys," his last film had been "Honolulu," shot in 1939! "You see," he said, "I waited 36 years to make my next movie because I was afraid of over-exposure!"

George has been in showbiz since he was seven years old, when he was a member of the "Peewee Quartet," a gang of kids who sang on street corners, saloons, in front of theater lobbies and wherever a passed hat would be filled with pennies.

Before he was out of adolescence (at the age of 37, he says) he'd been a trick roller skater, a dance teacher and vaudeville comedian.

When he and Gracie Allen teamed up, George was the funny partner. But their audiences switched the roles. They thought Gracie was the funny one. So George played straight.

They married in Cleveland in 1926, and toured the Keith vaudeville circuit until they made their first film, a one-reel comedy called "Lamb Chops." The name and material were taken from their vaudeville act.

Burns and Allen also shared the last two-a-day bill ever presented at the Palace Theater, co-headlining with Eddie Cantor and Georgie Jessel.

The foursome broke all records at the Palace, being held over for nine weeks. A fortuitous dividend was Cantor inviting George and Gracie to guest on his top-rated network radio program. It resulted in their being signed to do their own show, which made such a hit it ran for 17 years.

Before reaching such dizzy heights, Burns and Allen guested on the Rudy Vallee and Guy Lombardo programs — and in 1932 became a permanent fixture on Guy's show.

They subsequently co-starred in 14 films, with such superstars as Bing Crosby, W. C. Fields, Ethel Merman, Bob Burns, Jack Benny, Fred Astaire, Martha Raye, Jack Oakie, Eleanor Powell, Carole Lombard, Dixie Lee, Robert Young, Bob Hope and Betty Grable.

When Gracie retired in 1958, George starred in his own TV series for a season.

In '62, he teamed with Carol Channing in theater and nightclub tours, again the following year with Dorothy Provine.

In '64, to mend his wounds after Gracie died of a heart attack, George surrounded himself with work. He produced and starred with Connie Stevens in the TV series "Wendy and Me," produced TV's "No Time for Sergeants," "Mona McCluskey" (with Juliet Prowse) and helped originate and became a co-owner of the TV series "Mr. Ed." The talking horse continues in syndication.

THOUGH GEORGE thought his crowning achievement was a one-man concert at New York's Philharmonic Hall, he later topped it by performing concerts in a string of cities, concluding at Carnegie Hall. He underestimated the superstardom he'd reach till he made "The Sunshine Boys" with Walter Matthau and Richard Benjamin in 1975. Approaching 80 then, he was named (by the National Association of Theater Owners) as "Star of Tomorrow."

A lifelong friend, crony and admirer of Jack Benny, it's ironic that George would probably still be settling for guest appearances or singing on variety shows if Benny were still alive. For Jack was originally supposed to play the role in "The Sunshine Boys," which proved to be George's greatest, if somewhat delayed, encore.

Q: I heard that porno movie queen Marilyn Chambers is about to embark on a new career. What could it possibly be? — L. McN., Richmond, Va.

A: Music — and Chambers's music is singing. The one-time Ivory Soap model has emerged from "Behind the Green Door" — and will be heard on a disc which she recorded privately, then sold outright to the Roulette label.

Q: I heard that a British astrologist had some very dire predictions about Prince Charles. Do you know what they were? — Bigid Welch, Buffalo.

A: The present Charles, warns author-astrologist Roger Elliott, is in a situation akin to that of his predecessor, Charles I — who was beheaded in 1649. Elliott also predicts the further decline and eventual fall of the British Empire and the House of Windsor during a revolution in the 1990s — perhaps 1992.

Q: Has tennis champ Jimmy Connors ever formulated a philosophy about winning or losing a match? — Jules Stevens, Milwaukee.

A: Yes, "I hate to lose," he admits, "more than I love to win!"

FORMER porno movie queen Marilyn Chambers, below — launches new music career.

Lucy carved career out of pride, determination

Lucille Ball leans against her backgammon table and sips her second afternoon scotch in the quiet hush of her Beverly Hills home. No reason to hurry. Her kids have grown up and moved away. Her husband Gary Morton is dining out with golf buddies.

A California sunset casts an orange glow across the empty swimming pool outside, reminding her it will soon be night, time to slash on some lipstick and drive with a visiting sister-in-law from New York to a nearby restaurant for an early steak before bedtime. An old dog with asthma wheezes on a chintz sofa. Ice cubes melt lazily in her glass. The only sounds of life in the rambling old house. She's alone, but she's not lonely.

DESPITE pleas from fans, Lucille Ball plans no return to TV other than two yearly specials for CBS.

There are no cameras turning, no signs of make-up men and hairdressers. The lines in her face have been honestly earned, along with the millions she's made being the idol of millions. Tonight she doesn't have to be the star of "I Love Lucy." She's just a woman, a mother, a wife with the night off who doesn't have to be "on."

After 25 years as the funniest woman in America, she can look at the TV scripts that line the walls of her den and know it didn't happen by accident.

IS SHE HAPPY with the way things turned out? She smiles wryly and runs her hands through her popsicle orange hair. "How could I be anything else? The CBS tribute I did before Christmas and the accolades that flooded in from the industrry just floored me."

In addition to those from William Paley and the CBS brass, the cables are still pouring in. She fingers them proudly. "John Wayne, Gale Gordon, Sammy Davis Jr., Bob Hope, Tennessee Ernie Ford, Carol Burnett, my writers, my sponsors, the people who did all of my lab work. Here's one from Vivian Vance that says, 'A wise man once said hitch your wagon to a star, and I did. You made me what I am today, and I am satisfied—Love, Viv.' She hated being called Ethel, you know. But she was a great show doctor and a wonderful right arm and when she got married and moved East and quit the show, I never really did recover."

Awards? "They meant something because they were all sincere. I haven't had that many. I've had plenty, but not a plethora. I couldn't do a whole house in them, but I could do a small room."

It's all over now. The Lucy shows have moved out, making way for headier stuff. The 19 TV Guide covers she was on are all framed on the wall of her pool house. Her scrapbooks are as full as her memories, and she doesn't look back with any regrets on her reign for a quarter of a century as the queen of television.

"I keep up with my old TV family. Viv calls me all the time and we all exchange gifts at Christmas. I find myself watching old reruns and enjoying them for the first time, because when I did them I had to look at rushes and be critical and I never saw the finished shows with music and sound effects. Some of them I've never seen. My writers were the best in the business. None of those shows were ad-libbed. Everything was planned, rehearsed and timed. The years those writers put in and the way every comedy series has stolen from them for the past 20 years.....it makes me sick to think they never got an Emmy. We had a winner as long as it lasted.

"THE SECRET, I think, was reality. My audiences saw their own foibles mirrored in what happened to Lucy. They could watch and say, 'Oh, Mabel, that's what happened when you baked your first cake, remember?' We squeezed comedy out of vacuum cleaners, washing machines, grocery bills. Now the world is ugly and the comedy is ugly, too. After the 6 o'clock news, nothing that follows is very funny.

"On 'I Love Lucy' we never married the homosexual uncle to another man in the living room or electrocuted the children in the bathtub or drowned the grandfather in chicken soup. The things you see now are horrifying, and you're supposed to laugh at them. I don't understand it, and I don't think I ever will and it certainly isn't entertainment.

rex reed

"But times have changed and we expect more. I'll give you an example of how even I am guilty. One night a few years ago I was flipping the dial looking for a show called 'Combat,' and I finally found it and settled back to watch. These soldiers in camouflage helmets were creeping though the jungle, and nothing was happening. They were just creeping. Very boring, I thought.

"Finally a shot rang out and a guy's head rolled right in front of the camera, and I thought, 'Good heavens!' and then nothing else happened for a long time and I finally said, 'All right, awreddy—what's with this director?' I was looking at the real war in Vietnam and didn't know it. Real blood, real bullets, real guys getting killed, and I was complaining because there wasn't enough action! Today we're satiated with violence and sharks and sex, and we just accept it. It's sad for the young people because they have nothing to look forward to."

What does she watch for laughs? "Nothing much. Nancy Walker is funny, she just doesn't have my writers. 'All in the Family' put words like dago, wop, kike back into our vocabulary and taught little kids that if they got a laugh in their living room they'd work even better in the street. I don't watch 'Mary Hartman,' either. I send money to aid V.D. clinics, why should I look to them for laughs?"

YET DESPITE the offers she's had to bring back the Lucy shows, she says she "knew when to throw in the towel. It was traumatic to close down the arena, lock up the offices and get rid of all those people who worked for me so many years. I cried for four months. I miss the creativity, I miss Vivian, I miss the friends. For 25 years, it was like going to a party.

"When Desi and I were beginning to have serious trouble with our marriage, we couldn't quit because we were committed to CBS for five-year stretches. Sometimes I was happier on the show than I was at home. But if we were coming out today with our first Lucy show, we'd be hooted off the network. The generations of kids I babysat for with my show are now my loyal fans, but if we started over now they'd howl, 'Where's the sex, where's the violence, where are the sick jokes?'

'I've always prided myself in knowing when to get off and I think I waited three years too long. I was ready to quit five years before I did. I was getting too old to be yelled at by Uncle Harry for doing idiotic things. Nobody twisted my arm but myself."

SO MANY STARS turn out miserable, but Lucy ran a business like a lady tycoon, soared to the top of television and raised a family all at the same time and always landed on her feet, like a cat falling off the top of a refrigerator. What's her secret? "If you asked me that a few years back, I couldn't answer because I was in the throes of disaster. But I met a very unusual man, and there aren't many like him. Gary Morton brought back all the dreams I had thrown away.

"I have a lot to thank many people for, but to find at such a late date someone who had lived, who wasn't looking around the corner for someone younger and prettier, who knew how enjoy a home, who was anxious to learn and build and live and love and take the bad with the good — well, it saved my life.

"It took me a few years into the marriage to realize I had made this great choice, but he's an unusual man and he's made me unusually happy.

"He sat for five years watching and learning. He didn't get a title and he didn't do anything on my show for a long time. He was just 'the star's husband.' But I'm a great believer in nepotism, you know. I had my sister producing my show, both husbands always worked with me, my kids were both on the show, my brother was on salary. If they can cut the mustard, they're in.

Board elected

The Marina Pacifica Homeowners Association elected a new Board of Directors for 1977.

The following persons were chosen by the more than 400 residents: Carl Verheyen, president; Tony Feldmann, secretary-treasurer Bob Thallmer, vice president; Jerry Kinsman and Carolyn Robison, board members. P.C. "Chris" Knoowlton, former president, was also re-elected too the Board.

Homeowners' deductions under government scrunity

Income tax deductions for homeowners for real estate taxes and interest on mortgage payments will come under heavy scrutiny in the next Congress, warned Congressman William A. Steiger (R-Wis.).

Speaking before the National Association of Realtors, he said: "There are two major goals in tax reform. One is to establish some sort of equity between those who pay their income taxes and those who do not pay. The other is to greatly simplify the tax code so that many more Americans can understand it."

Steiger, a member of the House Ways and Means Committee, said "tax reform is not about to go away." One of the major reasons the new administration and the new Congress will continue to promote greater tax reform is that "many Americans do not file income tax returns or do not file them fairly."

President Carter has called the income tax situation disgraceful, he said, and this is accented by the fact that many Americans are forced to go to tax attorneys because tax forms are too complicated to understand.

Quiet Quality.

"That's what we were looking for in Newport and Palos Verdes. But we found it at Crown Pointe. On a Sunday drive, we discovered a neighborhood of gracious mansions and rolling lawns that was more like rural Virginia than Southern California. When we saw the Crown Pointe sign, we couldn't believe it! Here were large, dramatic condominium-style homes that could offer us the spacious feeling of a private home, combined with the maintenance-free living we were seeking. The neighborhood and the quality of construction were outstanding, and the San Diego Freeway, only 5 minutes away, made commuting to work really quick and simple. We bought at Crown Pointe because it offered us the kind of life we'd been looking for... 'Quiet Quality' we call it."

At that moment

The Congo, the first week in January, 1963.

Albert Verbrugghe, a Belgian cement worker, is driving down a quiet street with his wife and another woman in the copper town of Jadotsville. Suddenly...

Machine gun fire.

Verbrugghe stumbles from his car. Inside, his wife is already dead and the other woman is dying. Blood streaming from a wound under his eyes, he cries out:

"Why, why, why?" ...

The anguished question was not new to emerging Africa, especially the Congo where senseless killing and bedlam marked the first 30 months of independence.

The Congo was set free in 1960 after 80 years of frequently harsh and always profitable rule by the Belgians. It had no experience in self-government and no time to learn. It was hurried overnight from the slow step of the ox to the roar of the jet. A country one-third the size of the United States, it had not a single Congolese college graduate, not one Congolese doctor or lawyer, engineer or military officer or anybody trained in government.

Why?

And many natives were led to believe that, with independence, they would immediately inherit the white man's world, his house, his car, his woman. Thus, the new Republic of the Congo began in a nightmare of killing, looting and rape, and Europeans fled by the thousands.

Postal clerks became cabinet ministers and government became a roaring farce played by the Marx brothers and no one knew the size of the army because many garrisons existed only on paper while the local commanders pocketed the payroll. Soldiers mutinied or refused to fight or left a vital roadblock because it was raining or it was Sunday or it was after five o'clock. Teachers went unpaid for two years in many places because higher authority had gotten to the payroll first. The feuds of ancient tribalism continued and in one 300-mile stretch of railroad the train crew had to be changed nine times to avoid slaughter.

In Katanga, the copper-rich province which provided half the revenue for the central government, Moishe Tshombe led a secessionist movement. Without Katanga, where Belgium and England were heavily invested, the new republic would fall apart. United Nations troops came in at the behest of the central government, which cried of "colonialist machinations."

And so, in the first week of January, 1963, nervous Indian troops opened fire on a Volkswagen on a quiet street in Jadotville. Why? Because, they said, the driver refused to halt for a routine inspection.

At Wit's End

Elevator a nonsmoker's paradise

I witnessed a wedding last summer that focused attention on a real problem: smokers vs. non-smokers.

The smokers (seated at the left of the altar) and the non-smokers (seated at the right of the altar) heard the minister ask, "Do you, Debbie, promise to love and cherish from this day forward, for better or for worse, for richer or for poorer, in sickness and in health, so long as Richard inhales?" She took a deep breath and answered, "I will."

It made you wonder. Could a militant non-smoker, wearing a Thank You For Not Smoking headband with a veil attached, find happiness with a man with a brown stain on his index finger? Only time would tell.

LAST WEEK, I ran into Debbie. She jumped up, clicked her heels in mid-air and said, "I quit! It's a matter of life and breath."

"I know that, Debbie," I smiled. "So, how is Richard?"

"Who knows?" she sighed. "The only time I see him is on elevators and in doctor's offices where all smoking is prohibited. Every place else has smoking and non-smoking areas and we are split up."

"Is that any kind of life for two young people who are just married?"

"We knew there would be hardships. When we went on a vacation last year, I saw him on the plane briefly when he went to use the restroom. Sometimes, if the smoke isn't too thick, I wave to him in restaurants where I'm seated across the room."

"Are you saying you are never together?"

"That's right. When we go to a movie, he sits in the smoking section and I sit in the non-smoking section. We never talk in the lobby of a theater anymore. I can't stand the smoke. Since he's in a smoker's car pool, I ride to work with a non-smoker's group. We used to go to the grocery together, but now he has to stay outside if he wants to light up. Our entire house is sectioned off into smoking and non-smoking areas."

"THE PROBLEM is going to get worse," I said. "More and more, our society is being asked to make a choice between smoking and non-smoking."

"I know," sighed Debbie. "I don't know what we'll do when the baby comes. I'd like Richard to see it, but the hospital is definitely for non-smokers."

"The baby!" I gasped. "How did you ever get pregnant in the first place?"

She shrugged. "I've narrowed it down to the doctor's office and elevators."

Amazing reaction to 'Roots'

By PATRICIA de LUNA
Staff Writer

A tall, dark-skinned woman made her way quickly through the crowd, pressed unmindfully against a long velvet rope which gently barricaded her from the man she wanted to reach, a man seated on a high-backed wicker chair. She handed a guard the small beige envelope on which she had written in neat prim letters — Alex Haley.

The woman had taught members of Haley's family, his cousins back in Memphis, it seemed, and the woman was anxious to make contact with him. "Did you see what he did with the letter?" she asked, anxiously peering her head this way and that around the mix of people just in front of her.

"I know he won't read it now, not while he's autographing the books. I just want to make sure he gets it."

Finally assured that the note had been given to Haley's administrative assistant, who was seated next to him in the department store, the woman gazed for a moment, said aloud, "he seems such a fine man," then disappeared back through the crowd.

Her reaction was typical of many of those who had waited in line for as much as five hours last week for the chance to make contact, however brief, with the man who had written "Roots."

Haley was the black man who had traced his family history back seven generations through slavery to find the truth about "the African" ancestor who had been kidnapped away from freedom while chopping wood to make a drum.

His story, which made television history and was now making book publishing history, had been taken by thousands of other black Americans as their own.

DEPARTMENT stores where Haley was scheduled for two hours each day to autograph copies of the $12.50 Doubleday publication sold out long before the author arrived. The men and women purchased several copies each, one for each member in the family, in order to assure that their children would always be able to know the story of Kunta Kinte and his descendants.

At a store in the Crenshaw Shopping Center in southeast Los Angeles this past week, the line was so long it wound entirely around the exterior of the building. People took their turns to walk up to Haley, chat briefly, smile, kiss or shake the hand, reclaim their copy of his book, which now had the treasured signature, and file out.

Many carried bags full of several copies, if not for their own family and friends, then for strangers who for one reason or another were not able to wait in line but were willing to pay $1 or $5 to someone already in line.

To Haley, this reaction was "a phenomenon." A "good analogy" he said would compare this response to the reception he had received from the jet black Africans in the small villages outside Juffure, a few days up stream on The Gambia river.

He details the incident in the last chapter of his book: "Staring ahead, I realized that word of what had happened must have left there well before I did. The driver slowing down, I could see this village's people thronging the road ahead; they were waving, amid their cacophony of crying out something; I stood up in the Land-Rover, waving back as they seemed grudging to open a path for the Land-Rover.

"I guess we had moved a third

Jaycee contest attacked

COULD A MAN do what Miss Welcome to Long Beach does for the city? The question was raised last week when the contract the Jaycees signed to conduct the Miss Welcome contest was labeled discriminatory. Wednesday, Laurie Johnson said she is happy with the job and the way the contest was run. She cut a ribbon along with Councilman Don Phillips, left, and Carl Karcher to mark the official opening of Carls Jr. at Seventh Street and Long Beach Boulevard. Staff photo by KENT HENDERSON

By JAMES M. LEAVY
Staff Writer

Last week the 25-year-old Miss Welcome to Long Beach contest teetered on the brink of oblivion while city officials wondered whether or not they should finance an activity and an organization which violates a policy of nondiscrimination.

The question, however, was not raised until after the Junior Chamber of Commerce signed a contract with the city to conduct the 1977 contest.

The issue was triggered by Sandy Roberts, administrative analyst for the city's Budget and Research Department. She attended a Christmas party with a member of the Jaycees and expressed interest in joining the organization. She was told she could not become a member because the national Jaycee charter specifies males only. Ms. Roberts decided to find out if the city was supporting the organization financially.

When she discovered the contract providing Jaycees with $2,000 for the contest, Ms. Roberts showed it to her boss, Budget Director James Phelps. His department is responsible for the community events portion of the budget.

Phelps sent the contract to Affirmative Action Officer Henry Taboada in the city manager's office.

TABOADA SAYS the contract violates the Civil Rights Act of 1964 on two counts: First, the Jaycees do not admit women to membership and secondly, the contest is sexist in nature.

Taboada made two suggestions to the Jaycees to correct the problem. He advised members of the organization to form a bilateral corporation which would allow them to accept women without violating the provisions of their national charter. He pointed to Jaycee operations in Palo Alto and San Francisco which have done just that.

He also recommended the Miss Welcome competition be converted into a "nonsex designated contest" ... one which would allow anyone to be the city's official host or hostess. In short, he feels men should be able to enter the contest with as good a chance of winning as women. He even suggests the possibility of changing the name to "You're Welcome to Long Beach."

Taboada says the contract violated the idea that "no person should be denied the benefit of a program financed by the city." He admits the city does not have a written policy on the matter.

Jaycee President Elliott Thompson Jr. thinks the whole matter is ridiculous. "This is not our contest. It's the city's contest. We contract to put it on for them. We're not trying to save our own private beauty contest. It's up to the council to determine whether or not they want to do it."

Thompson does not think the city should determine Jaycee policy. A proposal to allow women to join was soundly defeated at a national convention two years ago.

HE DEFENDS the Miss Welcome contest by noting that unmarried Jaycees are not allowed to judge the competition and, member's wives, Jaycettes, do much of the work involved in staging the event. They plan to kick off this year's competition with a "tea" scheduled tentatively for May 1.

"We don't have a swimsuit competition and it is not a cheesecake contest. We select the girl with poise and the ability to meet people," Thompson says. Until two years ago candidates appeared for judging in swimsuits and their figures were assessed as part of the competition.

Jaycees also spend more than the $2,000 allotted them by the city for the contest and put in an estimated 700 man-hours on it each year, he says.

Taboada thought the matter could be resolved informally with Jaycees last Monday. Thompson was prepared to deal with it during the City Council meeting Tuesday if members chose to reconsider the contract they had approved at an earlier session.

But during council recess, Thompson was told by the mayor and city manager to go ahead with the event this year inasmuch as the contract had received approval and the city had yet to write a policy on its relationship with private organizations which may be discriminatory.

This is the first year the organization had to sign a written contract with the city, Thompson says. At this point, he is neutral on the contest. "We could do with it or without it," he says. But the organization has decided to go ahead with it this year.

SOME CITY officials, including Councilwoman Renee Simon, have expressed concern about spending money in the community events budget for such a contest. Phelps thinks the city may take a look at other special interest groups which receive money from the city.

Miss Welcome, often chosen from among college or junior college students, receives no money for her efforts as the city's official hostess. Thompson says she makes appearances three or four times a month, mostly at Chamber of Commerce functions.

This year's Miss Welcome is 20-year-old Laurie Johnson. She competed with 35 women in a contest which involved mostly an assessment of the candidates' personalities. They were taken to lunch and interviewed to determine how well they would relate to people at public events.

Miss Johnson is a travel consultant for World Travel Inc. in Fullerton. She studied at Cerritos College and is a graduate of Pius X High School in Downey. She has no reservations about doing her job as hostess for the city.

Light tackle tournament lures localites to Rio

carolyn mcdowell

ANYONE FOR fishing?

Members and guests of both the Tuna Club and the Southern California Tuna Club (yes, they are two separate groups although some anglers belong to both) fished, flew and floated all over South America.

The avid fisherpeople were entered in the annual International Light Tackle Tournament, held this year in Rio de Janeiro. Member-cum-travel-agent Al Beach put together a before and after expedition for the 20 localites which involved three weeks of sightseeing.

I don't know if Al furnished dramamine (the seasoned fisherpeople probably didn't need it) but "the sea was rough and the fishing was good" according to such as Bob and Rosemary Westmyer, Mace and Polly Mason, Ken and Kay Sperry and Mara Graham.

The intrepid travelers visited Manaus which is 1,000 miles up the Amazon River and visited the blowgun hunters.

They also took a low level helicopter flight over the Iguassu Falls and viewed from land and air the famous Nazca markings. The markings are the ones made famous by the book "Chariots of the Gods."

Also on the agenda was a visit to the 12,000-foot mountain top of Machu-Picchu. More tourers were Don and Marion Locke, Glenn and Marge Bracken, Al and Virginia Herbold, Bob Weiss, Charles Swanton, Bill and Bess Speich, Violet Blymeir and Vera Kerns.

LAS FLORISTAS, Los Angeles based philanthropic group, held a "Premiere Night" cocktail buffet in L'Escoffier Restaurant high atop the Beverly Hilton Hotel.

The party was a kick off for the club's annual floral headdress ball to take place April 29 at the International Ball Room of the hotel.

Co-chairladies of the event, which is themed "Las Floristas Casts a Magic Spell," are Mrs. W. Barron Hilton and Mrs. Gregory R. Dillon.

High light of the evening was the selection of mannequins to model the gigantic headdresses at the ball.

Mrs. Robert Ruchti II (Diana) of Long Beach was selected again this year.

REPUBLICANS may be temporarily out this year but GOP Juniors are in fashion.

At least they were when they modeled fashions from Francis Wang's Island Design shop at Marina Pacifica Village.

Members and guests gathered at the home of Bernie Gallup for an afternoon tea honoring past presidents on the club's 25th anniversary.

Past presidents who doubled as models were Jan Hall, Rosemary Scott and Pat Loftman. Other models were Jonine Wright, Elizabeth Williams and Kay Losier.

PasPresidents in the crowd were Sally Weber, Stella Smith and Nada Davis.

Guests were welcomed by current President Bette Gallup. Heading the guest list was Gloria Deukmejian, wife of Sen. George.

Other special guests were Ethel Frost's pregnant 7-year-old pooch. Ethel was afraid to leave her alone since she is due to become a mother any minute. (The dog, not Ethel.)

Another surprise and surprising guest was a pet mouse belonging to Jonine Wright. Workmen were at the Wright house that day and Jonine feared that the mouse might be mistaken for a marauder.

Can you imagine taking a mouse to a house full of women?

Perhaps the "frightened of a mouse" female image has gone with the women's movement.

HERE IS A COUP for men's lib.

Long Beacher Ralph Alexander was made an honorary member of the Orange County Press Women at a luncheon meeting at Apadana Restaurant in Newport Center.

Ralph is executive director of the California Scholastic Press Association, an organization which involves more than 1,000 high school students interested in the communications field.

ASSISTANCE League hosted a luncheon for the Angels.

The California Angels? The heavenly type?

No, the party at League House honored men and women in our community who have aided the league and its auxiliaries in providing for the various league sponsored philanthropies.

Norma Marter served as committee chairgal for the event. Willa Gilmore turned poet and artist. She designed the invitation which feature a cherubic angel, and a rhyming invitation. With the help of Mae Ray and Norma, 250 invitations and name tags were hand painted and mailed.

Mary Buchanan did matching name tags and Dorothy Main was in charge of table centerpieces.

Ways and Means chairlady Melva Miller introduced Marilyn Brock who told the audience that the group raised about $40,000 last year and explained how the money was allocated.

Dorothy Goodknight presented a commentary on the Howard Collection of oriental art.

Other committee members, headed by President Bea Scott, were Pat Cockriel, Lorraine Fulton, Claire Ludlam, Lou Palmer and Jeanne Rastello.

Women are asking

By REBA and BONNIE CHURCHILL

'Oops! How can I combat beltline spillover?'

If you are a member of the "bulging belt brigade," then, consider these beauty brush-ups, designed to help whisk away unwanted inches around the midriff.

The first bend-and-touch routine, devised by a pair of peppy-minded physical conditioners, begins by sitting on the floor with legs crossed, tailor fashion.

"Next," they suggest, "grasp an ordinary broom (a clean one, please!), and press the handle against the chest. Feel those shoulders begin to straighten, the back arch, the stomach muslces repond? Relax a little; don't try to be tin-soldier straight, strive for a natural, comfortable erectness.

"Now," continue the experts, "gently bend from side-to-side, attempting to touch the broom, then the handle, to the floor. Do not strain; follow an easy rhythm, gradually increasing the pace as you become more proficient and as muscles respond. Ten times is enough for starters, expanding to 25 for pros. Following the side-benders, let go of broom, shake shoulders and relax."

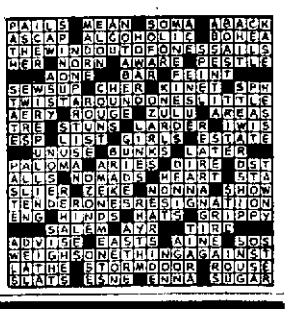

Of course, all routines depend on your age and physical condition, and should be checked with your doctor for personal needs. He may suggest expanding the program.

"A companion exercise," the conditioners explain, "is gently swaying forward, placing the broom on the floor, and, then slowly straightening up, holding it carefully over the head. The workout follows the same repetition pattern as above."

Such "broom benders" aren't limited to sitting, they can be performed standing up with the feet 10-12 inches apart.

The Formula

Take ouch out of adhesive

Adhesive tape used in medicine for protecting cuts and wounds contains a special adhesive that is free of chemicals that could cause skin irritations. The system is designed in such a way that adhesion is greater to the cloth tape than to the skin, thereby making it removable after it has served its purpose.

Unfortunately the bond is not only to the skin but to the hairs as well, so removal can be a painful process. But here's a formula that will help a lot.

You'll need one-fourth cup ISOPROPYL ALCOHOL (from a drugstore) and 10 drops WINTERGREEN OIL EXTRACT. Stir the extract into the alcohol and store in glass eyedropper bottle. To use, apply with dropper along edges of tape and allow fluid to soak in for about five minutes before removing. Note: Isopropyl Alcohol is toxic and flammable.

Besides the satisfaction you get by making your own products for personal or home care, most formulas are real money-savers that enable you to beat the prices of store-bought items.

(Like any chemical product you use at home, you should store this one safely, label it — listing ingredients and noting any cautions — and keep it out of reach of children.)

While visiting in Hollywood, The Gardners ask their own questions of celebrities and old friends.

The girl in George Burns's life these days is pretty Lisa Miller, who acts as his hostess, audience, constant companion, handholder, and secretary. Responding to the rousing reviews his book "Living It Up" received from the critics, George said it was his first book in 21 years and "if it does well, I might write a book every 21 years."

He gets up at five every morning to report to Warner Brothers for another movie, titled "Oh, God!" "In this one I play the title role of God," he said. "After all I couldn't play John Denver, he's too young." Before being rediscovered and winning an Oscar in "The Sunshine Boys," his last film had been "Honolulu," shot in 1939! "You see," he said, "I waited 36 years to make my next movie because I was afraid of over-exposure!"

George has been in showbiz since he was seven years old, when he was a member of the "Peewee Quartet," a gang of kids who sang on street corners, saloons, in front of theater lobbies and wherever a passed hat would be, filled with pennies.

Before he was out of adolescence (at the age of 37, he says) he'd been a trick roller skater, a dance teacher and vaudeville comedian.

When he and Gracie Allen teamed up, George was the funny partner. But their audiences switched the roles. They thought Gracie was the funny one. So George played straight.

They married in Cleveland in 1926, and toured the Keith vaudeville circuit until they made their first film, a one-reel comedy called "Lamb Chops." The name and material were taken from their vaudeville act.

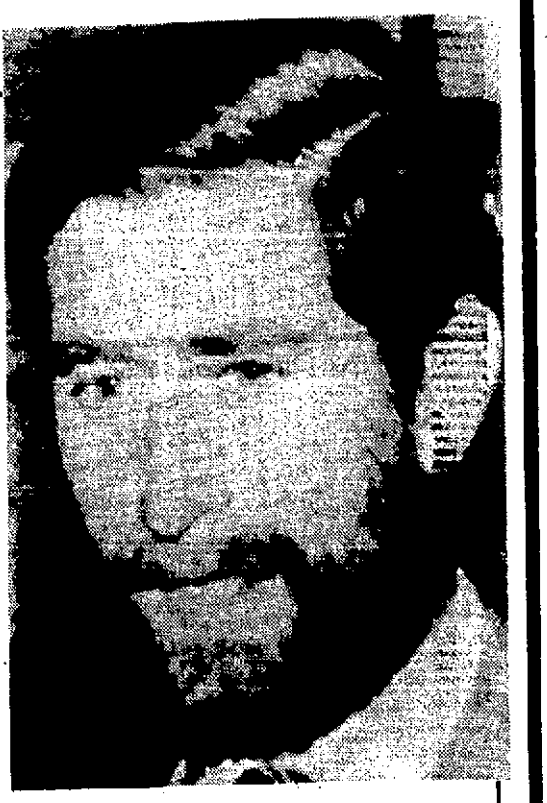

Burns and Allen also shared the last two-a-day bill ever presented at the Palace Theater, co-headlining with Eddie Cantor and Georgie Jessel.

The foursome broke all records at the Palace, being held over for nine weeks. A fortuitous dividend was Cantor inviting George and Gracie to guest on his top-rated network radio program. It resulted in their being signed to do their own show, which made such a hit it ran for 17 years.

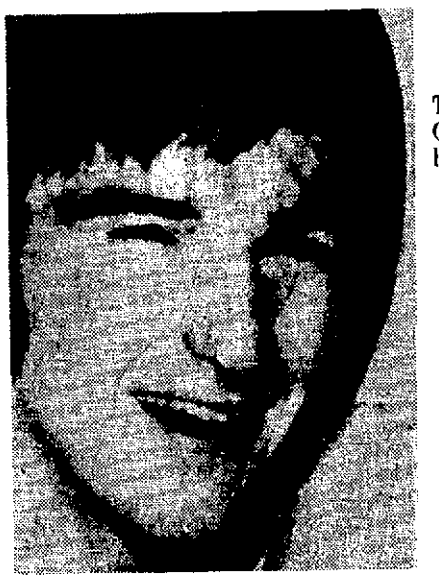

INSEPARABLE foursome through the years were George Burns and Gracie Allen and Jack Benny and Mary Livingston, above photo, before the death of Gracie and Benny — Burns continues to expand his career horizons, winning an Oscar last year for his performance n "The Sunshine Boys" with Walter Matthau.

Before reaching such dizzy heights, Burns and Allen guested on the Rudy Vallee and Guy Lombardo programs — and in 1932 became a permanent fixture on Guy's show.

They subsequently co-starred in 14 films, with such superstars as Bing Crosby, W. C. Fields, Ethel Merman, Bob Burns, Jack Benny, Fred Astaire, Martha Raye, Jack Oakie, Eleanor Powell, Carole Lombard, Dixie Lee, Robert Young, Bob Hope and Betty Grable.

When Gracie retired in 1958, George starred in his own TV series for a season.

In '62, he teamed with Carol Channing in theater and nightclub tours, again the following year with Dorothy Provine.

In '64, to mend his wounds after Gracie died of a heart attack, George surrounded himself with work. He produced and starred with Connie Stevens in the TV series "Wendy and Me," produced TV's "No Time for Sergeants," "Mona McCluskey" (with Juliet Prowse) and helped originate and became a co-owner of the TV series "Mr. Ed." The talking horse continues in syndication.

THOUGH GEORGE thought his crowning achievement was a one-man concert at New York's Philharmonic Hall, he later topped it by performing concerts in a string of cities, concluding at Carnegie Hall. He underestimated the superstardom he'd reach till he made "The Sunshine Boys" with Walter Matthau and Richard Benjamin in 1975. Approaching 80 then, he was named (by the National Association of Theater Owners) as "Star of Tomorrow."

A lifelong friend, crony and admirer of Jack Benny, it's ironic that George would probably still be settling for guest appearances or singing on variety shows if Benny were still alive. For Jack was originally supposed to play the role in "The Sunshine Boys," which proved to be George's greatest, if somewhat delayed, encore.

Q: I heard that porno movie queen Marilyn Chambers is about to embark on a new career. What could it possibly be? — L. McN., Richmond, Va.

A: Music — and Chambers's music is singing. The one-time Ivory Soap model has emerged from "Behind the Green Door" — and will be heard on a disc which she recorded privately, then sold outright to the Roulette label.

Q: I heard that a British astrologist had some very dire predictions about Prince Charles. Do you know what they were? — Bigid Welch, Buffalo.

A: The present Charles, warns author-astrologist Roger Elliott, is in a situation akin to that of his predecessor, Charles I — who was beheaded in 1649. Elliott also predicts the further decline and eventual fall of the British Empire and the House of Windsor during a revolution in the 1990s — perhaps 1992.

Q: Has tennis champ Jimmy Connors ever formulated a philosophy about winning or losing a match? — Jules Stevens, Milwaukee.

A: Yes. "I hate to lose," he admits, "more than I love to win!"

FORMER porno movie queen Marilyn Chambers, below — launches new music career.

Lucy carved career out of pride, determination

Lucille Ball leans against her backgammon table and sips her second afternoon scotch in the quiet hush of her Beverly Hills home. No reason to hurry. Her kids have grown up and moved away. Her husband Gary Morton is dining out with golf buddies.

A California sunset casts an orange glow across the empty swimming pool outside, reminding her it will soon be night, time to slash on some lipstick and drive with a visiting sister-in-law from New York to a nearby restaurant for an early steak before bedtime. An old dog with asthma wheezes on a chintz sofa. Ice cubes melt lazily in her glass. The only sounds of life in the rambling old house. She's alone, but she's not lonely.

DESPITE pleas from fans, Lucille Ball plans no return to TV other than two yearly specials for CBS.

There are no cameras turning, no signs of make-up men and hairdressers. The lines in her face have been honestly earned, along with the millions she's made being the idol of millions. Tonight she doesn't have to be the star of "I Love Lucy." She's just a woman, a mother, a wife with the night off who doesn't have to be "on."

After 25 years as the funniest woman in America, she can look at the TV scripts that line the walls of her den and know it didn't happen by accident.

IS SHE HAPPY with the way things turned out? She smiles wryly and runs her hands through her popsicle orange hair. "How could I be anything else? The CBS tribute I did before Christmas and the accolades that flooded in from the industrry just floored me."

In addition to those from William Paley and the CBS brass, the cables are still pouring in. She fingers them proudly. "John Wayne, Gale Gordon, Sammy Davis Jr., Bob Hope, Tennessee Ernie Ford, Carol Burnett, my writers, my sponsors, the people who did all of my lab work. Here's one from Vivian Vance that says, 'A wise man once said hitch your wagon to a star, and I did. You made me what I am today, and I am satisfied—Love, Viv.' She hated being called Ethel, you know. But she was a great show doctor and a wonderful right arm and when she got married and moved East and quit the show, I never really did recover."

Awards? "They meant something because they were all sincere. I haven't had that many. I've had plenty, but not a plethora. I couldn't do a whole house in them, but I could do a small room."

It's all over now. The Lucy shows have moved out, making way for headier stuff. The 19 TV Guide covers she was on are all framed on the wall of her pool house. Her scrapbooks are as full as her memories, and she doesn't look back with any regrets on her reign for a quarter of a century as the queen of television.

"I keep up with my old TV family. Viv calls me all the time and we all exchange gifts at Christmas. I find myself watching old reruns and enjoying them for the first time, because when I did them I had to look at rushes and be critical and I never saw the finished shows with music and sound effects. Some of them I've never seen. My writers were the best in the business. None of those shows were ad-libbed. Everything was planned, rehearsed and timed. The years those writers put in and the way every comedy series has stolen from them for the past 20 years,...it makes me sick to think they never got an Emmy. We had a winner as long as it lasted.

"THE SECRET, I think, was reality. My audiences saw their own foibles mirrored in what happened to Lucy. They could watch and say, 'Oh, Mabel, that's what happened when you baked your first cake, remember?' We squeezed comedy out of vacuum cleaners, washing machines, grocery bills. Now the world is ugly and the comedy is ugly, too. After the 6 o'clock news, nothing that follows is very funny.

"On 'I Love Lucy' we never married the homosexual uncle to another man in the living room or electrocuted the children in the bathtub or drowned the grandfather in chicken soup. The things you see now are horrifying, and you're supposed to laugh at them. I don't understand it, and I don't think I ever will and it certainly isn't entertainment.

"But times have changed and we expect more. I'll give you an example of how even I am guilty. One night a few years ago I was flipping the dial looking for a show called 'Combat,' and I finally found it and settled back to watch. These soldiers in camouflage helmets were creeping though the jungle, and nothing was happening. They were just creeping. Very boring, I thought.

"Finally a shot rang out and a guy's head rolled right in front of the camera, and I thought, 'Good heavens!' and then nothing else happened for a long time and I finally said, 'All right, awreddy—what's with this director?' I was looking at the real war in Vietnam and didn't know it. Real blood, real bullets, real guys getting killed, and I was complaining because there wasn't enough action! Today we're satiated with violence and sharks and sex, and we just accept it. It's sad for the young people because they have nothing to look forward to."

What does she watch for laughs? "Nothing much. Nancy Walker is funny, she just doesn't have my writers. 'All in the Family' put words like dago, wop, kike back into our vocabulary and taught little kids that if they got a laugh in their living room they'd work even better in the street. I don't watch 'Mary Hartman,' either. I send money to aid V.D. clinics, why should I look to them for laughs?"

YET DESPITE the offers she's had to bring back the Lucy shows, she says she "knew when to throw in the towel. It was traumatic to close down the arena, lock up the offices and get rid of all those people who worked for me so many years. I cried for four months. I miss the creativity, I miss Vivian, I miss the friends. For 25 years, it was like going to a party.

"When Desi and I were beginning to have serious trouble with our marriage, we couldn't quit because we were committed to CBS for five-year stretches. Sometimes I was happier on the show than I was at home. But if we were coming out today with our first Lucy show, we'd be hooted off the network. The generations of kids I babysat for with my show are now my loyal fans, but if we started over now they'd howl, 'Where's the sex, where's the violence, where are the sick jokes?'

'I've always prided myself in knowing when to get off and I think I waited three years too long. I was ready to quit five years before I did. I was getting too old to be yelled at by Uncle Harry for doing idiotic things. Nobody twisted my arm but myself."

SO MANY STARS turn out miserable, but Lucy ran a business like a lady tycoon, soared to the top of television and raised a family all at the same time and always landed on her feet, like a cat falling off the top of a refrigerator. What's her secret? "If you asked me that a few years back, I couldn't answer because I was in the throes of disaster. But I met a very unusual man, and there aren't many like him. Gary Morton brought back all the dreams I had thrown away.

"I have a lot to thank many people for, but to find at such a late date someone who had lived, who wasn't looking around the corner for someone younger and prettier, who knew how enjoy a home, who was anxious to learn and build and live and love and take the bad with the good — well, it saved my life.

"It took me a few years into the marriage to realize I had made this great choice, but he's an unusual man and he's made me unusually happy.

"He sat for five years watching and learning. He didn't get a title and he didn't do anything on my show for a long time. He was just 'the star's husband.' But I'm a great believer in nepotism, you know. I had my sister producing my show, both husbands always worked with me, my kids were both on the show, my brother was on salary. If they can cut the mustard, they're in.

Problems of Israel told by Lea Rabin

By JEAN SANDERS
Staff Writer

Sweeping into the Southland on a cautious wave of optimisim for peace in the Middle East and the role of women in Israel, Lea Rabin paused in Orange County Thursday to assess the situation in her country.

Mrs. Rabin, wife of Yitzhak Rabin, Israel's prime minister and former ambassador to the United States, battles shoulder to shoulder alongside her husband in their country's behalf. She's an impressive unofficial ambassador.

Her 10-day visit to key cities in the U. S. is geared to the United Jewish Appeal. Meeting with the Jewish communities from California to Georgia, she describes Israel's continued need for support.

"The burden of defense is great," she said. "It is a big area to cover. Forty per cent of Israel's gross income goes to the need for defense. That does not leave much for all the rest — education, welfare, health, all the social things.

"I feel strongly that Jewish people all over the world have to participate. In a way, Israel is their second home.

"Our social needs are great because we are a society of refugees. In the past 29 years we have provided homes, jobs and schooling. We have advanced our welfare support; national security takes good care of the old, the sick and the poor. By 'poor' I mean those families with more than four children. The state steps in to help if they are burdened financially.

"WE CARE ABOUT our women. Day care for children is subsidized by the minister of labor for working women. We are opening more and more centers affiliated with factories and hospitals. Women get three to four months off with pay when they have a child.

"Women in Israel have achieved legislative posts and have integrated into political life."

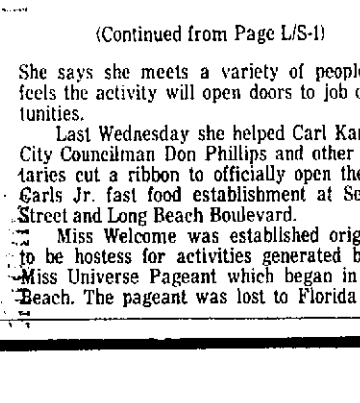

Her mouth tightens, then turns into a wry smile. "I don't say our women are equal. They aren't. Equal pay for equal work was legislated, but it does not apply in reality. The men try to cheat the women. But we are concentrating on this problem."

Tall and taut, Mrs. Rabin speaks with conviction. "First we want to exist and stay alive. We have to live and then educate our children. We are very concerned about the quality of life in Israel, but we can't slow down on defense. We live in a threatened area."

Later, in what appears to be a contradictory statement, she said, "We feel the less arms there are, the more hope there is for peace."

She admits that "right now, we have no relationship with other countries, no crossing of borders of merchandise."

Yet, she is optimistic and emphasizes, "I don't see why peace can't be achieved in this generation. Why wait? I feel the Arab nations have come to the point where settlement would be as much in their favor as ours. A solution can be found."

HOPES for peace in the Middle East and equality for women in Israel were voiced by Lea Rabin.

DISCUSSING HER country in the Costa Mesa offices of the United Jewish Welfare Fund of Orange County, the voluble woman with deep-set blue eyes candidly admitted, "We have turned to the United States government time and again for aid. But we tax ourselves very high before we turn elsewhere. Once we've done our utmost, we feel entitled to turn to others."

Asked about the rumor that some Jews had become unhappy living in Israel and had departed, Mrs. Rabin said, "If there are unhappy Jews now in Israel, they are free to leave. We believe in freedom.

"Those who left Russia for Israel, for example, are actually immigrants. There is a different way of life in Russia compared with Israel. It is a tremendous adjustment. It works counterproductive sometimes; then they blame their situation on Israel.

"But they are free to come to Israel and free to go. We are concerned about every Jew who can't get out of a country because he is a Jew. We would like to accept them, all of them."

At the International Women's Conference last year in Mexico City, Mrs. Rabin was to present the keynote address. More than half the delegation walked out. She still stings from the incident.

"WE FOUND ourselves involved in political issues rather than working for mutual understanding and reconciliation. The conference was distorted by political aims and guidelights. Women's role was secondary. I'd say the conference was one-third successful.

"Arab and Communist delegates walked out because I represented Israel, and there had been stories, all lies, about how Israel was torturing Palestinian women and children. This was untrue. We are promoting health and welfare in Palestine.

"While I was at the podium and the delegates were walking out, the American delegation gave me an ovation of confidence. I said, 'Let's wait until the exodus is over' before I began my address. The American delegation gave me another ovation, followed by the others.

"Afterwards there was an outpour of emotion, tears, from the Asian, African, Latin American, American women, everyone who stayed.

"The first woman to come up to me with thanks for the talk was a delegate from Norway who the night before at a meeting of delegates was silent the whole time."

While at the conference, Mrs. Rabin had hoped for a visit with Jihan Sadat, wife of Anwar Sadat, president of Egypt.

"I would have like a brief exchange of greeting, woman to woman. She said 'certainly not.'"

Has there been any change in Mrs. Sadat's attitude since then?

"No change," Mrs. Rabin ruefully confessed.

TYPICAL of women about to be photographed, Mrs. Rabin whipped out lipstick, begging photographers, "For the sake of the camera, one second."

Miss Welcome or maybe 'Mister'

She says she meets a variety of people and feels the activity will open doors to job opportunities.

Last Wednesday she helped Carl Karcher, City Councilman Don Phillips and other dignitaries cut a ribbon to officially open the new Carls Jr. fast food establishment at Seventh Street and Long Beach Boulevard.

Miss Welcome was established originally to be hostess for activities generated by the Miss Universe Pageant which began in Long Beach. The pageant was lost to Florida more than a decade ago. It was replaced by the International Beauty Congress which was moved to Japan and died quietly in 1973.

Miss Welcome was left to greet visiting dignitaries and returning Navy ships and to preside over ribbon cutting ceremonies for new businesses ... events which have declined in frequency during recent years.

Now, as it reaches its quarter century mark, the contest is being threatened partly by budget tightening but mostly by a dramatic change in attitude about such events, the organizations which sponsor them and the roles women play in them.

At that moment

The Congo, the first week in January, 1963.

Albert Verbrugghe, a Belgian cement worker, is driving down a quiet street with his wife and another woman in the copper town of Jadotsville. Suddenly...

Machine gun fire.

Verbrugghe stumbles from his car. Inside, his wife is already dead and the other woman is dying. Blood streaming from a wound under his eyes, he cries out:

"Why, why, why?" ...

The anguished question was not new to emerging Africa, especially the Congo where senseless killing and bedlam marked the first 30 months of independence.

The Congo was set free in 1960 after 80 years of frequently harsh and always profitable rule by the Belgians. It had no experience in self-government and no time to learn. It was hurried overnight from the slow step of the ox to the roar of the jet. A country one-third the size of the United States, it had not a single Congolese college graduate, not one Congolese doctor or lawyer, engineer or military officer or anybody trained in government.

Why?

And many natives were led to believe that, with independence, they would immediately inherit the white man's world, his house, his car, his woman. Thus, the new Republic of the Congo began in a nightmare of killing, looting and rape, and Europeans fled by the thousands.

Postal clerks became cabinet ministers and government became a roaring farce played by the Marx brothers and no one knew the size of the army because many garrisons existed only on paper while the local commanders pocketed the payroll. Soldiers mutinied or refused to fight or left a vital roadblock because it was raining or it was Sunday or it was after five o'clock. Teachers went unpaid for two years in many places because higher authority had gotten to the payroll first. The feuds of ancient tribalism continued and in one 300-mile stretch of railroad the train crew had to be changed nine times to avoid slaughter.

In Katanga, the copper-rich province which provided half the revenue for the central government, Moishe Tshombe led a secessionist movement. Without Katanga, where Belgium and England were heavily invested, the new republic would fall apart. United Nations troops came in at the behest of the central government, which cried of "colonialist machinations."

And so, in the first week of January, 1963, nervous Indian troops opened fire on a Volkswagen on a quiet street in Jadotville. Why? Because, they said, the driver refused to halt for a routine inspection.

At Wit's End

Elevator a nonsmoker's paradise

I witnessed a wedding last summer that focused attention on a real problem: smokers vs. non-smokers.

The smokers (seated at the left of the altar) and the non-smokers (seated at the right of the altar) heard the minister ask, "Do you, Debbie, promise to love and cherish from this day forward, for better or for worse, for richer or for poorer; in sickness and in health, so long as Richard inhales?" She took a deep breath and answered, "I will."

It made you wonder. Could a militant non-smoker, wearing a Thank You For Not Smoking headband with a veil attached, find happiness with a man with a brown stain on his index finger? Only time would tell.

LAST WEEK, I ran into Debbie. She jumped up, clicked her heels in mid-air and said, "I quit! It's a matter of life and breath."

"I know that, Debbie," I smiled. "So, how is Richard?"

"Who knows?" she sighed. "The only time I see him is on elevators and in doctor's offices where all smoking is prohibited. Every place else has smoking and non-smoking areas and we are split up."

"Is that any kind of life for two young people who are just married?"

erma bombeck

"We knew there would be hardships. When we went on a vacation last year, I saw him on the plane briefly when he went to use the restroom. Sometimes, if the smoke isn't too thick, I wave to him in restaurants where I'm seated across the room."

"Are you saying you are never together?"

"That's right. When we go to a movie, he sits in the smoking section and I sit in the non-smoking section. We never talk in the lobby of a theater anymore. I can't stand the smoke. Since he's in a smoker's car pool, I ride to work with a non-smoker's group. We used to go to the grocery together, but now he has to stay outside if he wants to light up. Our entire house is sectioned off into smoking and non-smoking areas."

"THE PROBLEM is going to get worse," I said. "More and more, our society is being asked to make a choice between smoking and non-smoking."

"I know," sighed Debbie. "I don't know what we'll do when the baby comes. I'd like Richard to see it, but the hospital is definitely for non-smokers."

"The baby!" I gasped. "How did you ever get pregnant in the first place?"

She shrugged. "I've narrowed it down to the doctor's office and elevators."

The autograph of Alex Haley

of the way through the village when it suddenly registered in my brain what they were all crying out ... the wizened, robed elders and younger men, the mothers and the naked tar-black children, they were all waving up at me; their expressions bouyant, beaming, all were crying out together, 'Meester Kinte! Meester Kinte!'

"Let me tell you something: I am a man. A sob hit me somewhere around my ankles; it came surging upward, and flinging my hands around my face, I was just bawling, as I hadn't since I was a baby. I just felt I was weeping for all of history's incredible atrocities against fellowmen...."

THE RECEPTION he found at each department store was "another variation," of that. "The end result," he said, answering questions briefly while chatting and continuing to sign his autograph, "is that anytime something draws such a big audience you've got to feel good."

The story of Kunta, Kizzy, Tom and Chicken George, all ancestors of Haley, touched people in a way that will have to have a lasting effect, he says. "Blacks and whites, young and old, will have to have a reevaluation of all matters relating to blacks."

A 36-year-old black woman standing in the long line, echoed his remarks. "I'm glad someone finally was able to tell this story. It is the truth. We all knew the truth (about slavery), but we were just hiding it. I want to be able to tell my children; I want them to know what it was really like."

She and a friend standing next to her agreed; no stories had been handed down in their families from generation to generation by word of mouth as Haley's history had been. "They were afraid," said one. "My mother would tell me how the whites in the South treated most blacks, and still do, but some blacks do not want to admit it."

The television show and the book made her angry, she said, not only at the injustices of the whites but at the reaction of some blacks. "I had read Malcolm X (Haley's first book) and went to see Haley last summer when he lectured at Hollywood High School. He talked about "Roots" but only about 100 people showed up then. Now they all want to see him."

This young woman took a survey of blacks at a store where she works. "There were three reactions. One, a black doctor, said no, he was not going to watch any of the eight shows of "Roots." And this white manager pats him on the shoulder and says, "You're intelligent." A second, one we call a Tom, said he was not going to watch, there was no truth to it. A third person, just said she didn't like it.

"Some people just don't want to see the truth,"she angrily declared. "That's stupid."

Another woman, a much older black woman was waiting farther back in line without a book and would seek her autograph on a slip of paper. She said she felt no anger while watching the show. "It helps us understand our background. It's a good feeling to know who you are and for the younger people that is particulary nice to know."

"Was that a black woman who said that?" the younger woman demanded to know. "Well, it certainly made the younger people angry. It also made me cry; I had tears in my eyes and couldn't watch when they took Kizzy away."

Most of the others, many of whom had waited long hours, could not be accommodated during this day's time period. Some had also walked away disappointed from the previous day's book signing.

Haley, who had always taken an extra moment to look over the many old documents people presented him with, was reluctant to leave anyone unhappy. Those who wanted, he said, could leave the book, with their names and adresses; he would autograph them later and the copies would be returned to original owners by mail.

So, an hour later people were still in line, this time waiting to leave off their copies. They were determined to get the signature of Alex Haley.

Lakewood fans were unhappy

By KRIS SHERMAN
Staff Writer

About 50 disappointed customers drifted in and out of the book department at the May Company store in Lakewood Center Wednesday after they were told that the scheduled appearance of "Roots" author Alex Haley had been moved to another store.

The customers, most of whom purchased copies of the hardbound book at $12.50 each — despite Haley's absence — said they were not so much angry as disappointed that the author did not appear in Lakewood.

The store publicized last week that Haley would appear at the Lakewood facility, then rescinded that notice and said Haley would instead appear to autograph copies of his book at the May Company Crenshaw store.

A hand-lettered sign near the book department also carried the message, with Haley's name misspelled: "We are sorry to say that Mr. Alex Hailey (sic) will not be in this store to sign his book, "Roots."

"I want to get my book autographed, 'cause I promised my kids," one woman complained to a store official. He apologized for the inconvenience and directed her to the Crenshaw store.

"I'm very upset," said Juanita Lloyd, clutching a copy of "Roots" under her arm. "He could have come down here and seen the people who are here to buy his book. It's just not fair, but I'm going to spend my time and gasoline to go to Crenshaw anyway. I really want to see him."

Flea Market Finds

Attic may hold treasure

Q. "I'm having trouble locating an old trunk." — Beatrice, Tyrone, Pa.

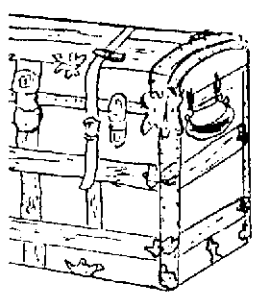

A. The simple oversized trunks of yesterday are fast movers because of the recent crafts explosion. They surrender beautifully to handpainted or stenciled motifs. Decoupage devotees devour them. Many old trunks were covered with leather, imitation leather or canvas, and some had secret compartments. Polished brass trimmings furnished them with a touch of elegance. Most were found with hardwood slats secured by heavy bolts. The J. H. Sessions Company of Connecticut was one of the nation's foremost trunk makers. Don't abandon the hunt until you've checked the neighbor's attic. Value guide: canvas covered, medium size, $45.

Q. "We are in possession of quite a number of Wonder Woman comic books." — Mr. and Mrs. E. F., Cherokee, Iowa.

A. Wonder Woman made a socko debut on magazine stands about 1942, thanks to National Periodical Publications. The following price quotations are for copies in mint (like new) condition: No. 1, $100; No. 2, No. 3, No. 4, No. 5, $48 each; No. 6, $30; No. 7 through No. 24, $22 each; No. 25 through No. 44, $15 each. Copies in fine condition bring 25 per cent less than stated values. After some quick tabulation, you'll probably dub her Wonderful Woman!

Q. "The mark 'H. & Co., Selb, Bavaria, Germany' on the base of a china teapot has me perplexed." — Elaine, Mobile, Ala.

A. Because the "H. & Co." backstamp is closely associated with the famed Haviland & Company, this trademark can be an eyebrow raiser. However, the location "Selb, Bavaria, Germany" eliminates any guesswork because this is the home of the porcelain giant Heinrich & Company. The still existing firm, established about 1896, exported beautiful everyday and ornamental wares to the United States, especially before World War I. Their tea and coffee services became china closet staples. That "H. & Co" trademark has caused more than one novice to do a double take! Value guide: coffee pot, florals, circa 1915, $45.

Light tackle tournament lures localites to Rio

ANYONE FOR fishing?

Members and guests of both the Tuna Club and the Southern California Tuna Club (yes, they are two separate groups although some anglers belong to both) fished, flew and floated all over South America.

The avid fisherpeople were entered in the annual International

carolyn mcdowell

Light Tackle Tournament, held this year in Rio de Janeiro. Member-cum-travel-agent Al Beach put together a before and after expedition for the 20 localites which involved three weeks of sightseeing.

I don't know if Al furnished dramamine (the seasoned fisherpeople probably didn't need it) but "the sea was rough and the fishing was good" according to such as Bob and Rosemary Westmyer, Mace and Polly Mason, Ken and Kay Sperry and Mara Graham.

The intrepid travelers visited Manaus which is 1,000 miles up the Amazon River and visited the blowgun hunters.

They also took a low level helicopter flight over the Iguassu Falls and viewed from land and air the famous Nazca markings. The markings are the ones made famous by the book "Chariots of the Gods."

Also on the agenda was a visit to the 12,000-foot mountain top of Machu-Picchu. More tourers were Don and Marion Locke, Glenn and Marge Bracken, Al and Virginia Herbold, Bob Weiss, Charles Swanton, Bill and Bess Speich, Violet Blymeir and Vera Kerns.

LAS FLORISTAS, Los Angeles based philanthropic group, held a "Premiere Night" cocktail buffet in L'Escoffier Restaurant high atop the Beverly Hilton Hotel.

The party was a kick off for the club's annual floral headdress ball to take place April 29 at the International Ball Room of the hotel.

Co-chairladies of the event, which is themed "Las Floristas Casts a Magic Spell," are Mrs. W. Barron Hilton and Mrs. Gregory R. Dillon.

High light of the evening was the selection of mannequins to model the gigantic headdresses at the ball.

Mrs. Robert Ruchti II (Diana) of Long Beach was selected again this year.

REPUBLICANS may be temporarily out this year but GOP Juniors are in fashion.

At least they were when they modeled fashions from Francis Wang's Island Design shop at Marina Pacifica Village.

Members and guests gathered at the home of Bernie Gallup for an afternoon tea honoring past presidents on the club's 25th anniversary.

Past presidents who doubled as models were Jan Hall, Rosemary Scott and Pat Loftman. Other models were Jonine Wright, Elizabeth Williams and Kay Losier.

PasPresidents in the crowd were Sally Weber, Stella Smith and Nada Davis.

Guests were welcomed by current President Bette Gallup. Heading the guest list was Gloria Deukmejian, wife of Sen. George.

Other special guests were Ethel Frost's pregnant 7-year-old pooch. Ethel was afraid to leave her alone since she is due to become a mother any minute. (The dog, not Ethel.)

Another surprise and surprising guest was a pet mouse belonging to Jonine Wright. Workmen were at the Wright house that day and Jonine feared that the mouse might be mistaken for a marauder.

Can you imagine taking a mouse to a house full of women?

Perhaps the "frightened of a mouse" female image has gone with the women's movement.

HERE IS A COUP for men's lib.

Long Beacher Ralph Alexander was made an honorary member of the Orange County Press Women at a luncheon meeting at Apadana Restaurant in Newport Center.

Ralph is executive director of the California Scholastic Press Association, an organization which involves more than 1,000 high school students interested in the communications field.

ASSISTANCE League hosted a luncheon for the Angels.

The California Angels? The heavenly type?

No, the party at League House honored men and women in our community who have aided the league and its auxiliaries in providing for the various league sponsored philanthropies.

Norma Marter served as committee chairgal for the event. Willa Gilmore turned poet and artist. She designed the invitation which feature a cherubic angel, and a rhyming invitation. With the help of Mae Ray and Norma, 250 invitations and name tags were hand painted and mailed.

Mary Buchanan did matching name tags and Dorothy Maki was in charge of table centerpieces.

Ways and Means chairlady Melva Miller introduced Marilyn Brock who told the audience that the group raised about $40,000 last year and explained how the money was allocated.

Dorothy Goodknight presented a commentary on the Howard Collection of oriental art.

Other committee members, headed by President Bea Scott, were Pat Cockriel, Lorraine Fulton, Claire Ludlam, Lou Palmer and Jeanne Rastello.

Women are asking

By REBA and BONNIE CHURCHILL

'Oops! How can I combat beltline spillover?'

If you are a member of the "bulging belt brigade," then, consider these beauty brush-ups, designed to help whisk away unwanted inches around the midriff.

The first bend-and-touch routine, devised by a pair of peppy-minded physical conditioners, begins by sitting on the floor with legs crossed, tailor fashion.

"Next," they suggest, "grasp an ordinary broom (a clean one, please!), and press the handle against the chest. Feel those shoulders begin to straighten, the back arch, the stomach musles repond? Relax a little; don't try to be tin-soldier straight, strive for a natural, comfortable erectness.

"Now," continue the experts, "gently bend from side-to-side, attempting to touch the broom, then the handle, to the floor. Do not strain; follow an easy rhythm, gradually increasing the pace as you become more proficient and as muscles respond. Ten times is enough for starters, expanding to 25 for pros. Following the side-benders, let go of broom, shake shoulders and relax."

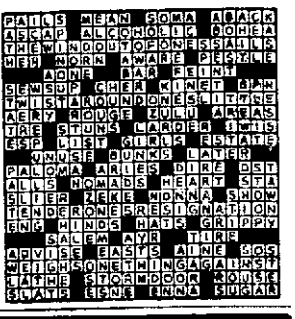

Of course, all routines depend on your age and physical condition, and should be checked with your doctor for personal needs. He may suggest expanding the program.

"A companion exercise," the conditioners explain, "is gently swaying forward, placing the broom on the floor, and, then slowly straightening up, holding it carefully over the head. The workout follows the same repetition pattern as above."

Such "broom benders" aren't limited to sitting, they can be performed standing up with the feet 10-12 inches apart.

P. S. Would you like to know certain "basic" exercises that have proven favorites with many performers and conditioners? The Formula

Take ouch out of adhesive

Adhesive tape used in medicine for protecting cuts and wounds contains a special adhesive that is free of chemicals that could cause skin irritations. The system is designed in such a way that adhesion is greater to the cloth tape than to the skin, thereby making it removable after it has served its purpose.

Unfortunately the bond is not only to the skin but to the hairs as well, so removal can be a painful process. But here's a formula that will help a lot.

You'll need one-fourth cup ISOPROPYL ALCOHOL (from a drugstore) and 10 drops WINTERGREEN OIL EXTRACT. Stir the extract into the alcohol and store in glass eyedropper bottle. To use, apply with dropper along edges of tape and allow fluid to soak in for about five minutes before removing. Note: Isopropyl Alcohol is toxic and flammable.

Besides the satisfaction you get by making your own products for personal or home care, most formulas are real money-savers that enable you to beat the prices of store-bought items.

(Like any chemical product you use at home, you should store this one safely, label it — listing ingredients and noting any cautions — and keep it out of reach of children.)

Police officers' wives have special concerns

dr. walt menninger

"We used to have lots of friends and an active social life. Then my husband became a policeman. Our friends seemed to become more formal and a little edgy around us. They would make poor jokes about Bill's being one of the 'fuzz.' Things just weren't the same."

A group of police officers' wives were having a potluck dinner, and they got to sharing some common problems. Most striking was the sense of desolation and isolation experienced by the wives of rookies.

Several acknowledged that what made it especially difficult was the fact that they hadn't been prepared for those problems. And they thought others shouldn't have to go through the same desolation.

With the support of the police chief, those wives developed a program for orienting new police wives. Along the way, it was my privilege to sit in on planning sessions and a presentation to new wives during recruit training.

First, they thought up all sorts of questions that they had wondered about when their husbands first joined the force. After some research, they prepared a booklet entitled "Everything You Always Wanted to Know About the Police Department, But Were Afraid to Ask."

NEXT, THEY prepared a list of topics about which they had painful or bitter experiences, to prepare the new wives for some of the difficult times ahead. These were discussed at an informal meeting with the new wives.

"It is a shock," said one, "even to the woman who totally supports her husband's decision to become a police officer, when her husband's dream becomes a reality.

"In the majority of cases, she has had little contact with law enforcement and what the job entails. The little knowledge she has is coupled with a vivid imagination and the ever-present television police shows, movies and books.

"Her husband, thrilled with his job, cannot understand her sudden change in attitude, the fear she displays when he puts on his gun and the gnawing worry that he may not return."

Some of the problems cited: A negative reaction from family and friends, who will tell you about every rude or bad police officer on the force, and who will call you or your husband to take care of a ticket.

If you're a compulsive planner, you're in trouble, because invariably your husband has to appear in court on his day off.

BE PREPARED to listen to the seamy sidef life, the goryetails of accidents and violent crimes.

Anticipate that some of the neighbors won't like living next to a policeman; and neighborhood teenagers may soap your car and let the air out of the tires.

Understandably, many police families feel isolated, and they turn to each other for support. An increasing number of police forces recognize the importance of some support program for the families of their officers.

The returns from the kind of program initiated by these wives may not be immediately apparent. Yet, as it supports the stability of the police officer's family, the payoff to the community is greater effectiveness of that officer.

These wives were keenly aware that their morale affected their husband's morale and, in turn, his job performance. They were equally aware of the high divorce rate for police officers, and they wanted to help prevent some of these problems from jeopardizing marriages.

This 204-page cloth-bound book is ideal as a gift to a friend or loved one or as a valuable source in your own personal library. Send only $5.95 (postpaid) to Happiness, Sheed Andrews and McMeel, P. O. Box 2218, Mission, Kan. 66201.)

Medicine and You

Doctor links measles virus with MS

ben zinser

There's now hard evidence that measles virus may be the culprit in the causation of multiple sclerosis, a doctor reports.

Evidence of the virus has turned up in the small intestines of MS patients, according to Dr. Albert W. Cook, professor of neurosurgery at Downstate Medical Center, Brooklyn, N. Y.

In a report in the publication Life Sciences, Dr. Cook and associates say that they "conclude that MS patients have an active and persistent measles infection."

Such an infection, they say, is sequestered in the patient's jejunum, a segment of the small intestine. It may also exist in other sites, they add.

Information on the finding also appears in Medical Tribune, a news newspaper for physicians.

Help for headache

Long term preventive treatment with the drug lithium carbonate can often reduce the frequency and severity of chronic cluster headache, a headache authority says.

Dr. Lee Kudrow, director of the California Medical Clinic for Headache, Encino, says lithium administration aided 27 of 28 patients who tolerated the drug.

Four patients had to discontinue treatment because the drug caused adverse side effects.

Cluster headache is characterized by intense throbbing pain behind the eye. These attacks may recur frequently over a period of weeks.

Dr. Kudrow reported on his experience with lithium carbonate to a meeting of the American Association for the Study of Headache.

A written report appears in Internal Medicine News, a newspaper for physicians.

Avoid blisters

A doctor reports how patients can deal with soreness and blisters in the palms of their hands resulting from use of a cane, walker, crutches or arm braces.

Says Dr. William C. L. Diefenbach of Southampton, N. Y.:

"Tell them to get a pair of bicycle racing gloves from a sporting goods store. These fingerless gloves have specially cushioned palms that provide considerable protection."

His comment appears in Consultant, a periodical for doctors.

Bowling is culprit

Doctors report the case of the tenpin thumb.

A 56-year-old teacher, over a six-year period, noticed a slowly enlarging and increasingly tender nodule at the base of the right thumb.

Then, over a seven-month span, sensation started to disappear in one area of the thumb.

Cause: bowling.

Dr. W. H. Kisner of New Orleans, La., reports in the British Journal of Plastic Surgery that the patient had bowled two to three times weekly for 20 years. But now, the tingling, pain and tenderness in the thumb were incapacitating.

A procedure was performed on a nerve to relieve symptoms, the doctor says. A summary of the case report appears in the Practitioner, a medical journal.

Spine curvature

A virus may be implicated in causing scoliosis, lateral curvature of the spine.

A research team in Edinburgh, Scotland, has found what look like viral particles in the skeletal muscles of patients who have scoliosis.

However, attempts to isolate the virus from tissue specimens have failed, according to a report in the British Medical Journal.

Problems of Israel told by Lea Rabin

By JEAN SANDERS
Staff Writer

Sweeping into the Southland on a cautious wave of optimisim for peace in the Middle East and the role of women in Israel, Lea Rabin paused in Orange County Thursday to assess the situation in her country.

Mrs. Rabin, wife of Yitzhak Rabin, Israel's prime minister and former ambassador to the United States, battles shoulder to shoulder alongside her husband in their country's behalf. She's an impressive unofficial ambassador.

Her 10-day visit to key cities in the U. S. is geared to the United Jewish Appeal. Meeting with the Jewish communities from California to Georgia, she describes Israel's continued need for support.

"The burden of defense is great," she said. "It is a big area to cover. Forty per cent of Israel's gross income goes to the need for defense. That does not leave much for all the rest — education, welfare, health, all the social things.

"I feel strongly that Jewish people all over the world have to participate. In a way, Israel is their second home.

"Our social needs are great because we are a society of refugees. In the past 29 years we have provided homes, jobs and schooling. We have advanced our welfare support; national security takes good care of the old, the sick and the poor. By 'poor' I mean those families with more than four children. The state steps in to help if they are burdened financially.

"WE CARE ABOUT our women. Day care for children is subsidized by the minister of labor for working women. We are opening more and more centers affiliated with factories and hospitals. Women get three to four months off with pay when they have a child.

"Women in Israel have achieved legislative posts and have integrated into political life."

Her mouth tightens, then turns into a wry smile. "I don't say our women are equal. They aren't. Equal pay for equal work was legislated, but it does not apply in reality. The men try to cheat the women. But we are concentrating on this problem."

Tall and taut, Mrs. Rabin speaks with conviction. "First we want to exist and stay alive. We have to live and then educate our children. We are very concerned about the quality of life in Israel, but we can't slow down on defense. We live in a threatened area."

Later, in what appears to be a contradictory statement, she said, "We feel the less arms there are, the more hope there is for peace."

She admits that "right now, we have no relationship with other countries, no crossing of borders of merchandise."

Yet, she is optimistic and emphasizes, "I don't see why peace can't be achieved in this generation. Why wait? I feel the Arab nations have come to the point where settlement would be as much in their favor as ours. A solution can be found."

DISCUSSING HER country in the Costa Mesa offices of the United Jewish Welfare Fund of Orange County, the voluble woman with deep-set blue eyes candidly admitted, "We have turned to the United States government time and again for aid. But we tax ourselves very high before we turn elsewhere. Once we've done our utmost, we feel entitled to turn to others."

Asked about the rumor that some Jews had become unhappy living in Israel and had departed, Mrs. Rabin said, "If there are unhappy Jews now in Israel, they are free to leave. We believe in freedom.

"Those who left Russia for Israel, for example, are actually immigrants. There is a different way of life in Russia compared with Israel. It is a tremendous adjustment. It works counterproductive sometimes; then they blame their situation on Israel.

"But they are free to come to Israel and free to go. We are concerned about every Jew who can't get out of a country because he is a Jew. We would like to accept them, all of them."

At the International Women's Conference last year in Mexico City, Mrs. Rabin was to present the keynote address. More than half the delegation walked out. She still stings from the incident.

"WE FOUND ourselves involved in political issues rather than working for mutual understanding and reconciliation. The conference was distorted by political aims and guidelights. Women's role was secondary. I'd say the conference was one-third successful.

"Arab and Communist delegates walked out because I represented Israel, and there had been stories, all lies, about how Israel was torturing Palestinian women and children. This was untrue. We are promoting health and welfare in Palestine.

"While I was at the podium and the delegates were walking out, the American delegation gave me an ovation of confidence. I said, 'Let's wait until the exodus is over' before I began my address. The American delegation gave me another ovation, followed by the others.

"Afterwards there was an outpour of emotion, tears, from the Asian, African, Latin American, American women, everyone who stayed.

"The first woman to come up to me with thanks for the talk was a delegate from Norway who the night before at a meeting of delegates was silent the whole time."

While at the conference, Mrs. Rabin had hoped for a visit with Jihan Sadat, wife of Anwar Sadat, president of Egypt.

"I would have like a brief exchange of greeting, woman to woman. She said 'certainly not.'"

Has there been any change in Mrs. Sadat's attitude since then?

"No change," Mrs. Rabin ruefully confessed.

HOPES for peace in the Middle East and equality for women in Israel were voiced by Lea Rabin.

TYPICAL of women about to be photographed, Mrs. Rabin whipped out lipstick, begging photographers, "For the sake of the camera, one second."

Miss Welcome or maybe 'Mister'

She says she meets a variety of people and feels the activity will open doors to job opportunities.

Last Wednesday she helped Carl Karcher, City Councilman Don Phillips and other dignitaries cut a ribbon to officially open the new Carls Jr. fast food establishment at Seventh Street and Long Beach Boulevard.

Miss Welcome was established originally to be hostess for activities generated by the Miss Universe Pageant which began in Long Beach. The pageant was lost to Florida more than a decade ago. It was replaced by the International Beauty Congress which was moved to Japan and died quietly in 1973.

Miss Welcome was left to greet visiting dignitaries and returning Navy ships and to preside over ribbon cutting ceremonies for new businesses ... events which have declined in frequency during recent years.

Now, as it reaches its quarter century mark, the contest is being threatened partly by budget tightening but mostly by a dramatic change in attitude about such events, the organizations which sponsor them and the roles women play in them.

LBMA shows tribal masks

TWO OF the African tribal sculptures on exhibit at Long Beach Museum of Art are the Baga mask, above, from Nalu and the face mask from Dogon, Mali.

An exhibit of wood carvings used by various African tribes for ritualistic purposes such as initation and funeral ceremonies opens Saturday at the Long Beach Museum of Art, 2300 E. Ocean Blvd.

Real animal teeth, hair and feathers are used in many of the tribal masks to enhance the animalistic qualities.

Among the tribes from the Ivory Coast represented are the Baule who inhabit the central zone and carve highly refined and detailed carvings of their ancestors which they bring to the great ceremonies to be charged with life force.

The Senufo, farmers from the Ivory Coast, carve helmet masks with large crocodile jaws for casting out evil spirits. The masks are referred to as "firespitters" due to an old custom of placing a small piece of glowing coal into the muzzle and the dancer blowing through it, thus giving a frightening effect.

Some of the other tribes represented in the exhibition are the Mende, Baga, Toma, Dan, Ashanti, Youruba, Chamba, Caluba and Basange.

The exhibition is circulated by the Western Association of Art Museums and may be seen locally until March 13.

COLLECTORS of prints will have a one-day opportunity Tuesday to view a selection of more than 1,000 old master, modern master and contemporary prints at an exhibit from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. in the printmaking room (No. 104) of the Fine Arts building, Long Beach State University.

Dick Swift, the university's art department chairman, arranged with Michigan's Lakeside Studio to bring the collection to Long Beach for perusal and sale to the public.

In the collection are works by Blake, Callot, Daumier, Durer, Rouault, Villon, Miro, Hayter, Whistler, Peterdi, Antreasian and Richard Hunt. Area artists represented are Beall, Epting, Freimark, Ihle, Kerciu, Kohn, Rothman, McCormick, Kasten and Swift.

arts

Also shown will be a number of Japanese woodcuts from the Ukiyo-e School and wood engravings by Henry Wolf which are proofs from the Wolf estate.

A Lakeside Studio representative will accompany the collection to answer historical and technical questions of the graphics on display.

BODY-CONTACT sports, flower abstractions, figures, assorted still-lifes and one work composed of 15 individual panels are among the works by woman artist B. J. Wilson on exhibition, beginning today, at the Jewish Community Center, 2601 Grand Ave.

Viewing hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sundays through Fridays and 7 to 10 p.m. Mondays through Thursdays. The paintings may be seen through Feb. 27.

The artist is a member of the Los Angeles Art Association, Women Painters of the West and Artists for Economic Action. Her paintings have been exhibited throughout the U. S. and at the 23rd annual International Invitational Painting Exposition in Deauville, France. Ms. Wilson is a faculty member at Santa Monica College.

Feeling that an abstract work has more meaning if it has some basis in reality, the artist often starts from a good photo, slide or scrap. Her flowers all started from slides projected directly on canvas, then 'destroyed' by a pattern organization of dark and light colors.

RETROSPECTIVE of the past 10 years in the career of Peter Mendez opens Allied Arts Gallery in Huntington Beach Public Library at Sixth and Main Streets. Mendez is assistant professor of art at Long Beach State University.

The show traces the development of the artist's style from a photorealistic to a representational but looser, more expressionistic style. Main element of Mendez's current work is color and color theory drawn from his work with videotape.

Hosted by the Allied Arts Council, a reception for the artist will take place Thursday from 6 to 9 p.m. at the gallery. The public is invited.

According to newly appointed gallery director Roger Morrison, the Mendez show will remain through March 14. Gallery hours are noon to 8 p.m. Monday through Thursday and 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday.

ENTRIES by professional and amateur artists must be received by March 1 to qualify for selection in Art for Funds Sake "Chautauqua '77," outdoor art show by the Palos Verdes Community Arts Association which this year will take place May 21-22.

Applications are available from Palos Verdes Art Center, 5504 W. Crestridge Road, Rancho Palos Verdes 90274.

The big fund-raiser will bring together both the performing as well as the visual arts on the Rancho Palos Verdes City Hall grounds.

NORTON SIMON Museum of Art in Pasadena has opened a series of new galleries on the lower level of the museum at Colorado and Orange Grove Boulevards. Featured are the largest group of Degas' pastel and oil paintings on the West coast and 350 prints by Goya, including some rare proof impressions. Three smaller galleries will feature 60 drawings by Claude Lorrain and represent one of the most authentic and comprehensive anthologies of his drawings.

Another gallery displays paintings by artists from the School of Paris, including an extraordinary group of Picassos from 1906-55. Other new galleries are devoted to German Expressionist art, particularly the Galka Scheyer Blue Four Collection of works by Jawlensky, Kandinsky, Feininger and Klee.

Library has music duo

The Kaufman-Stafford Duo, with Louis Kaufman, violinist, and Sidney Stafford, pianist, will give a program of chamber music next Sunday at 3 p.m. in Burnett Branch Library, 560 E. Hill St. The concert is fifth in a Long Beach Museum of Art series.

Kaufman, described by the New York Times as a "violinist's violinist and a musician's musician" has toured North and South America and Europe. He has recorded more than 100 major works of the violin repertoire.

Stafford, director of the concert series, has devoted his entire career to the art of ensemble playing, as a concert accompanist and member of many chamber music groups. He spent six consecutive seasons touring with Mishel Piastro's Longines Symphonette as piano soloist and for several years toured the United States with violinist featured Michael Rabin and David Abel.

The duo will perform Sonata in B Flat Major (K. 454) by Mozart; Sonata in A Major, Op. 30 by Beethoven and Sonata in D Minor, Op. 108 by Brahms. Admission to the concert is free.

of the way through the village when it suddenly registered in my brain what they were all crying out ... the wizened, robed elders and younger men, the mothers and the naked tar-black children, they were all waving up at me; their expressions bouyant, beaming, all were crying out together, 'Meester Kinte! Meester Kinte!'

"Let me tell you something: I am a man. A sob hit me somewhere around my ankles; it came surging upward, and flinging my hands around my face, I was just bawling, as I hadn't since I was a baby. I just felt I was weeping for all of history's incredible atrocities against fellowmen...."

THE RECEPTION he found at each department store was "another variation," of that. "The end result," he said, answering questions briefly while chatting and continuing to sign his autograph, "is that anytime something draws such a big audience you've got to feel good."

The story of Kunta, Kizzy, Tom and Chicken George, all ancestors of Haley, touched people in a way that will have to have a lasting effect, he says. "Blacks and whites, young and old, will have to have a reevaluation of all matters relating to blacks."

A 36-year-old black woman standing in the long line, echoed his remarks. "I'm glad someone finally was able to tell this story. It is the truth. We all knew the truth (about slavery), but we were just hiding it. I want to be able to tell my children; I want them to know what it was really like."

She and a friend standing next to her agreed; no stories had been handed down in their families from generation to generation by word of mouth as Haley's history had been. "They were afraid," said one. "My mother would tell me how the whites in the South treated most blacks, and still do, but some blacks do not want to admit it."

The television show and the book made her angry, she said, not only at the injustices of the whites but at the reaction of some blacks. "I had read Malcolm X (Haley's first book) and went to see Haley last summer when he lectured at Hollywood High School. He talked about "Roots" but only about 100 people showed up then. Now they all want to see him."

This young woman took a survey of blacks at a store where she works. "There were three reactions. One, a black doctor, said no, he was not going to watch any of the eight shows of "Roots." And this white manager pats him on the shoulder and says, "You're intelligent." A second, one we call a Tom, said he was not going to watch, there was no truth to it. A third person, just said she didn't like it.

"Some people just don't want to see the truth," she angrily declared. "That's stupid."

Another woman, a much older black woman was waiting farther back in line without a book and would seek her autograph on a slip of paper. She said she felt no anger while watching the show. "It helps us understand our background. It's a good feeling to know who you are and for the younger people that is particulary nice to know."

"Was that a black woman who said that?" the younger woman demanded to know. "Well, it certainly made the younger people angry. It also made me cry; I had tears in my eyes and couldn't watch when they took Kizzy away."

Most of the others, many of whom had waited long hours, could not be accommodated during this day's time period. Some had also walked away disappointed from the previous day's book signing.

Haley, who had always taken an extra moment to look over the many old documents people presented him with, was reluctant to leave anyone unhappy. Those who wanted, he said, could leave the book, with their names and adresses; he would autograph them later and the copies would be returned to original owners by mail.

So, an hour later people were still in line, this time waiting to leave off their copies. They were determined to get the signature of Alex Haley.

Lakewood fans were unhappy

By KRIS SHERMAN
Staff Writer

About 50 disappointed customers drifted in and out of the book department at the May Company store in Lakewood Center Wednesday after they were told that the scheduled appearance of "Roots" author Alex Haley had been moved to another store.

The customers, most of whom purchased copies of the hardbound book at $12.50 each — despite Haley's absence — said they were not so much angry as disappointed that the author did not appear in Lakewood.

The store publicized last week that Haley would appear at the Lakewood facility, then rescinded that notice and said Haley would instead appear to autograph copies of his book at the May Company Crenshaw store.

A hand-lettered sign near the book department also carried the message, with Haley's name misspelled: "We are sorry to say that Mr. Alex Hailey (sic) will not be in this store to sign his book, "Roots."

"I want to get my book autographed, 'cause I promised my kids," one woman complained to a store official. He apologized for the inconvenience and directed her to the Crenshaw store.

"I'm very upset," said Juanita Lloyd, clutching a copy of "Roots" under her arm. "He could have come down here and seen the people who are here to buy his book. It's just not fair, but I'm going to spend my time and gasoline to go to Crenshaw anyway. I really want to see him."

Attic may hold treasure

Q. "I'm having trouble locating an old trunk." — Beatrice, Tyrone, Pa.

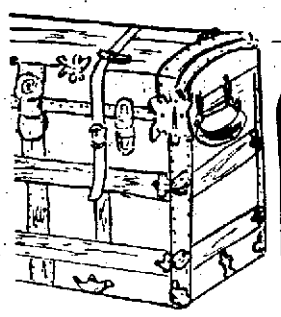

A. The simple oversized trunks of yesterday are fast movers because of the recent crafts explosion. They surrender beautifully to handpainted or stenciled motifs. Decoupage devotees devour them. Many old trunks were covered with leather, imitation leather or canvas, and some had secret compartments. Polished brass trimmings furnished them with a touch of elegance. Most were found with hardwood slats secured by heavy bolts. The J. H. Sessions Company of Connecticut was one of the nation's foremost trunk makers. Don't abandon the hunt until you've checked the neighbor's attic. Value guide: canvas covered, medium size, $45.

Q. "We are in possession of quite a number of Wonder Woman comic books." — Mr. and Mrs. E. F., Cherokee, Iowa.

A. Wonder Woman made a socko debut on magazine stands about 1942, thanks to National Periodical Publications. The following price quotations are for copies in mint (like new) condition: No. 1, $100; No. 2, No. 3, No. 4, No. 5, $48 each; No. 6, $30; No. 7 through No. 24, $22 each; No. 25 through No. 44, $15 each. Copies in fine condition bring 25 per cent less than stated values. After some quick tabulation, you'll probably dub her Wonderful Woman!

Q. "The mark 'H. & Co., Selb, Bavaria, Germany' on the base of a china teapot has me perplexed." — Elaine, Mobile, Ala.

A. Because the "H. & Co." backstamp is closely associated with the famed Haviland & Company, this trademark can be an eyebrow raiser. However, the location "Selb, Bavaria, Germany" eliminates any guesswork because this is the home of the porcelain giant Heinrich & Company. The still existing firm, established about 1896, exported beautiful everyday and ornamental wares to the United States, especially before World War I. Their tea and coffee services became china closet staples. That "H. & Co" trademark has caused more than one novice to do a double take! Value guide: coffee pot, florals, circa 1915, $45.

abigail van buren

Dear Abby
Non-Catholic wants to become a nun

DEAR ABBY: I am 15 and I want to join a convent. The problem is, I am not Catholic. I'm not really anything, but I want to become a nun because I've never had a date and I'll probably never have one, and if I were a nun in a convent I wouldn't have to make any excuses. After all, who ridicules a nun for not having a boyfriend?

How does a girl go about signing up to be a nun? Please answer in the paper because I don't have any privacy here. If anyone in my family found out I asked such a question, I'd never hear the end of it. Thank you. — FUTURE NUN

DEAR FUTURE NUN: Sorry, dear, a convent is not a place for a girl to hide because she thinks she needs an excuse for not having a boyfriend. Women become nuns because of their deep religious convictions and desire to dedicate their lives to the service of their church. You need a mature friend with whom you can talk frankly about your feelings. Counseling from a Catholic priest could be extremely helpful.

DEAR ABBY: Perhaps my feelings of frustration and anger can be alleviated by writing to you. I hope so because right now I'm all tied up in knots, and it's bad for my blood pressure.

I just had a phone call from my sister and did she ever let me have it! She started out by demanding, "WHO the h— have you been talking to for one solid hour?" (I meekly told her, although I now realize that it was really none of her business.)

Then she did a number on me for spending so much time talking on the phone, and like a dummy I apologized for it.

Abby, I don't have a party line so if I want to talk all day (or all night) why shouldn't I?

And why should I be made to feel guilty because my line is busy when my sister calls? — FRUSTRATED AND ANGRY

DEAR F AND A: Direct your anger where it belongs — at yourself — for lacking the courage to speak up to your sister. Tell her what you've told me, and you'll feel better.

DEAR ABBY: I've been married for seven months and my problem is a friend of mine. (I'll call her "Barbie.") It seems that Barbie can't keep her hands off my husband's bod. Barb has a husband of her own, but she likes to pinch my husband, punch his biceps (playfully) and feel his chest. It's always in a joking way, but I don't like all this feeling and touching with my guy.

I'm not jealous. I'm just upset. Barbie's husband either doesn't notice, or he doesn't care.

My husband says I'm making something out of nothing. My sister says I should come right out and tell Barbie, "Hands off my man!"

What is your advice? — ANNOYED

DEAR ANNOYED: It's your husband's "bod," and if he doesn't like being pinched, punched and touched, it's up to him (not you) to say so.

Police officers' wives have special concerns

dr. walt menninger

"We used to have lots of friends and an active social life. Then my husband became a policeman. Our friends seemed to become more formal and a little edgy around us. They would make poor jokes about Bill's being one of the 'fuzz.' Things just weren't the same."

A group of police officers' wives were having a potluck dinner, and they got to sharing some common problems. Most striking was the sense of desolation and isolation experienced by the wives of rookies.

Several acknowledged that what made it especially difficult was the fact that they hadn't been prepared for those problems. And they thought others shouldn't have to go through the same desolation.

With the support of the police chief, those wives developed a program for orienting new police wives. Along the way, it was my privilege to sit in on planning sessions and a presentation to new wives during recruit training.

First, they thought up all sorts of questions that they had wondered about when their husbands first joined the force. After some research, they prepared a booklet entitled "Everything You Always Wanted to Know About the Police Department, But Were Afraid to Ask."

NEXT, THEY prepared a list of topics about which they had painful or bitter experiences, to prepare the new wives for some of the difficult times ahead. These were discussed at an informal meeting with the new wives.

"It is a shock," said one, "even to the woman who totally supports her husband's decision to become a police officer, when her husband's dream becomes a reality.

"In the majority of cases, she has had little contact with law enforcement and what the job entails. The little knowledge she has is coupled with a vivid imagination and the ever-present television police shows, movies and books.

"Her husband, thrilled with his job, cannot understand her sudden change in attitude, the fear she displays when he puts on his gun and the gnawing worry that he may not return."

Some of the problems cited: A negative reaction from family and friends, who will tell you about every rude or bad police officer on the force, and who will call you or your husband to take care of a ticket.

If you're a compulsive planner, you're in trouble, because invariably your husband has to appear in court on his day off.

BE PREPARED to listen to the seamy sidef life, the goryetails of accidents and violent crimes.

Anticipate that some of the neighbors won't like living next to a policeman; and neighborhood teenagers may soap your car and let the air out of the tires.

Understandably, many police families feel isolated, and they turn to each other for support. An increasing number of police forces recognize the importance of some support program for the families of their officers.

The returns from the kind of program initiated by these wives may not be immediately apparent. Yet, as it supports the stability of the police officer's family, the payoff to the community is greater effectiveness of that officer.

These wives were keenly aware that their morale affected their husband's morale and, in turn, his job performance. They were equally aware of the high divorce rate for police officers, and they wanted to help prevent some of these problems from jeopardizing marriages.

Medicine and You

Doctor links measles virus with MS

There's now hard evidence that measles virus may be the culprit in the causation of multiple sclerosis, a doctor reports.

Evidence of the virus has turned up in the small intestines of MS patients, according to Dr. Albert W. Cook, professor of neurosurgery at Downstate Medical Center, Brooklyn, N. Y.

In a report in the publication Life Sciences, Dr. Cook and associates say that they "conclude that MS patients have an active and persistent measles infection."

ben zinser

Such an infection, they say, is sequestered in the patient's jejunum, a segment of the small intestine. It may also exist in other sites, they add.

Information on the finding also appears in Medical Tribune, a news newspaper for physicians.

Help for headache

Long term preventive treatment with the drug lithium carbonate can often reduce the frequency and severity of chronic cluster headache, a headache authority says.

Dr. Lee Kudrow, director of the California Medical Clinic for Headache, Encino, says lithium administration aided 27 of 28 patients who tolerated the drug.

Four patients had to discontinue treatment because the drug caused adverse side effects.

Cluster headache is characterized by intense throbbing pain behind the eye. These attacks may recur frequently over a period of weeks.

Dr. Kudrow reported on his experience with lithium carbonate to a meeting of the American Association for the Study of Headache.

A written report appears in Internal Medicine News, a newspaper for physicians.

Avoid blisters

A doctor reports how patients can deal with soreness and blisters in the palms of their hands resulting from use of a cane, walker, crutches or arm braces.

Says Dr. William C. L. Diefenbach of Southampton, N. Y.:

"Tell them to get a pair of bicycle racing gloves from a sporting goods store. These fingerless gloves have specially cushioned palms that provide considerable protection."

His comment appears in Consultant, a periodical for doctors.

Bowling is culprit

Doctors report the case of the tenpin thumb.

A 56-year-old teacher, over a six-year period, noticed a slowly enlarging and increasingly tender nodule at the base of the right thumb.

Then, over a seven-month span, sensation started to disappear in one area of the thumb.

Cause: bowling.

Dr. W. H. Kisner of New Orleans, La., reports in the British Journal of Plastic Surgery that the patient had bowled two to three times weekly for 20 years. But now, the tingling, pain and tenderness in the thumb were incapacitating.

A procedure was performed on a nerve to relieve symptoms, the doctor says. A summary of the case report appears in the Practitioner, a medical journal.

Spine curvature

A virus may be implicated in causing scoliosis, lateral curvature of the spine.

A research team in Edinburgh, Scotland, has found what look like viral particles in the skeletal muscles of patients who have scoliosis.

However, attempts to isolate the virus from tissue specimens have failed, according to a report in the British Medical Journal.

Barthelme tops in field

Amateurs. By Donald Barthelme. Farrar, Straus & Giroux, $7.95.

I hope we are all agreed by now that Donald Barthelme is our most interesting short story writer. I'd strike the compromise, "one of the most interesting," but only to avoid an argument. We have other excellent story writers, but they aren't as interesting. Barthelme is even interesting on those rare occasions when he is tedious.

He is sometimes tedious in this collection, although there are certain stories, most notably the final "At the End of the Mechanical Age," that are among his best.

Other reviewers have compared Barthelme to Beckett, but, at what I consider his best, he reminds me more of Pinter. Pinter has said that he does not begin with an idea which he then sets out to embody in a dramatic structure, as Shaw might have. He begins with a situation — maybe two men sitting in a basement — and lets one action lead to another. Similarly, I most appreciate Barthelme when he leaves me with the impression that he doesn't know any better than I do quite what to make of what he hath wrought, although we are both sure that his handwork is eminently worth our contemplation. This treading of the tightened thread between rationalism and bedlam is a hazardous literary feat indeed . . . which is why, along with his wit and erudition, that Barthelme is so interesting.

Barthelme has, however, chosen to call the book, Amateurs, and I am afraid at certain points that he is telling us we must love each other more and better. I hope I'm wrong. We have whole stables of second to tenth rate writers telling us to love each other. Better that Barthelme continue creating those worlds which seem absurd until, on close comparison, it becomes clear that they are more like our own worlds than are the familiar sound-stages and back-lots of conventional fiction.

If you are already an admirer of Barthelme's work, you will naturally want to read this book. If you haven't read him, you might be better off starting with the earlier Come Back, Dr. Caligari or Unspeakable Practices, Unnatural Acts. The other possibility, that you have read his work and do not care for it, is, although we live in a world of infinite possibilities (I am told), unthinkable to me.

Long Beach State University.

Sherlock's Creator

Arthur Conan Doyle in his study, in 1915. Photo from The Adventures of Conan Doyle, by Charles Higham (Norton, $9.95), a scintillating life of the man who made Sherlock Holmes a famous name around the world.

Henry and Cato. By Irish Murdoch. Viking, $8.95

When the first Murdoch novels appeared, critics tried out descriptions such as Mozartean or fugue-like. Now after some 16 novels, it is enough to say Murdochian. But what does that mean to a reader new to her delights? Murdoch starts writing a novel, she notes, "with a germ of a situation involving two or three people. It's their relationship which starts it off and then everything winds itself round this."

And this latest novel shows Murdoch people and Murdoch reality through stunning dialogue and fast-paced narrative. Some critics may mutter derivative, pointing to Cato (Father Forbes), convert, slum missionary, wavering in faith. But her characters are never derivative.

We may expect certain things from such a type character. She does not. Our expectations are wittily upset. Similarly, the Henry of the title at first seems the stereotypical expatriate, teaching art history at a midwestern U.S. college, summoned home to the family estate when his envied older brother dies in a car accident.

Henry and Cato? Neighbors as children, they meet again, tangling into the plot of a young slum vandal, Beautiful Joe, Cato's sister Colette, Henry's mother and her literary parasite, and Henry's brother's seeming late mistress.

Murdochian characters all exert their wills and fancy themselves possessors of reality. We may share their illusions about faith, selling the family estate, shocking a mother, handling a kidnapping, or managing unrequited love. But Murdoch keeps reminding us that "ordinary human consciousness is a tissue of illusions," and new realities keep emerging.

Destroyers turn out to be saviors, saviors destroy. Mistresses are charwomen. Parasites support, supporters devour. Revealing the turns of the plot would spoil part of the fun because the novel has such strong narrative pull. Revealing more of the character revelations would mean re-telling the whole book. People — what they are and are not — these lure us through the Murdochian world. And along the way, we have strong reason to weed our own gardens.

— Dr. Eileen Lothamer,
English Department,
Long Beach State University.

Christopher and His Kind. By Christopher Isherwood. Farrar, Straus, Giroux, $10.

In Christopher and His Kind, Christopher Isherwood takes off all the masks he wore in his books about his experience in the decade before World War II. These books include the famous Berlin Stories: The Last of Mr. Norris and Goodbye to Berlin, upon which I Am a Camera and Cabaret are based.

In popular culture, Isherwood, if he is known by name, is known through these plays and movies. But he has been writing television scripts and screenplays from the time he emigrated to the United States from England in 1939. He has also continued to write novels and autobiographical books, and these are what he will be remembered for in literary history.

Christopher and His Kind takes its place beside these works as the most candid of them. In an already well-quoted statement, Isherwood tells us (in the third person, referring to himself): "To Christopher, Berlin meant Boys." He says that his preference for boys was part of his revolt against "Nearly Everybody," a revolt which included left-wing political beliefs.

Part of the appeal of an autobiographical book such as this is, of course, the gossip it contains. And for those interested in the literature — and to some extent the popular culture — of the 30's there is plenty of it. We learn, for example, about the person, Jean Ross, upon whom the character Sally Bowles is based. She was in real life "a mere self-indulgent upper-middle-class foreign tourist who could escape from Berlin whenever she chose."

We also learn about Isherwood's friendships with such literary giants as W. H. Auden, Stephen Spender, and E. M. Forster, and his acquaintanceships with other giants, such as Somerset Maugham and Virginia Woolf. Isherwood's close relationship with Auden (it included a sexual dimension) is perhaps the most interesting because Auden is, with Yeats and Eliot, probably the greatest poet of this century. Isherwood is one of the greatest prose stylists of this century, and for that reason alone Christopher and His Kind is successful, both as a work of autobiography and of art.

on bridge

Dear Mr. Corn:

We played five clubs and should have bid seven. What do you think is the right sequence after West opens one club, North overcalls one heart and East makes a penalty double?

West	East	2/6-B
♠ A 9 8 2	♠ K Q
♥ 7	♥ A 9 8 6 5 3
♦ —	♦ 7 5
♣ A Q J 10 9 8 6 2	♣ K 7 5

No Bonus, San Francisco

Answer: A most difficult hand to bid to a grand slam and I would expect many to stop at six (some would stop at game just as you did). An advance sequence might follow these lines:

West	North	East	South
1♠	1♥	Dbl.	Pass
3♠	Pass	3♥*	Pass
3♠*	Pass	4♣	Pass
4♦*	Pass	4♠*	Pass
5♥*	Pass	7♠

* shows first or second round controls.

Dear Mr. Corn:

My partner opened one spade and I responded one no trump with this hand. She rebid two spades and I passed. We missed game and I was told that I had too much for a one no trump response. Was my partner correct?

My hand: ♠ 6 ♥ A 9 7 3 ♦ K Q 9 7 ♣ Q 9 6 5

Caught One, New Hyde Park, N.Y.

Answer: In standard methods, a one no trump response to an opening in a major suit shows 6-9 high card points (some play 6-10). Therefore, your response was an underbid. What is the solution?

The problem is an awkward one but most would not agree with your choice. The "standard" response would be two diamonds or two clubs.

Dear Mr. Corn:

How about a card exposed during the deal? Some say a redeal is required only if dealer turns one up. I say the laws apply across the board. True, no player is supposed to touch the cards until the deal is complete. But it does happen — so what's the rule?

Up and Over, San Carlos, Calif.

Answer: I agree with you. A redeal is required, if before the last card is dealt, a card is turned face up in dealing or is face up in the pack elsewhere.

LBMA shows tribal masks

TWO OF the African tribal sculptures on exhibit at Long Beach Museum of Art are the Baga mask, above, from Nalu and the face mask from Dogon, Mali.

An exhibit of wood carvings used by various African tribes for ritualistic purposes such as initation and funeral ceremonies opens Saturday at the Long Beach Museum of Art, 2300 E. Ocean Blvd.

Real animal teeth, hair and feathers are used in many of the tribal masks to enhance the animalistic qualities.

Among the tribes from the Ivory Coast represented are the Baule who inhabit the central zone and carve highly refined and detailed carvings of their ancestors which they bring to the great ceremonies to be charged with life force.

The Senufo, farmers from the Ivory Coast, carve helmet masks with large crocodile jaws for casting out evil spirits. The masks are referred to as "firespitters" due to an old custom of placing a small piece of glowing coal into the muzzle and the dancer blowing through it, thus giving a frightening effect.

Some of the other tribes represented in the exhibition are the Mende, Baga, Toma, Dan, Ashanti, Youruba, Chamba, Caluba and Basange.

The exhibition is circulated by the Western Association of Art Museums and may be seen locally until March 13.

COLLECTORS of prints will have a one-day opportunity Tuesday to view a selection of more than 1,000 old master, modern master and contemporary prints at an exhibit from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. in the printmaking room (No. 104) of the Fine Arts building, Long Beach State University.

Dick Swift, the university's art department chairman, arranged with Michigan's Lakeside Studio to bring the collection to Long Beach for perusal and sale to the public.

In the collection are works by Blake, Callot, Daumier, Durer, Rouault, Villon, Miro, Hayter, Whistler, Peterdi, Antreasian and Richard Hunt. Area artists represented are Beall, Epting, Freimark, Ihle, Kerciu, Kohn, Rothman, McCormick, Kasten and Swift.

arts

Also shown will be a number of Japanese woodcuts from the Ukiyo-e School and wood engravings by Henry Wolf which are proofs from the Wolf estate.

A Lakeside Studio representative will accompany the collection to answer historical and technical questions of the graphics on display.

BODY-CONTACT sports, flower abstractions, figures, assorted still-lifes and one work composed of 15 individual panels are among the works by woman artist B. J. Wilson on exhibition, beginning today, at the Jewish Community Center, 2601 Grand Ave.

Viewing hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sundays through Fridays and 7 to 10 p.m. Mondays through Thursdays. The paintings may be seen through Feb. 27.

The artist is a member of the Los Angeles Art Association, Women Painters of the West and Artists for Economic Action. Her paintings have been exhibited throughout the U. S. and at the 23rd annual International Invitational Painting Exposition in Deauville, France. Ms. Wilson is a faculty member at Santa Monica College.

Feeling that an abstract work has more meaning if it has some basis in reality, the artist often starts from a good photo, slide or scrap. Her flowers all started from slides projected directly on canvas, then 'destroyed' by a pattern organization of dark and light colors.

RETROSPECTIVE of the past 10 years in the career of Peter Mendez opens Allied Arts Gallery in Huntington Beach Public Library at Sixth and Main Streets. Mendez is assistant professor of art at Long Beach State University.

The show traces the development of the artist's style from a photorealistic to a representational but looser, more expressionistic style. Main element of Mendez's current work is color and color theory drawn from his work with videotape.

Hosted by the Allied Arts Council, a reception for the artist will take place Thursday from 6 to 9 p.m. at the gallery. The public is invited.

According to newly appointed gallery director Roger Morrison, the Mendez show will remain through March 14. Gallery hours are noon to 8 p.m. Monday through Thursday and 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday.

ENTRIES by professional and amateur artists must be received by March 1 to qualify for selection in Art for Funds Sake "Chautauqua '77," outdoor art show by the Palos Verdes Community Arts Association which this year will take place May 21-22.

Applications are available from Palos Verdes Art Center, 5504 W. Crestridge Road, Rancho Palos Verdes 90274.

The big fund-raiser will bring together both the performing as well as the visual arts on the Rancho Palos Verdes City Hall grounds.

NORTON SIMON Museum of Art in Pasadena has opened a series of new galleries on the lower level of the museum at Colorado and Orange Grove Boulevards. Featured are the largest group of Degas' pastel and oil paintings on the West coast and 350 prints by Goya, including some rare proof impressions. Three smaller galleries will feature 60 drawings by Claude Lorrain and represent one of the most authentic and comprehensive anthologies of his drawings.

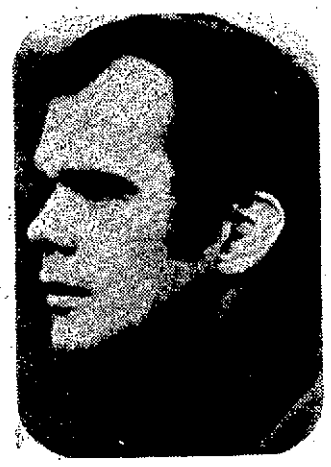

Another gallery displays paintings by artists from the School of Paris, including an extraordinary group of Picassos from 1906-55. Other new galleries are devoted to German Expressionist art, particularly the Galka Scheyer Blue Four Collection of works by Jawlensky, Kandinsky, Feininger and Klee.

Organist to appear

Organ music ranging from 1325 to the present will be performed by Dr. Samuel John Swartz Tuesday at 8:15 p.m. in First Congregational Church, Third Street and Cedar Avenue. His appearance is arranged by the Long Beach Chapter of the American Guild of Organists and the host church.

The program will include compositions by Alan Hovhaness, Maurice Duruflé, Robert Elmore, Samuel Wesley, J. S. Bach, Jean-Claude Henry, Jehan Alain and Alexandre Guilmant.

As a composer he has written four operettas, an organ concerto and works for solo organ, as well as choral music and scores for plays and films.

SAMUEL J. SWARTZ
Plays for Organ Guild

He is resident organist of Immanuel Presbyterian Church, Los Angeles, where he also heads the school for music and the arts.

Admission is free; an offering will be received.

Library has music duo

The Kaufman-Stafford Duo, with Louis Kaufman, violinist, and Sidney Stafford, pianist, will give a program of chamber music next Sunday at 3 p.m. in Burnett Branch Library, 560 E. Hill St. The concert is fifth in a Long Beach Museum of Art series.

Kaufman, described by the New York Times as a "violinist's violinist and a musician's musician" has toured North and South America and Europe. He has recorded more than 100 major works of the violin repertoire.

Stafford, director of the concert series, has devoted his entire career to the art of ensemble playing, as a concert accompanist and member of many chamber music groups. He spent six consecutive seasons touring with Mishel Piastro's Longines Symphonette as piano soloist and for several years toured the United States with violinist Michael Rabin and David Abel.

LOUIS KAUFMAN
Violinist featured

The duo will perform Sonata in B Flat Major (K. 454) by Mozart; Sonata in A Major, Op. 30 by Beethoven and Sonata in D Minor, Op. 108 by Brahms. Admission to the concert is free.

Recital honors Gerald Strang

"A Tribute to Gerald Strang," a recital honoring the professor emeritus of Long Beach State University for his creative contributions as music department chairman from 1965-69, will take place next Sunday at 8 p.m.

Gabor Rejto, guest soloist, and members of the New Music Ensemble will perform in the music recital hall of LBSU, 6101 E. Seventh St. There is no admission charge for the public program.

Strang compositions to be heard include Concert for Cello, Gabor Rejto, cello (original recording artist for the piece); Sonatina for Clarinet Alone, Justus Matthews, clarinet; Mirrorrorrim, Mary Ann Richards, piano; Divertimento for Four Instruments, and Electronic Compusitions.

Strang's identity with Long Beach goes back some years. He was music department chairman for Long Beach City College from 1937-1958. Before coming to LBSU, he was department chairman at California State College, Northridge.

He is well known for his experimentation in electronic music and has served as acoustical consultant for more than 50 buildings, including the LBCC auditorium, which was designed for music rather than theater performances.

Edinger in LBSU concert

Playing her priceless 1632 Amati on Thursday will be Christiane Edinger, distinguished young German violinist, whose program will be given at 8 p.m. in music recital hall 127 at Long Beach State University.

She will be accompanied by her father, Gerhard Puchelt, pianist who has concertized throughout the world and is especially well known for his interpretation of German Romantic music.

Included on the program will be Sonata in A Major, Opus 12, No. 2, Beethoven; Sonata No. 1 in G Minor for Violin Solo, J. S. Bach; Sonatina in G Minor, Opus 137, No. 3, Schubert, and Sonata in D Major for Violin and Piano, Opus 94a, Prokofieff.

Since her debut at the 1962 Berlin Festival, Miss Edinger has appeared as guest artist with leading European and American musical organizations. In her annual visit to the U. S. she has appeared with the Boston, Pittsburgh and Milwaukee Symphonies, Los Angeles Chamber Orchestra and at the Carmel Bach and Peter Britt Gardens Festivals.

Her repertoire encompasses all of the standard works from the Baroque through the present, as well as many lesser known compositions from all musical periods.

There is no admission to the recital.

VIOLINIST Christiane Edinger will play a recital at Long Beach State University on Thursday.

'Cave' to open run at State

William Saroyan's "The Cave Dwellers," a fantasy about a motley group of non-conformists who are thrown together by the unconquerable need for love, will open Friday in the directing lab of the theater arts building of Long Beach State University.

Additional performances are Saturday, Feb. 14 and 15 at 8:30 p.m.; Saturday and next Sunday at 2:30 p.m., and next Sunday at 7:30 p.m. Director is Paul Williams.

Saroyan's "cave" is an old New York theater on the verge of being demolished. Yet, it temporarily shelters its inhabitants as they play out their lives.

In the cast are Natalie Shanefelt, Constance Orliski, Cydney Hill, Phil Matthews, Dan Shock, Ty Smith, Ronald Gingerich, Tony Burton, Brian Segrave and Louis Schilling.

Admission for all performances is $2. Further ticket information may be obtained from the Fine Arts ticket office on the campus.

Ballet performance at Shrine

Osipov Balalaika Orchestra and stars of the Bolshoi Opera and Bolshoi Ballet, will give one performance in the Shrine Auditorium, Los Angeles, next Sunday at 2:30 p.m.

The troupe is making its second tour of the U.S. Tickets are available at the Shrine box office and Mutual agencies.

BOB DI PIAZZA
Cuisine wins praise from everywhere

WHENEVER I WRITE ABOUT di Piazza Italian restaurant, I seem to be exaggerating because I use so many superlatives.

But I'm not. I'm expressing my opinion in the strongest way I know, because I want everybody to understand what a great restaurant it is. Furthermore, I'm also expressing the opinion of myriads of others who constantly tell their friends and relatives how great di Piazza is. People who phone restaurant talk shows on L. A. radio stations are as enthusiastic about di Piazza as I am — and equally sincere.

Di Piazza has been a Belmont Shore favorite for over 25 years. It's at 4722 E. Second St. The moment you step through the tall narrow front door into the entry and glance into the main dining room, you are aware that you are in a different kind of Italian restaurant. I can't tell you in so many words why it has a different personality and atmosphere. It is more attractive than most Italian restaurants. It is also more de luxe, with crisp red linen tablecloths, white linen napkins and decorative touches in the best possible taste.

Those who haven't been to di Piazza may think — because of its reputation for excellence — that it's expensive, with dinners in the $7, $8, $9 and up range. But it's definitely NOT expensive. Wonderful dinners start at $3.50 and include hot cheese bread as well as choice of two of the following: small shrimp cocktail or minestrone (soup) or green salad. Let me state without fear of contradiction that di Piazza's cream-style Italian salad dressing is an incredibly marvelous taste experience. (No exaggeration!)

And how about this: To encourage newcomers to visit his restaurant, owner-host Bob di Piazza has a new special served nightly after 9. It's a splendid hamburger sandwich on a French roll with mushrooms. It comes with salad jardinere, with sliced vegetables and that fabulous house dressing. You also receive spaghetti with sauce and a glass of beer or wine. The price is surprisingly low — $2.50. Definitely a "best buy!"

Di Piazza (closed Tuesdays) serves dinner starting at 5 p.m. Another new special is called "Welcome Wednesday With Wine." Any party spending $7.50 on Wednesdays receives a complimentary, generous half-carafe of superb Sebastiani wine.

Bob, who opened the restaurant in 1952, features a scrumptious, 11-ounce N.Y. steak with mushrooms for $5.95, another top value. Ravioli with spaghetti is $3.50 while lasagna is $4.50 and veal scallopine is $4.95. Chicken cacciatore hunter's-style is $4.75. The unusual Dinner for Two Persons, $7.85, includes soup or salad, small cheese pizza; meatballs and spaghetti or ravioli and spaghetti; cheese bread and beverage.

MANY YEARS AGO IN FRANCE, an author who was also an epicure wrote: "The civilized eater does not eat primarily to fill the stomach; he leaves that immediate gratification to animals and the less civilized segment of the population."

Then he added these lines which express the pleasure of dining out unusually well: "The civilized eater, while nourishing himself, concentrates on the purer sensations that gratify the senses; the nuances of food which, more than satisfying hunger, feed memories."

The author could have had a restaurant such as King Arthur's Steak House in mind. King Arthur's has been a Long Beach dining tradition since the late 1950s. Throughout this area, vast numbers of people have memories of wonderful meals at King Arthur's, scenes of joyful conversation with good friends who shared with them the pleasures of glorious beef roasts, juicy steaks and delicacies from the sea.

Such memories stir them into returning again and again to King Arthur's, 5511 E. Spring St. near Bellflower Boulevard, because they know it has dedicated itself — years after year — to maintaining absolutely the highest standards of food quality. It was founded 20 years ago by John Apostle (who also owns the Golden Sails Inn complex) and his uncle, the late John Paulos. Now it is operated by co-owner Tony Apostle (John A.'s brother), a friendly, outspoken man who will not permit anything inferior in his kitchen. The meats are the choicest money can buy; the poultry and ocean delicacies are famed for their exceptional flavors.

My wife and I have been dining at King Arthur's since it opened and have vivid memories of its pampered, premium savory prime rib au jus, its top sirloins, southern-style fried chicken, broiled halibut, fisherman's haul variety and its shore dinner variety. No one ever leaves King Arthur's feeling hungry, because the dinners include the freshest, most delectable soup du jour and large tossed salad, a wonderful baked potato and hot bread. The dinners are $4.25 to over $8, most reasonable for such unusual quality.

Those who understand "the nuances" of fine food also know that King Arthur's is a memorable choice for luncheon. Chef Johnny Franco's prime rib au jus sandwich is food for the gods. People rave continually about the excellence of his $1.65 specials (soup with a sandwich) and the generous $1.95 specials which include entree, soup or salad and two vegetables. The restaurant (which has a huge parking lot in the rear) also features banquets and nightly entertainment.

Dear Abby

Non-Catholic wants to become a nun

DEAR ABBY: I am 15 and I want to join a convent. The problem is, I am not Catholic. I'm not sure anything, but I want to become a nun because I've never had a date and I'll probably never have one, and if I were a nun in a convent I wouldn't have to make excuses. After all, who ridicules a nun for not having a boyfriend?

How does a girl go about signing up to be a nun? Please answer in the paper because I don't have much privacy here. If anyone in my family found out I asked such a question, I'd never hear the end of it. Thank you. — FUTURE NUN

DEAR FUTURE NUN: Sorry, dear, a convent is not a place for a girl to hide because she thinks she needs an excuse for not having a boyfriend. Women become nuns because of their deep religious convictions and desire to dedicate their lives to the service of their church. You need a mature friend with whom you can talk frankly about your feelings. Counseling from a Catholic priest could be extremely helpful.

DEAR ABBY: Perhaps my feelings of frustration and anger can be alleviated by writing to you. I hope so because right now I'm all tied up in knots, and it's bad for my blood pressure.

I just had a phone call from my sister and did she ever let me have it! She started out by demanding, "WHO the h— have you been talking to for one solid hour?" (I meekly told her, although I now realize that it was really none of her business.)

Then she did a number on me for spending so much time talking on the phone, and like a dummy I apologized for it.

Abby, I don't have a party line so if I want to talk all day (or all night) why shouldn't I?

And why should I be made to feel guilty because my line is busy when my sister calls? — FRUSTRATED AND ANGRY

DEAR F AND A: Direct your anger where it belongs — at yourself — for lacking the courage to speak up to your sister. Tell her what you've told me, and you'll feel better.

DEAR ABBY: I've been married for seven months and my problem is a friend of mine. (I'll call her "Barbie.") It seems that Barbie can't keep her hands off my husband's bod. Barb has a husband of her own, but she likes to pinch my husband, punch his biceps (playfully) and feel his chest. It's always in a joking way, but I don't like all this feeling and touching with my guy.

I'm not jealous, I'm just upset. Barbie's husband either doesn't notice, or he doesn't care.

My husband says I'm making something out of nothing. My sister says I should come right out and tell Barbie, "Hands off my man!"

What is your advice? — ANNOYED

DEAR ANNOYED: It's your husband's "bod," and if he doesn't like being pinched, punched and touched, it's up to him (not you) to say so.

Barthelme tops in field

Amateurs. By Donald Barthelme. Farrar, Straus & Giroux, $7.95.

I hope we are all agreed by now that Donald Barthelme is our most interesting short story writer. I'd strike the compromise, "one of the most interesting," but only to avoid an argument. We have other excellent story writers, but they aren't as interesting. Barthelme is even interesting on those rare occasions when he is tedious.

He is sometimes tedious in this collection, although there are certain stories, most notably the final "At the End of the Mechanical Age," that are among his best.

Other reviewers have compared Barthelme to Beckett, but, at what I consider his best, he reminds me more of Pinter. Pinter has said that he does not begin with an idea which he then sets out to embody in a dramatic structure, as Shaw might have. He begins with a situation — maybe two men sitting in a basement — and lets one action lead to another. Similarly, I most appreciate Barthelme when he leaves me with the impression that he doesn't know any better than I do quite what to make of what he hath wrought, although we are both sure that his handwork is eminently worth our contemplation. This treading of the tightened thread between rationalism and bedlam is a hazardous literary feat indeed . . . which is why, along with his wit and erudition, that Barthelme is so interesting.

Barthelme has, however, chosen to call the book, Amateurs, and I am afraid at certain points that he is telling us we must love each other more and better. I hope I'm wrong. We have whole stables of second to tenth rate writers telling us to love each other. Better that Barthelme continue creating those worlds which seem absurd until, on close comparison, it becomes clear that they are more like our own worlds than are the familiar sound-stages and back-lots of conventional fiction.

If you are already an admirer of Barthelme's work, you will naturally want to read this book. If you haven't read him, you might be better off starting with the earlier Come Back, Dr. Caligari or Unspeakable Practices, Unnatural Acts. The other possibility, that you have read his work and do not care for it, is, although we live in a world of infinite possibilities (I am told), unthinkable to me.

Sherlock's Creator

Arthur Conan Doyle in his study, in 1915. Photo from The Adventures of Conan Doyle, by Charles Higham (Norton, $9.95), a scintillating life of the man who made Sherlock Holmes a famous name around the world.

Henry and Cato. By Irish Murdoch. Viking, $8.95.

When the first Murdoch novels appeared, critics tried out descriptions such as Mozartean or fugue-like. Now after some 16 novels, it is enough to say Murdochian. But what does that mean to a reader new to her delights? Murdoch starts writing a novel, she notes, "with a germ of a situation involving two or three people. It's their relationship which starts it off and then everything winds itself round this."

And this latest novel shows Murdoch people and Murdoch reality through stunning dialogue and fast-paced narrative. Some critics may mutter derivative, pointing to Cato (Father Forbes), convert, slum missionary, wavering in faith. But her characters are never derivative.

We may expect certain things from such a type character. She does not. Our expectations are wittily upset. Similarly, the Henry of the title at first seems the stereotypical expatriate, teaching art history at a midwestern U.S. college, summoned home to the family estate when his envied older brother dies in a car accident.

Henry and Cato? Neighbors as children, they meet again, tangling into the plot of a young slum vandal, Beautiful Joe, Cato's sister Colette, Henry's mother and her literary parasite, and Henry's brother's seeming late mistress.

Murdochian characters all exert their wills and fancy themselves possessors of reality. We may share their illusions about faith, selling the family estate, shocking a mother, handling a kidnapping, or managing unrequited love. But Murdoch keeps reminding us that "ordinary human consciousness is a tissue of illusions," and new realities keep emerging.

Destroyers turn out to be saviors, saviors destroy. Mistresses are charwomen. Parasites support, supporters devour. Revealing the turns of the plot would spoil part of the fun because the novel has such strong narrative pull. Revealing more of the character revelations would mean re-telling the whole book. People — what they are and are not — these lure us through the Murdochian world. And along the way, we have streng reason to weed our own gardens.

— Dr. Eileen Lothamer,
English Department,
Long Beach State University.

Christopher and His Kind. By Christopher Isherwood. Farrar, Straus, Giroux, $10.

In Christopher and His Kind, Christopher Isherwood takes off all the masks he wore in his books about his experience in the decade before World War II. These books include the famous Berlin Stories: The Last of Mr. Norris and Goodbye to Berlin, upon which I Am a Camera and Cabaret are based.

In popular culture, Isherwood, if he is known by name, is known through these plays and movies. But he has been writing television scripts and screenplays from the time he emigrated to the United States from England in 1939. He has also continued to write novels and autobiographical books, and these are what he will be remembered for in literary history.

Christopher and His Kind takes its place beside these works as the most candid of them. In an already well-quoted statement, Isherwood tells us (in the third person, referring to himself): "To Christopher, Berlin meant Boys." He says that his preference for boys was part of his revolt against "Nearly Everybody," a revolt which included left-wing political beliefs.

Part of the appeal of an autobiographical book such as this is, of course, the gossip it contains. And for those interested in the literature — and to some extent the popular culture — of the 30's there is plenty of it. We learn, for example, about the person, Jean Ross, upon whom the character Sally Bowles is based. She was in real life "a mere self-indulgent upper-middle-class foreign tourist who could escape from Berlin whenever she chose."

We also learn about Isherwood's friendships with such literary giants as W. H. Auden, Stephen Spender, and E. M. Forster, and his acquaintanceships with other giants, such as Somerset Maugham and Virginia Woolf. Isherwood's close relationship with Auden (it included a sexual dimension) is perhaps the most interesting because Auden is, with Yeats and Eliot, probably the greatest poet of this century. Isherwood is one of the greatest prose stylists of this century, and for that reason alone Christopher and His Kind is successful, both as a work of autobiography and of art.

ira corn on bridge

Dear Mr. Corn:

We played five clubs and should have bid seven: What do you think is the right sequence after West opens one club, North overcalls one heart and East makes a penalty double?

West	East
♠ A 9 8 2	♠ K Q
♥ 7	♥ A 9 8 6 5 3
♦ —	♦ 7 5
♣ A Q J 10 9 8 6 2	♣ K 7 5

No Bonus, San Francisco

Answer: A most difficult hand to bid to a grand slam and I would expect many to stop at six (some would stop at game just as you did). An advance sequence might follow these lines:

West	North	East	South
1♠	1♥	Dbl.	Pass
3♣	Pass	3♥*	Pass
3♠*	Pass	4♣	Pass
4♦*	Pass	4♠*	Pass
5♥*	Pass	7♣

* shows first or second round controls.

Dear Mr. Corn:

My partner opened one spade and I responded one no trump with this hand. She rebid two spades and I passed. We missed game and I was told that I had too much for a one no trump response. Was my partner correct?

My hand: ♠ 5 ♥ A 9 7 3 ♦ K Q 9 7 ♣ Q 9 6 5

Caught One, New Hyde Park, N.Y.

Answer: In standard methods, a one no trump response to an opening in a major suit shows 6-9 high card points (some play 6-10). Therefore, your response was an underbid. What is the solution?

The problem is an awkward one but most would not agree with your choice. The "standard" response would be two diamonds or two clubs.

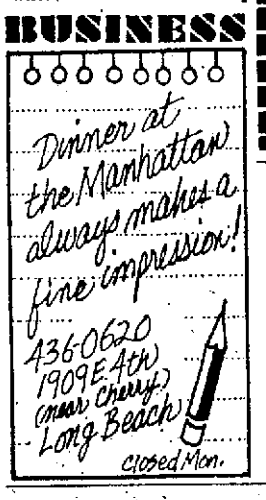

Dear Mr. Corn:

How about a card exposed during the deal? Some say a redeal is required only if dealer turns one up. I say the laws apply across the board. True, no player is supposed to touch the cards until the deal is complete. But it does happen — so what's the rule?

Up and Over, San Carlos, Calif.

Answer: I agree with you. A redeal is required, if before the last card is dealt, a card is turned face up in dealing or is face up in the pack elsewhere.

'The Soviet Connection'

Olympics TV: Big money, vodka, headaches

By DAVE ANDERSON
N.Y. Times Service

NEW YORK — More than three years before the opening ceremony, the Soviets and NBC have set the first record of the Moscow Olympics — the $85 million TV deal. And the Soviet Connection, a West German impresario named Lothar Bock, has collected a $1 million fee for NBC and been guaranteed undetermined additional income by that network for his influence in the TV negotiations.

Once again the Olympics have been exposed for what they are — big business, not sport. Except for the athletes. Cheers and a gold medal are the most an athlete can expect. But without the athletes, the Olympics would not exist.

Perhaps some day in the next century the idealists of the International Olympic Committee will realize that if nations and TV networks and influence-peddlers deal in millions during the Olympics, the athletes also deserve to make a buck. Perhaps some day the idealists will become realists and open the Olympics to professional athletes.

It won't happen in Moscow, of course, because there are no professional athletes as such there. Only professional politicians.

Lothar Bock had worked with the Russians before on cultural TV productions. He's lively and friendly, 38 years old with longish hair and a continental flair. He lives in Munich, drinks vodka and smokes West German cigarettes. When he comes to New York, he stays at the Plaza and goes to P.J. Clarke's for steak tartare and bacon cheeseburgers.

He's not usually around sports, but he delivered the Olympic TV contract to NBC four days after having been released from his CBS commitment when that network withdrew from the negotiations.

"We wonder about that," says one international TV executive. "We wonder if Lothar Bock had that planned all along."

Outsiders familiar with Soviet intrigue wonder if Bock was a double agent really working for the Russians in order to jack the price up.

"No," says another television network official. "We never had any reason to believe that Lothar was a double agent."

With his $1 million fee, Bock put such sports agents as Jerry Kapstein, Irwin Weiner and Bob Woolf to shame.

Forget about representing athletes, gentlemen. Start talking to people in Tehran, Iran, where the 1984 Olympics probably will be held. Deal with nations, not draft choices, as Bock dealt with the Soviet television ministers. His ability to deliver preceded him. Robert Wussler, now the president of the CBS television network but then its vice president in charge of sports, was in Moscow in 1975 when he was introduced to Bock.

"If you want the Olympic Games," the man making the introduction told Wussler, "here is the man."

Now Bock has emerged as the main character, the Soviet Connection, in a plot that Chekhov would have cherished — bugged hotel rooms, vodka parties, an "$80 Millon Cocktail Party" and even Soviet jokes.

No matter which Moscow hotel the American network executives stayed at, they believed their rooms were bugged. Every so often they would shout at the vents where they assumed the transmitters had been planted.

"Let me repeat that," one of them often yelled, "in case you missed it."

49ers can't find range, lose again

By JIM McCORMACK
Staff Writer

SAN JOSE — If Dwight Jones were a baseball manager, there would have been a fire in the Long Beach State dressing room after Saturday night's 75-66 loss to San Jose State.

The burning of bats, and sometimes uniforms, is a traditional, and desperate, cure for a slump.

Dwight Jones is desperate.

"We are in a slump," agreed Jones after the loss to the Spartans had dropped his 49er basketball team (5-2) into a first-place tie with San Diego State in a suddenly hectic Pacific Coast Athletic Association title chase.

"I'm at wit's end," continued Jones, "I'm just not sure what the answer is."

The 49er coach does, however, know what the problem is — a lack of confidence.

"It is that," reports Jones. "It's just like like a baseball player who quits hitting. He doesn't forget how to hit, or how to swing, he just loses his confidence and quits hitting."

The 49ers have quit hitting.

Shooting 51 per cent and unbeaten in five PCAA games when they left Long Beach Wednesday, the 49ers lost at Pacific, 73-69, Thursday by shooting 47 per cent from the field and 69 per cent from the foul line.

Saturday night their slump earned epidemic classification.

In losing back-to-back PCAA games for only the second time in the eight-year history of the league, Long Beach missed 53 of 80 shots from the floor and 15 of their 27 free throws.

"I really don't know what the solution is," admits Jones. "I suppose I could give them a day or two off and left them just forget it.

"But I'm not going to do that," continues Jones. "We're going to have practice today. We're going to work through this thing. We'll know Thursday, when we play San Jose in the Long Beach Arena, if it is the solution."

Canadiens break King hearts, 3-3

By AL LARSON
Staff Writer

The Montreal Canadiens obviously have no intentions of letting anyone dethrone them as Stanley Cup champions without a tough battle.

Coach Scotty Bowman's skaters stormed back to gain a 3-3 tie with the Kings Saturday night and extend their unbeaten string to nine games (6-0-3) to the chagrin of goalie Rogie Vachon and a partisan sellout crowd of 16,005.

Trailing 3-1, Jacques Lemaire poked in his 23rd goal of the season and Guy Lapointe notched his 16th to spoil the Kings' hopes of scoring a rare win over the runaway division-leading Canadiens.

The one-point draw lifted Montreal's season record to 39-7-9 for 87 points, while the tie cost the Kings in their struggle to overhaul the second-place Pittsburgh Penguins who defeated Detroit, 3-1, earlier in the night.

Marques muzzled but guards go wild, 72-59

By GARY RAUSCH
Staff Writer

Roy Hamilton and Jimmy Spillane aren't getting any respect, but they couldn't care less.

UCLA's backcourt riddled Washington State from the perimeter Saturday afternoon and carried the Bruins to a 72-59 Pacific-8 Conference basketball victory.

Hamilton and Spillane each hit eight of 10 shots from the foor while combining for 32 points and 15 assists.

Many of those scoring passes were to each other as WSU coach George Raveling used a clogging zone that all but paralyzed forward Marques Johnson, who registered his second lowest point total of the season with 10.

"We felt we could run on them," said Spillane, "and we knew their size underneath would handicap them when they started to tire."

With 6-11 senior Steve Puidokas at home in Pullman recovering from a sprained ankle, Raveling was forced to use 7-2 sophomore James Donaldson with 6-7 senior Greg Johnson and 6-11 freshman Stuart House.

"I don't think anybody respects our guards," Hamilton said with a grin. "Every team is concentrating on Marques because he's an all-America and they're giving Jimmy and myself the open shots. I'll be very happy if they keep leaving us unguarded."

The pattern was established early with the Bruins unable to get the ball inside to Johnson. With Spillane and Hamilton scoring eight of UCLA's first 14 points, the Bruins swept to a six-point advantage.

Ashe warns blacks on the 'dubious glories of sport'

ARTHUR ASHE
New York Times Service

NEW YORK—Since my sophomore year at UCLA, I have become convinced that we blacks spend too much time on the playing fields and too little time in the libraries.

Please don't think of this attitude as being pretentious just because I am a black, single, professional athlete.

ARTHUR ASHE
UCLA grad speaks out

I don't have children, but I can make observations. I strongly believe the black culture expends too much time, energy and effort raising, praising and teasing our black children as to the dubious glories of professional sport.

All children need models to emulate—parents, relatives or friends. But when the child starts school, the influence of the parent is shared by teachers and classmates, by the lure of books, movies, ministers and newspapers, but most of all by television.

Which televised events have the greatest number of viewers? Sports—the Olympics, Super Bowl, Masters, World Series, pro basketball playoffs, Forest Hills.

So your child gets a massive dose of O.J. Simpson, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, Muhammad Ali, Reggie Jackson, Dr. J and Lee Elder and other pro athletes. It is only natural that your child will dream of being a pro athlete himself.

BUT CONSIDER these facts: For the major professional sports of hockey, football, basketball, baseball, golf, tennis and boxing, there are roughly only 3,170 major leage positions available (attributing 200 positions to golf, 200 to tennis and 100 to boxing), and the annual turnover is small.

We blacks are a subculture of about 28 million. Of the 13½ million men, 5 to 6 million are under 20 years of age, so your son has less than one chance in 1,000 of becoming a pro.

Less than one in a thousand. Would you bet your son's future on something with odds of 999 to 1 against you? I wouldn't.

Unless a child is exceptionally gifted, you should know by the time he enters high school whether he has a future as an athlete.

But what is more important is what happens if he doesn't graduate or doesn't get a college scholarship and doesn't have a viable alternative job career. Our high school dropout rate is several times the national average, which contributes to our unemployment rate of roughly twice the national average.

How do you fight the figures in the newspapers every day? Ali has earned more than $30 million boxing, O.J. signed for $2½ million, Dr. J for almost $3 million, Reggie Jackson for $2.8 million, Nate Archibald for $400,000 a year.

ALL THAT money recognition, attention, free cars, girls, jobs in the off-season—no wonder there is Pop Warner football, Little League baseball, National Junior Tennis League tennis, hockey practice at 5 a.m. and pickup basketball games in any center city at any hour.

There must be some way to assure that the 999 who try but don't make it to pro sports don't wind up on the street corners or in the unemployment lines.

Unfortunately, our most widely recognized role models are athletes and entertainers — "runnin' " and "jumpin' " and "singin' " and "dancin'."

While we are 60 per cent of the National Basketball Association, we are less than 4 per cent of the doctors and lawyers. While we are about 35 per cent of major league baseball we are less than 2 per cent of the engineers. While we are about 40 per cent of the National Football League, we are less than 11 per cent of construction workers such as carpenters and bricklayers.

Our greatest heroes of the century have been athletes—Jack Johnson, Joe Louis and Muhammad Ali. Racial and economic discrimination forced us to channel our energies into athletics and entertainment. These were the ways out of the ghetto, the ways to get that Cadillac, those regular shoes, that cashmere sport coat.

Shocker! USC bags Pacific-8 cage win

By LOEL SCHRADER

Bust Traveler III out of the barn. Tell the band to strike up Conquest. Bring along some of those wiggly-giggly blonde bombshells from the song-leading crew.

There's gonna be a party at Julie's.

USC still celebrating a Rose Bowl victory? Naw, those wins are too routine. This one's a biggie—a Trojan triumph in Pacific-8 Conference basketball.

As they like to say at Troy, the conquest goes on.

The one Saturday night at the L.A. Sports Arena, an 83-70 victory over highly favored Washington, ended a 21-game conference losing streak for the Trojans and touched off a mini-celebration (the announced crowd was 3,481) that flowed into Figueroa Ave.

"It may be the start of a dynasty," quipped USC coach Bob Boyd, who hasn't had many opportunities to toss out one-liners during a league drought that went back to late February of 1975, when California fell to the Trojans.

BOB DI PIAZZA
Cuisine wins praise from everywhere

WHENEVER I WRITE ABOUT di Piazza Italian restaurant, I seem to be exaggerating because I use so many superlatives.

But I'm not. I'm expressing my opinion in the strongest way I know, because I want everybody to understand what a great restaurant it is. Furthermore, I'm also expressing the opinion of myriads of others who constantly tell their friends and relatives how great di Piazza is. People who phone restaurant talk shows on L. A. radio stations are as enthusiastic about di Piazza as I am — and equally sincere.

Di Piazza has been a Belmont Shore favorite for over 25 years. It's at 4722 E. Second St. The moment you step through the tall narrow front door into the entry and glance into the main dining room, you are aware that you are in a different kind of Italian restaurant. I can't tell you in so many words why it has a different personality and atmosphere. It is more attractive than most Italian restaurants. It is also more de luxe, with crisp red linen tablecloths, white linen napkins and decorative touches in the best possible taste.

Those who haven't been to di Piazza may think — because of its reputation for excellence — that it's expensive, with dinners in the $7, $8, $9 and up range. But it's definitely NOT expensive. Wonderful dinners start at $3.50 and include hot cheese bread as well as choice of two of the following: small shrimp cocktail or minestrone (soup) or green salad. Let me state without fear of contradiction that di Piazza's cream-style Italian salad dressing is an incredibly marvelous taste experience. (No exaggeration!)

And how about this: To encourage newcomers to visit his restaurant, owner-host Bob di Piazza has a new special served nightly after 9. It's a splendid hamburger sandwich on a French roll with mushrooms. It comes with salad jardinere, with sliced vegetables and that fabulous house dressing. You also receive spaghetti with sauce and a glass of beer or wine. The price is surprisingly low — $2.50. Definitely a "best buy!"

Di Piazza (closed Tuesdays) serves dinner starting at 5 p.m. Another new special is called "Welcome Wednesday With Wine." Any party spending $7.50 on Wednesdays receives a complimentary, generous half-carafe of superb Sebastiani wine.

Bob, who opened the restaurant in 1952, features a scrumptious, 11-ounce N.Y. steak with mushrooms for $5.95, another top value. Ravioli with spaghetti is $3.50 while lasagna is $4.50 and veal scallopine is $4.95. Chicken cacciatore hunter's-style is $4.75. The unusual Dinner for Two Persons, $7.85, includes soup or salad, small cheese pizza; meatballs and spaghetti or ravioli and spaghetti; cheese bread and beverage.

MANY YEARS AGO IN FRANCE, an author who was also an epicure wrote: "The civilized eater does not eat primarily to fill the stomach; he leaves that immediate gratification to animals and the less civilized segment of the population."

Then he added these lines which express the pleasure of dining out unusually well: "The civilized eater, while nourishing himself, concentrates on the purer sensations that gratify the senses; the nuances of food which, more than satisfying hunger, feed memories."

The author could have had a restaurant such as King Arthur's Steak House in mind. King Arthur's has been a Long Beach dining tradition since the late 1950s. Throughout this area, vast numbers of people have memories of wonderful meals at King Arthur's, scenes of joyful conversation with good friends who shared with them the pleasures of glorious beef roasts, juicy steaks and delicacies from the sea.

Such memories stir them into returning again and again to King Arthur's, 5511 E. Spring St. near Bellflower Boulevard, because they know it has dedicated itself — years after year — to maintaining absolutely the highest standards of food quality. It was founded 20 years ago by John Apostle (who also owns the Golden Sails Inn complex) and his uncle, the late John Paulos. Now it is operated by co-owner Tony Apostle (John A.'s brother), a friendly, outspoken man who will not permit anything inferior in his kitchen. The meats are the choicest money can buy; the poultry and ocean delicacies are famed for their exceptional flavors.

My wife and I have been dining at King Arthur's since it opened and have vivid memories of its pampered, premium savory prime rib au jus, its top sirloins, southern-style fried chicken, broiled halibut, fisherman's haul variety and its shore dinner variety. No one ever leaves King Arthur's feeling hungry, because the dinners include the freshest, most delectable soup du jour and large tossed salad, a wonderful baked potato and hot bread. The dinners are $4.25 to over $8, most reasonable for such unusual quality.

Those who understand "the nuances" of fine food also know that King Arthur's is a memorable choice for luncheon. Chef Johnny Franco's prime rib au jus sandwich is food for the gods. People rave continually about the excellence of his $1.65 specials (soup with a sandwich) and the generous $1.95 specials which include entree, soup or salad and two vegetables. The restaurant (which has a huge parking lot in the rear) also features banquets and nightly entertainment.

'Actor' Mahan scores top saddle bronc ride

By GARY RAUSCH
Staff Writer

Rodeo is quietly undergoing a facelift. Suddenly one of the world's toughest sports is being invaded by Hollywood.

Atop the chutes at Saturday night's performance of the Long Beach Rodeo was tobbaco-chewing Sam Elliott of Once An Eagle fame. During today's 2 o'clock matinee, another actor, James Caan, will compete in team roping.

Amidst the Indian snakes dancers and cowchip throwers was Larry Mahan, who is also making a transition, but only in reverse. Rodeo to Hollywood.

Rodeo's all-everything for many, many years won so much hardware he finally had to buy another house. At least that what his fellow cowboys tell.

"I decided if I was going to be a serious actor I'd have to be closer to work. So I bought a home in Sherman Oaks," said Mahan of his move from Dallas.

He helped set up the Arena for its first rodeo and has appeared in half the previous 15th shows.

Close to work also brings him closer to Long Beach for this rodeo. Saturday was not one of his better showings, but he made the most of his three events.

Sandwiched in between 59 and 57-point efforts on poor bareback and bull riding stock respectively, Mahan tallied 70 points aboard Alamo to become the leader in saddle bronc to take the lead in that event going into today's finale.

"It's mostly the luck of the draw," he said. "I just drew some weak ducks."

Mahan had come off the Tales of the Unexpected set at 4:30 Saturday morning. He's had a number of other roles in Quinn-Martin shows and is relishing the life of an actor.

"It's a lot like the rodeo," he said, comparing his two careers. "Both are for competitive people. Whether you're in front of the cameras or on a bull, you've got to block out everything else in the world during that period and really get into your role."

Mahan believes it's that competitiveness that is drawing the Caans and Elliotts into the sport.

Many people believe Mahan is in the twilight of his riding career and expect retirement soon.

"I ask myself the same question," he said. "I've peaked in rodeo, accomplished every goal I set for myself. Now I wonder about my sanity at times — not to mention self preservation.

"You learn to forget about the element of danger, but sooner or later you have to face reality. You might be out of it before that happens."

It was a far better evening for steer wrestlers, four of whom leaped ahead of first-night leader Donnie Yandell (7.3 seconds). Harley May (4.1) led the pack.

Frank Ferreira Jr. and Sonny Cowden combined for the team roping lead with a 7.5-second effort. Cousins Leo and Reg Camarillo were quicker but broke the barrier early and were docked 10 seconds (16.9).

49ERS LOSE—

If the 49ers need shooting lessons, they need look no further than the Spartans, who offset a staggering 68-24 rebound deficit by making 29 of their 54 floor shots (54 per cent).

"You can give our defense part of the credit for their shooting," submitted Jones. "We've been terrible on defense lately."

It could be because the 49ers are so discouraged with the way things are going offensively.

Saturday night many of their season-high 89 shots were of the close-in variety that simply refused to go into the basket, misses that leave players talking to, and doubting themselves.

ONLY senior forward Lloyd McMillian has so far avoided the offensive plight of the 49ers.

McMillian, playing with a sore right shoulder and a bruised left wrist, played perhaps as well as he has all year against the Spartans, earning each of his game-high 23 points and adding 12 rebounds.

But only one other 49er — Larry Hudson with 10 points — reached double figures and that wasn't enough to offset San Jose's balanced scoring.

The Spartans, who have suddenly become a title factor with their fourth win in six games, got two-digit totals from Ken Mickey (17), Tracy Haynes (16), Rick Quinn (15) and Steve Sincock (13).

It was a pair of long-range bombs by Sincock, the former Millikan High and Long Beach City College star, and Mickey, that put San Jose ahead for good, 44-41, with 14:51 to play in the game.

LONG BEACH was within one, 50-49, at 10:51 remaining on two McMillian free throw when, to the delight of 4,211 onlookers, the roof of Independence High School fieldhouse fell in on the 49ers.

Baskets by Mickey and Haynes gave San Jose a five-point edge and then a technical on Jones was the spark in a 6-0 San Jose spurt that left the 49ers down, 60-49.

The 49ers were trying to inbound the ball in front of the Long Beach bench when Jones was hit with the two-shot foul.

"Mickey was holding Dale (Dillon) by the shirt and I told the official to make him let go," reported Jones. "He gave me a 'T' for that."

Sincock hit the two free throws and Mickey made an 18-footer to give San Jose four points out of the technical.

Long Beach rallied briefly behind freshman guard Donnie Martin, who scored six points in a four-minute span.

A DRIVING shot by Glen Gerke got Long Beach within four, 66-62, with 3:17 to go, but Mickey hit a driving shot to blunt that comeback.

Long Beach closed to five, 69-64, with 1:42 left on a Martin basket, but Mickey hit four free throws and Ron Ward two to keep the 49ers at arm's length.

Jones protested the game late in the first half after officials ruled a jump ball when San Jose shot two free throws on a personal foul and Long Beach got one on a technical foul when former LBCC forward Brian Lenzen checked into the game wearing an incorrect number.

It is unlikely the 49er protest will be upheld.

KINGS—

As a result, coach Bob Pulford's forces trail Pittsburgh by eight points. The Kings did maintain their eight-point bulge over the fourth-place Washington Caps, who tied the New York Islanders.

The NHL season is a long 80 games, and there are bound to be some contests that bore even the players, but even the Canadiens were aroused for their joust with L.A.

"We really had to work tonight to get back in the game, but nobody quit," Bowman said. "We have a lot of pride on this team and it showed tonight."

Don't mind Rogie Vachon if he's a little sore over seeing a victory escape him. The Canadiens leveled 48 shots at the little goaltender, including an undending barrage of 27 in the middle period.

"They just keep coming at you all night," Vachon sighed. "I thought we really were going to beat them for a change."

"It seems they have eight or nine guys on the ice," Vachon added. "They must be cheating.

"They have a lot of class. They kept it going when they were down 3-1," Rogie stressed. "They got 48 shots on the road and we didn't play that badly. If we play like this against other teams we can win. But we don't always do it," Vachon added.

Pulford was disappointed over the tie. "We didn't press them from the second period on. We tried to protect our two-goal lead and you can't do that against this team. We didn't forecheck them at all in the second period. We stood back and waited instead of going after them."

Montreal jumped off to a 1-0 lead when Guy Lafleur, the NHL's leading scorer, scored his 39th goal with only 1:25 elapsed.

Glenn Goldup pulled L.A. even when he collected his second goal in two games 1:03 later.

Dave Schultz, known more for his physical work than shooting prowess, put the Kings ahead, 2-1, with his seventh goal of the season with 48 seconds remaining in the first period.

Australia: the widest open spaces of all

RICH ROBERTS

Tune up your git-ar and strum a sorrowful song for two lonesome cowboys halfway around the world from home.

"I was gonna come over this year and Pete was gonna come over next year," says Ian Whirton, 21, who hoped to do some saddle bronc and bareback riding in the 15th Long Beach Indoor Rodeo under way at the Long Beach Arena.

"But we were at a rodeo and got to talking and decided, well, two of us are better than one."

Two Australians generally mean twice as much trouble. The other is Peter Terry, 20, who plans to specialize in saddle bronc and bulls "and probably do a bit of dogging."

They have been in the U.S. for three weeks and plan to stay a year, campaigning on the American rodeo circuit like a handful of countrymen before them.

"In Australia they write American rodeo up to be something really great. But there's horses over home that buck just as well . . . the cowboys ride just as well."

— Peter Terry.

"Jimmy Dix comes from West Australia," Ian points out, "but he's pretty well American now."

WHIRTON and Terry are from Queensland, Australia's northeast division that lies behind the Great Barrier Reef. Their families' ranches—or "stations," as Aussies call them—are well inland across the Great Dividing Range in the vast and fertile Great Artesian Basin.

Is everything "great" in Australia? Well, rodeo competition is not as lucrative, but the average spread of land puts Texas to shame.

"We're 55,000 acres," Ian says.

"We have 500 square miles," Pete says. "That's about 400,000 acres. The place next door is 1,200 square miles. But out in the territory there are some really big ones."

It's the kind of place a fellow could ride all day without seeing another human soul.

Ian laughs. "You can ride forever and not see anybody!

"We drove from Marysville down to here this week and there were lights all the way. You drive that distance at home, you won't see lights for 50 miles."

AUSTRALIA is about the same same size as the U.S., less Alaska, but has only about 5 per cent the population. Most of the people live in the major cities along the coast.

This is not a geography lesson but a way to illustrate the impact of America's so-called way of life on a couple of chaps from the outback. Ian mentions that even rodeo publicist Bob Borton, who has been hanging around long Beach all week, "was saying that it was getting to him . . . people everywhere. I feel pretty much the same way, and I'vnly three weeks.

"Once I spent two weeks laboringc, the capital city of Queensland. Traffic in the morning, traffic at night . . . 8 to 4 or 8 to 5, whatever the day was . . . you signed on, you signed off, you got paid at the end of the week.

"It's just not like ranch work. You put in a lot more hours out on the ranches, but there's pleasure in it. You get things done at your own pace. You're working for yourself."

BUT IT'S not all negative. Whirton and Terry are adjusting.

"I don't mind American beer," Ian says. "It's pretty light. The Australian stuff's got a fair punch . . . pretty gassy stuff. Knocks me about the next morning."

Peter says, "You wake up in the morning and feel like you ran into a brick wall."

Peter allows that American girls "are wilder than at home."

Except for the money, rodeo is about the same.

"In Australia," Peter says, "they write American rodeo up to be something really great. When we came over here we went to Denver. We'd sort of looked at Denver as being one of the greatest rodeo shows on earth. We expected to see really great bulls and really great horses.

"But there's horses over home that buck just as well . . . the cowboys ride just as well."

Ian adds, "It's just that you've got the publicity machine."

THEY DECIDED to come to the U.S. for the same reason.

"I couldn't see myself getting any better," Ian says, "competing once every two weeks, when I could get to it. The distance is too great between rodeos.

"When I was working from home I tried to get to nearly every rodeo I could last year. To do that I was averaging 800 miles roundtrip . . . leave home on a Friday night and get back Monday morning. It just wears you down. You can't run ranches, or stations as we call them, and rodeo, too."

Peter says, "There's not as much money in the cattle business over there. The export market is down. We were trying to work and rodeo and you just can't afford to."

Ian points out, "You Americans don't eat enough beef, that's the trouble!"

THEY LAUGH. Australians seem to laugh a lot, just for the joy of living.

"We've had a pretty good time," says Ian, who like Pete will be happy for the experience and content to return to the life of an Australian station hand when his rodeoin' is over.

"It's just that you've got the publicity machine."

— Ian Whirton.

"I was gonna be a civil engineer," Ian says with a smile. "but I wasn't bright enough. My brother was ropin' and doggin' and that's how I got started in rodeo. I got talked into gettin' on a horse, got bucked off and landed on my head. I've been at it since. It gets to you."

Pete says, "Rodeo and the cattle business sort of get into your blood."

They talk of their home thousands of miles away, where the grassy hills disappear into the forests and Mt. Isa touches the smogless sky.

Peter says, "There aren't any fences to speak of in Australia."

NFL threatens to bowl over college football

By WILLIAM N. WALLACE
New York Times Service

NEW YORK—The National Football League's decision to play its two conference championship games, which decide the Super Bowl teams, on Jan. 1 next year has caused concern among the sponsors of the four major college bowl games—Rose, Cotton, Orange and Sugar.

The latter's television ratings last season went down while pro football's went up.

So what's happening? Is pro football eating its young, meaning college football?

"That's what we don't want to happen," said Captain Joe T. Katz, the soon-to-retire executive director of New Orleans' Sugar Bowl.

The colleges hardly need the TV competition from the pros, competition which seems to grind a little harder each season.

The big-four college bowl games will be played on Jan. 2, a Monday and a holiday, next year with some of the lesser ones on Saturday, Dec. 31.

The bowls and the pros have shared the weekend before, five times since 1960, but never before has the economic impact seemed so dangerous for the promotors of the college game.

AFTER SIX hours of watching the NFL's best on Sunday, Jan. 1, 1978, how many millions will want to come back the next day for 10 hours of bowl games?

"It won't be the first time we've had TV problems with the pros," said Robert James, chairman of the NCAA's special events committee that sanctions bowl games and commissioner of the Middle Atlantic Conference. "If the turn of events continues to be harmful to us, we may have to seek some relief."

The latter is an euphemism for litigation, and James conceded that the NCAA and the bowl promotors had far less power than the networks and the professionals.

Captain Katz, a retired Naval officer, and the Sugar Bowl directors were dismayed at the numbers reported by the National Nielsen Ratings for their last game which involved Pittsburgh, No. 1 in the nation, and Georgia, the Southeastern champion.

The Sugar had a lower rating than the Cotton and the Orange, both of which had lesser attractions in Houston-Maryland and Colorado-Ohio State, respectively.

The Rose, with Michigan-USC, led as usual on New Year's with a 45 per cent share of the audience to 36 for the Cotton, 34 for the Orange, played at night, and 33 for the Sugar.

Compared to the year before, the four major bowl games lost 9.8 million "homes," the latter being the Nielsen term to relate the rating numbers.

"They are moving in on our bowl games."

— Bill Nicholas

That is a lot, and, if the trend continues, then the network fees for the rights to televise those games maybe adjusted downward, or at least never adjusted upward.

NBC pays $3 million for the Rose Bowl rights, $2 million for the Orange while the Cotton and Sugar cost CBS and ABC about $1 million each.

Most of the money trickles down to the athletic programs of the competiting colleges and others in their conferences, if they belong to one.

THE NFL did not deliberately schedule its conference title games to try to injure the college bowl television ratings. The point of view at NFL headquarters is that next season will be a "normal" one as to the calendar dates and because Jan. 1 falls on a Sunday that day belongs to the pros, as usual.

The colleges can have Saturday and Monday, Dec. 31 and Jan. 2.

The Rose Bowl, which sets the pattern because it is the oldest, richest and has the most prestige, chose Jan. 2 apparently without knowledge of what the NFL would do.

The subsequent NFL claim of Jan. 1 angered Bill Nicholas, chairman of the Tournament of Roses football committee.

"Now they are moving in on our bowl games," he said recently. "Pro football should not hurt us more than they have. I don't like what is happening."

Katz said, "It's a matter of self survival. We're competing to get the entertainment dollar to fight the pros."

Wilbur Evans, geral manager of the Cotton Bowl in Dallas, was less alarmed, although he definitely does not want the Cowboys in the National Conference championship game next New Year's.

"If that happens, we could be in trouble," he said. "We would lose space in the newspapers and on television."

FOR THE first time in years, the Cotton, Orange and Sugar Bowls games last New Year's did not fill their stadiums. Katz, taking Evans' point, said that should the New Orleans Saints ever become a 24-hour competitor with the Sugar Bowl, the latter would suffer tremendously.

Lost in the hustle after television's dollars is respect for church services. For decades the college bowl promoters avoided scheduling their contests on Sundays for fear of criticism from religious groups. The professionals have never been so sensitive, nor have the networks.

Talley: rueful thoughts of what might've been

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — This time a year ago, Archie Talley was the scoring sensation of college basketball.

He was averaging 41.2 points per game, was becoming the leading scorer in West Virginia Conference history, and was closing out his point-packed Salem College career by being selected Associated Press College Division Player of the Year.

But now, Talley is out of the limelight. Drafted by the New York Knicks in the ninth round of the NBA draft, he opted instead for a chance to perform for the Harlem Globetrotters.

UNEXPECTEDLY cut by the Trotters, he was encouraged to play in the semipro Eastern League, a sometimes proving ground for NBA hopefuls that is now comprised — generally — of has-beens and never-quite-will-be's.

Now he mostly sits on the bench of the Syracuse Centennials, works in a local high school as a hall monitor, and generally dreams of what might have been.

"A week or two after I got cut by the Globetrotters, I went to a Knicks-Washington game," recalls Talley. "A guy took me into the locker room after the game and introduced me to Knicks' Coach (Red) Holzman. Even though they had drafted me, he didn't recognize me.

"He asked, 'Hey, what happened to you? Why weren't you in camp?' I told him about the Globetrotters. Then I found out later that the Knicks already had a jersey with my name on it, and a number assigned to me...No. 36. It made me sick."

Talley had always said his dream — his life-long goal — was to be an NBA player, but the former Salem star was encouraged by his agent and friends last summer to try out for the Globetrotters.

The Knicks had an overabundance of guards, they told him. He had a better shot of doing what he does best—being a classy ballhandler, shooter, and showman — with the Trotters, they told him.

But the 6-foot-1 Seat Pleasant, Md., native now has only unhappy memories of basketball's traveling magicians.

"I was in shape and had a great tryout with the Globetrotters," Talley said. "If any man should have made that team, it should have been me. Instead they picked two seven-footers. I thought I was the kind of person they'd want. At camp, I did everything right."

TALLEY now recalls, with a tinge of bitterness how he was cut by the Trotters.

"I wish I'd had a film or tape of when Meadowlark Lemon let me go," Talley said. "He couldn't even look me in the eye. He didn't have any reason for cutting me.

"Maybe they thought I'd take the show over. That's the only thing I can figure."

Talley's only hope now is that he'll pick up the phone and somebody will want Archie Talley to play basketball for them again.

"I really think my next team will be the Knicks," Talley says. "I still kick myself every night because I know right now I could be with the Knicks.

"If I had just had a chance to show them what I could do. If I had just had a chance to play in front of the New York fans. I know they would have been on my side.

"I just know it."

Touts beware! Track security is on the alert

NEW YORK (AP) — Spencer Drayton was at the race track one day when a man walked up to him, said a few words and shook his hand.

"Listen," said thoroughbred racing's chief cop. "I know you're a tout. Why talk to me?"

"I got a couple of clients up in the back," replied the tout, "and I go up there and tell them you're giving me tips."

Drayton laughed when he told the story, but he finds nothing funny about touts in his job as head of the biggest security organization in sports, the Thoroughbred Racing Protective Bureau which he organized in 1946.

"I'm sure racetrack security is better," Drayton said. "All the others sports combined don't spend as much as racing does on security."

As for the type of people that can be found at a trace track, the former FBI agent said: "The usual class of people that go racing are the same as go to any other sport.

"Basically, it's a good sport and a clean sport," said Drayton. "The amount of illegal dollars is infinitesimal compared to the dollars a legislature gets."

He noted racing's constant vigil against bookmakers on the premises and added: "You go to Yankee Stadium and you'll meet every bookie you ever knew.

"We get general allegations that racing is funny, but no specific charges," said Drayton. "The specific charges come from within racing."

In 1976 there were 911 people fined, suspended or refused licenses in thoroughbred racing and when a person is barred by one Thoroughbred Racing Association member in the United States, he is barred by all 55.

The TRPB is concerned with every member of the racing community from grooms and hot walkers up to owners — "from 10,000 to 12,000 new people come into racing each year."

"As soon as they file an application, we check to see if they can afford to be in racing," Drayton said of owners. Another method of security, he said, is "We have people on the backstretch unknown to anybody, hopefully."

One big problem for Drayton's organization is drugs, and Drayton is more concerned with drugs in connection with the people in racing rather than with horses.

"It's a pretty serious problem " said Drayton. "It's the kids that have come on the track in the past 10 years.

"We are watching for patterns," he said of the fight against the human drug problem. "The thing that makes me mad, and we are doing the best we can, is that other sports aren't doing a thing about it."

In connection with horses being given illegal medications, Drayton said "that's almost nothing" and pointed out that in about 200,000 races last year, there were only 50 or 60 drug problems.

Asked about accusations that racing lies about the problem, he said, "We're the only sport that tests its contestants."

In New York, the 1-2 finishers plus a beaten favorite are given post-race tests and a horse also can be selected at random for testing. In the ninth race, which carries Big Triple betting, the 1-2-3 finishers and a beaten favorite are tested and in a stakes race, the first four finishers and a beaten favorite are tested.

Certain medications are legal to race horses on in certain states but there is no uniform national medication policy. Drayton doesn't think horses should race on medications.

Another problem Drayton faces is exotic betting — the picking of the finish of more than one horse in the race and a form of betting Drayton opposes.

"The big payoff is the thing that opens races up to illegal acivities," he said.

But he believes in the sport as much as ever.

"Gene Tunney (the former heavyweight champion) once told me, 'Burn them (race tracks) all down.'

"I told him 'Dempsey hit you once too often."

'The Soviet Connection'

Olympics TV: Big money, vodka, headaches

By DAVE ANDERSON
N.Y. Times Service

NEW YORK — More than three years before the opening ceremony, the Soviets and NBC have set the first record of the Moscow Olympics — the $85 million TV deal. And the Soviet Connection, a West German impresario named Lothar Bock, has collected a $1 million fee for NBC and been guaranteed undetermined additional income by that network for his influence in the TV negotiations.

Once again the Olympics have been exposed for what they are — big business, not sport. Except for the athletes. Cheers and a gold medal are the most an athlete can expect. But without the athletes, the Olympics would not exist.

Perhaps some day in the next century the idealists of the International Olympic Committee will realize that if nations and TV networks and influence-peddlers deal in millions during the Olympics, the athletes also deserve to make a buck. Perhaps some day the idealists will become realists and open the Olympics to professional athletes.

It won't happen in Moscow, of course, because there are no professional athletes as such there. Only professional politicians.

Lothar Bock had worked with the Russians before on cultural TV productions. He's lively and friendly, 38 years old with longish hair and a continental flair. He lives in Munich, drinks vodka and smokes West German cigarettes. When he comes to New York, he stays at the Plaza and goes to P.J. Clarke's for steak tartare and bacon cheeseburgers.

He's not usually around sports, but he delivered the Olympic TV contract to NBC four days after having been released from his CBS commitment when that network withdrew from the negotiations.

"We wonder about that," says one international TV executive. "We wonder if Lothar Bock had that planned all along."

Outsiders familiar with Soviet intrigue wonder if Bock was a double agent really working for the Russians in order to jack the price up.

"No," says another television network official. "We never had any reason to believe that Lothar was a double agent."

With his $1 million fee, Bock put such sports agents as Jerry Kapstein, Irwin Weiner and Bob Woolf to shame.

Forget about representing athletes, gentlemen. Start talking to people in Tehran, Iran, where the 1984 Olympics probably will be held. Deal with nations, not draft choices, as Bock dealt with the Soviet television ministers. His ability to deliver preceded him. Robert Wussler, now the president of the CBS television network but then its vice president in charge of sports, was in Moscow in 1975 when he was introduced to Bock.

"If you want the Olympic Games," the man making the introduction told Wussler, "here is the man."

Now Bock has emerged as the main character, the Soviet Connection, in a plot that Chekhov would have cherished — bugged hotel rooms, vodka parties, an "$80 Millon Cocktail Party" and even Soviet jokes.

No matter which Moscow hotel the American network executives stayed at, they believed their rooms were bugged. Every so often they would shout at the vents where they assumed the transmitters had been planted.

"Let me repeat that," one of them often yelled, "in case you missed it."

49ers can't find range, lose again

By JIM McCORMACK
Staff Writer

SAN JOSE — If Dwight Jones were a baseball manager, there would have been a fire in the Long Beach State dressing room after Saturday night's 75-66 loss to San Jose State.

The burning of bats, and sometimes uniforms, is a traditional, and desperate, cure for a slump.

Dwight Jones is desperate.

"We are in a slump," agreed Jones after the loss to the Spartans had dropped his 49er basketball team (5-2) into a first-place tie with San Diego State in a suddenly hectic Pacific Coast Athletic Association title chase.

"I'm at wit's end," continued Jones, "I'm just not sure what the answer is."

The 49er coach does, however, know what the problem is — a lack of confidence.

"It is that," reports Jones. "It's just like like a baseball player who quits hitting. He doesn't forget how to hit, or how to swing, he just loses his confidence and quits hitting."

The 49ers have quit hitting.

Shooting 51 per cent and unbeaten in five PCAA games when they left Long Beach Wednesday, the 49ers lost at Pacific, 73-69, Thursday by shooting 47 per cent from the field and 69 per cent from the foul line.

Saturday night their slump earned epidemic classification.

In losing back-to-back PCAA games for only the second time in the eight-year history of the league, Long Beach missed 53 of 80 shots from the floor and 15 of their 27 free throws.

"I really don't know what the solution is," admits Jones. "I suppose I could give them a day or two off and left them just forget it.

"But I'm not going to do that," continues Jones. "We're going to have practice today. We're going to work through this thing. We'll know Thursday, when we play San Jose in the Long Beach Arena, if it is the solution."

Canadiens break King hearts, 3-3

By AL LARSON

The Montreal Canadiens obviously have no intentions of letting anyone dethrone them as Stanley Cup champions without a tough battle.

Coach Scotty Bowman's skaters stormed back to gain a 3-3 tie with the Kings Saturday night and extend their unbeaten string to nine games (6-0-3) to the chagrin of goalie Rogie Vachon and a partisan sellout crowd of 16,005.

Trailing 3-1, Jacques Lemaire poked in his 23rd goal of the season and Guy Lapointe notched his 16th to spoil the Kings' hopes of scoring a rare win over the runaway division-leading Canadiens.

The one-point draw lifted Montreal's season record to 39-7-9 for 87 points, while the tie cost the Kings in their struggle to overhaul the second-place Pittsburgh Penguins who defeated Detroit, 3-1, earlier in the night.

Marques muzzled but guards go wild, 72-59

By GARY RAUSCH

Roy Hamilton and Jimmy Spillane aren't getting any respect, but they couldn't care less.

UCLA's backcourt riddled Washington State from the perimeter Saturday afternoon and carried the Bruins to a 72-59 Pacific-8 Conference basketball victory.

Hamilton and Spillane each hit eight of 10 shots from the foor while combining for 32 points and 15 assists.

Many of those scoring passes were to each other as WSU coach George Raveling used a clogging zone that all but paralyzed forward Marques Johnson, who registered his second lowest point total of the season with 10.

"We felt we could run on them," said Spillane, "and we knew their size underneath would handicap them when they started to tire."

With 6-11 senior Steve Puidokas at home in Pullman recovering from a sprained ankle, Raveling was forced to use 7-2 sophomore James Donaldson with 6-7 senior Greg Johnson and 6-11 freshman Stuart House.

"I don't think anybody respects our guards," Hamilton said with a grin. "Every team is concentrating on Marques because he's an all-America and they're giving Jimmy and myself the open shots. I'll be very happy if they keep leaving us unguarded."

The pattern was established early with the Bruins unable to get the ball inside to Johnson. With Spillane and Hamilton scoring eight of UCLA's first 14 points, the Bruins swept to a six-point advantage.

USC still celebrating a Rose Bowl victory? Naw, those wins are too routine. This one's a biggie—a Trojan triumph in Pacific-8 Conference basketball.

As they like to say at Troy, the conquest goes on.

The one Saturday night at the L.A. Sports Arena, an 83-70 victory over highly favored Washington, ended a 21-game conference losing streak for the Trojans and touched off a mini-celebration (the announced crowd was 3,481) that flowed into Figueroa Ave.

"It may be the start of a dynasty," quipped USC coach Bob Boyd, who hasn't had many opportunities to toss out one-liners during a league drought that went back to late February 1975, when California fell to the Trojans.

Ashe warns blacks on the 'dubious glories of sport'

ARTHUR ASHE
New York Times Service

NEW YORK—Since my sophomore year at UCLA, I have become convinced that we blacks spend too much time on the playing fields and too little time in the libraries.

Please don't think of this attitude as being pretentious just because I am a black, single, professional athlete.

I don't have children, but I can make observations. I strongly believe the black culture expends too much time, energy and effort raising, praising and teasing our black children as to the dubious glories of professional sport.

ARTHUR ASHE
UCLA grad speaks out

All children need models to emulate—parents, relatives or friends. But when the child starts school, the influence of the parent is shared by teachers and classmates, by the lure of books, movies, ministers and newspapers, but most of all by television.

Which televised events have the greatest number of viewers? Sports—the Olympics, Super Bowl, Masters, World Series, pro basketball playoffs, Forest Hills.

So your child gets a massive dose of O.J. Simpson, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, Muhammad Ali, Reggie Jackson, Dr. J and Lee Elder and other pro athletes. It is only natural that your child will dream of being a pro athlete himself.

BUT CONSIDER these facts: For the major professional sports of hockey, football, basketball, baseball, golf, tennis and boxing, there are roughly only 3,170 major leage positions available (attributing 200 positions to golf, 200 to tennis and 100 to boxing), and the annual turnover is small.

We blacks are a subculture of about 28 million. Of the 13½ million men, 5 to 6 million are under 20 years of age, so your son has less than one chance in 1,000 of becoming a pro.

Less than one in a thousand. Would you bet your son's future on something with odds of 999 to 1 against you? I wouldn't.

Unless a child is exceptionally gifted, you should know by the time he enters high school whether he has a future as an athlete.

But what is more important is what happens if he doesn't graduate or doesn't get a college scholarship and doesn't have a viable alternative job career. Our high school dropout rate is several times the national average, which contributes to our unemployment rate of roughly twice the national average.

How do you fight the figures in the newspapers every day? Ali has earned more than $30 million boxing, O.J. signed for $2½ million, Dr. J for almost $3 million, Reggie Jackson for $2.8 million, Nate Archibald for $400,000 a year.

ALL THAT money recognition, attention, free cars, girls, jobs in the off-season—no wonder there is Pop Warner football, Little League baseball, National Junior Tennis League tennis, hockey practice at 5 a.m. and pickup basketball games in any center city at any hour.

There must be some way to assure that the 999 who try but don't make it to pro sports don't wind up on the street corners or in the unemployment lines.

Unfortunately, our most widely recognized role models are athletes and entertainers — "runnin' " and "jumpin' " and "singin' " and "dancin'."

While we are 60 per cent of the National Basketball Association, we are less than 4 per cent of the doctors and lawyers. While we are about 35 per cent of major league baseball we are less than 2 per cent of the engineers. While we are about 40 per cent of the National Football League, we are less than 11 per cent of construction workers such as carpenters and bricklayers.

Our greatest heroes of the century have been athletes—Jack Johnson, Joe Louis and Muhammad Ali. Racial and economic discrimination forced us to channel our energies into athletics and entertainment. These were the ways out of the ghetto, the ways to get that Cadillac, those regular shoes, that cashmere sport coat.

Morgan to Steinbrenner: 'Got any money left?'

Baseball is still 'grand' old game, as in $$$

NEW YORK (AP)—A week ago, Joe Morgan was accepting the National League's Most Valuable Player award at a baseball banquet in New York.

George Steinbrenner, principal owner of the New York Yankees and one of the biggest spenders in the free-agent marketplace, was on the dais with the Reds' second baseman.

There was a visible shudder at the Cincinnati table when Morgan began his remarks by turning to Steinbrenner with a smile and saying, "Got any money left?"

Welcome to baseball's new order.

The inmates have taken over the asylum, freed of any involuntary long-term obligation to their teams because of their newly won free-agent rights.

Morgan is one of five regulars on the world champion Reds who have not signed for 1977.

If you think a lot of money was flying during he first free-agent auction, consider the prices talent like Morgan, Pete Rose, Dave Concepcion, Ken Griffey and George Foster might attract.

All are unsigned and all know that players not signing contracts for 1977 may become free agents. The same is true of players completing six years of major league service.

Two dozen major leaguers took advantage of that option last season, creating a new dimension for contract negotiations this winter. Both management and employes have found advantages to long-term deals.

"The players want them for their own protection and clubs want them to assure having a player around for a few years," said Bob Kennedy, the new vice president and general manager of the Chicago Cubs.

Bill Veeck, principal owner if the Chicago White Sox, explains.

"A young kid who comes up wants a multi-year contract because he doesn't know if he'll make the club," he said. "If a player has great potential, the club is interested in the multi-year contract."

"Signings are slower," said Kennedy. "What it boils down to is that it doesn't make any difference how a player played, whether he hit .140 or .340. He's basing his demands on what is being paid out to others."

The Cubs stayed out of the free-agent frenzy but may be involved in a spinoff, anyway. Third baseman Bill Madlock is staging a war of words over his proposed contract numbers and vows not to sign unless they are substantially improved.

"I've won two straight batting titles and I want what I deserve," said Madlock. "When you see what's going on, I don't think my demands are that big."

Another Cub, Bill Buckner, recently acquired from the Dodgers in exchange for Rick Monday, has demanded a multi-year contract with big numbers. Agents like Jerry Kapstein won't like this, but Buckner thinks he can do just as well negotiating for himself as he can when someone else does the talking for him.

"I don't see paying some guy $1,000 for a couple of hours of talk," he said. "I can do that myself."

George Brett of Kansas City, the American League batting champion, agrees with Buckner's theory. He dismissed Kapstein.

"I couldn't see paying him $100,000 for what he was going to do," said Brett. "I'm the one who goes out and plays. I ought to know what I'm worth."

Brett said he's close to signing a long-term contract. "I'm not going to have any money problems," he said. "We've agreed on the amount. We're just arguing on how I'll get it. Their first offer was more than I was asking for."

It all comes down to money, said Veeck. "A lot of people resent amounts being asked and discussed. If a guy is laid off work in Ohio because there is no gas, I think he resents a player asking for $200,000 a year and preparing to go to Florida."

The laws of supply and demand will affect the marketplace, according to Veeck.

"I think there will be a lot of free agents after this year and as a result the prices players are asking will go down," he said.

BILL BUCKNER
No agents need apply

"You can't pay a player twice as much as you did a year ago if he had the same statistics he had the previous year, just because of the free agent business. You cannot continue running up deficits. It's not realistic. Look what happened to the ABA and the WFL."

Veeck might have added the Oakland A's to that list of sports disaster areas. With a half-dozen of their best players gone via the free-agent route, the joke in Oakland this winter is that the team is changing its name to the Triple A's . . . baseball's designation for a minor league.

A's owner Charles O. Finley understands. Citing Steinbrenner, Ray Kroc of San Diego and "The Cowboy," Angel owner Gene Autry, Finley said, "If I was a player and knew there were suckers in the game like that, I'd play out my option, too."

There is disagreement on the value of long-term contracts.

"I think they're good for both the players and the club," said Al Campanis, the Dodgers' vice president for player personnel.

"It gives players security, knowing they'll have X number of dollars coming in for a long period of time, and they can play better. It gives the club solidarity. We spend a number of years grooming a player, suffering with his errors, and when he develops, we know he'll be around for awhile. Multi-year contracts make it much easier for us to plan ahead."

But Tal Smith, president and general manager of the Houston Astros, isn't sure the multiyear agreement is such a good idea.

"Normally, you would base the 1977 contract on the 1976 performance," he said. "But it doesn't work that way anymore.

"You have to base multiyear contracts on production, but how can you look ahead to 1978 or 1979? We don't want to incur an obligation for several years if a player is not producing—and a player doesn't want to be bound by a contract if he has a good year."

Houston slugger Bob Watson, already signed for 1977, believes the free agent mania will bottom out when the owners have had enough.

"The first time around with the free-agent draft, some of the players got big contracts," he said. "I feel the guys who play out their options from now on will find it tougher to get the big deals you've been reading about."

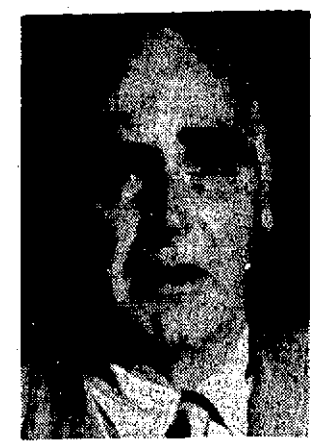

Will the long-term security kill incentive? Harry Dalton,

"There may be a tendency in certain players' cases for them to lose initiative because they're signed multi-year contracts."

— Harry Dalton

general manager of the Angels, thinks it could.

"I think it can be beneficial, depending on the player himself," said Dalton. "I think there may be a tendency in certain players' cases for them to lose initiative because they've signed multi-year contracts."

CHARLES FINLEY
Colleagues are 'suckers'

Dalton and the Angels were active in the free-agent marketplace, signing Bobby Grich, Joe Rudi and Don Baylor, all with long-term agreements.

Cleveland invested $2 million in pitcher Wayne Garland and GM Phil Seghi described the situation as "a player quake." Later, though, Seghi had second thoughts about the signings scene.

"I don't want the ownership put on a cross and crucifi," he said. "Escalation of salaries is to be expected, but rules don't call for legal extortion."

The first team to satisfy all its players with new contracts this winter was the Detroit Tigers. General manager Jim Campbell says a basic honesty between both sides helped hasten talks.

"I throw out a figure I feel is a fair one," he explained.

Campbell said he'd like to give players more money than he does but, "I don't think I've ever signed a player for what I wanted to give him. I'm too Scotch for that."

SOMEHOW, PARENTS must instill a desire for learning alongside the desire to be Walt Frazier. Why not start by sending black professional athletes into high schools to explain the facts of life?

I have often addressed high school audiences and my message is always the same. For every hour you spend on the athletic field, spend two in the library. Even if you make it as a pro athlete, your career will be over by the time you are 35. So you will need that diploma.

Have these pro athletes explain what happens if you break a leg, get a sore arm, have one bad year or don't make the cut for five or six tournaments. Explain to them the star system, wherein every O.J. earning millions there are six or seven others making $15,000 or $20,000 or $30,000 a year.

But don't just have Walt Frazier or O.J. or Abdul-Jabbar address your class. Invite a benchwarmer or a guy who didn't make it. Ask him if he sleeps every night. Ask him whether he was graduated. Ask him what he would do if he became disabled tomorrow. Ask him where his old high school athletic buddies are.

WE HAVE BEEN on the same roads—sports and entertainment—too long. We need to pull over, fill up at the library and speed away to Congress and the Supreme Court, the unions and the business world.

We need more Barbara Jordans, Andrew Youngs, union cardholders, Nikki Giovannis and Earl Graveses. Don't worry; we will still be able to sing and dance and run and jump better than anybody else.

I'll never forget how proud my grandmother was when I graduated from UCLA in 1966. Never mind the Davis Cup in 1968, 1969 and 1970. Never mind the Wimbledon title, Forest Hills, etc. To this day, she still doesn't know what those names mean.

What mattered to her was that of her more than 30 children and grandchildren, I was the first to be graduated from college, and a famous college at that. Somehow, that made up for all those floors she scrubbed all those years.

THE SOVIETS—

For important conversations, they talked in the hotel corridors. Some executives even developed code words that they practiced using in their New York offices. The morning and afternoon negotiating sessions were followed by dinner meetings in Moscow restaurants.

"Those guys," one network executive recalls, "were willing to go out to dinner every night to eat well."

And to drink well. At lunch, one vodka toast was mandatory. At dinner, several vodka toasts were mannerly. At one dinner party for 22 people, 30 bottles of vodka were consumed and not all of the 22 people were drinking.

"I've had hangovers," one network executive recalls, "but the next morning I felt like I'd been kicked in the head."

The night before the negotiations began in early December, the Russians threw what became known as "The $80 Million Cocktail Party" — that's where the three networks first discussed pooling their funds and resources. The pool plan was submitted to the Justice Department for antitrust approval, but when CBS withdrew, the plan was abandoned.

Suddenly, only NBC and ABC were in the hunt and then NBC hired Lothar Bock.

But now even the network executives at ABC and CBS laugh at the most memorable joke the Russians told on themselves. It seems that a comrade and his small son were traveling on a Moscow trolley when the boy had a question for his father.

"How wide," the boy asked, "is Red Square?"

"About 600 meters," his father answered.

"And how long," the boy said, "is Gorky Street?"

"About 6 kilometers," his father replied.

"And how high is the Soviet government?"

"That's a silly question," his father said. "There is no answer as to how high the Soviet government is."

Across the trolley, an old man looked up.

"Yes," the old man said, "there is an answer for your son's question as to how high the Soviet government is: I know I am 1.8 meters high. From that I know that the Soviet government must be 1.6 meters high because," and he touched his throat, "I have had it up to here."

Before the 1980 Olympics are over, NBC probably will have had the Soviet government up to here, but Lothar Bock will have had the last laugh.

GUARDS PROPEL UCLA—

At halftime the lead was 35-23. The guards showed 16 points and Johnson 3—all from the free throw line. His final totals weren't any better, three of 12 from the floor.

"Twelve shots," coach Gene Bartow muttered with a frown. "That's not enough for an all-America. Next week I'm definitely putting Marques on a wing."

The Bruin coach gazed at a sheet of final statistics.

"I think this tells the story," he said, pointing to UCLA's .518 shooting against WSU's .364. "On a bad shooting night we would have been fighting for our lives."

He credited Raveling with a defense that was effective.

"We battled Donaldson every way that we could," he said. "He was sure a lot more active than he was against USC Thursday night. I guess UCLA brings out the best in everyone."

Raveling would not discount that fact.

"The score doesn't indicate how close it was," he said. "We made a good accounting of ourselves and I'm super happy with the way we played. I bet we'll have something to say about who wins it (the conference championship)."

Raveling said he thought his defense was the only way to stop Johnson. "I'd rather have them taking 20-foot jumpshots than Marques dunking the ball," he reasoned.

The Cougars, for all their size and bulk, are woefully slow, and against a team of sprinters like UCLA that can be fatal.

House, for all his advance billing, was one large disappointment (1-of-8 shooting, 2 points, 4 rebounds). Donaldson, despite his size, seldom shot further away than a foot or two from the offensive basket and could manage only four rebounds at the other end of the floor.

WSU's only weapon became guard Harold Rhodes, a deadly shooter, who connected on 11 of 24 for 26 points. At 6-2, he also led the Cougars in rebounds with eight.

"Even with Puidokas in there, I think the outcome would have been about the same," said Bartow, "because they couldn't play Donaldson at the same time. They can't play all three, can they?"

Raveling might try it. He'd do anything to get some fanfare.

"One of these days someone will have to give us a little credit," he moaned. "Each year we keep getting better and better. We come into town 15-4 and there isn't a word in the papers about WSU."

Better luck next week, coach.

Actor' Mahan scores top saddle bronc ride

By GARY RAUSCH
Staff Writer

Rodeo is quietly undergoing a facelift. Suddenly one of the world's roughest sports is being invaded by Hollywood.

Atop the chutes at Saturday night's performance of the Long Beach Rodeo was tobbaco-chewing Sam Elliott of Once An Eagle fame. During today's 2 o'clock matinee, another actor, James Caan, will compete in team roping.

Amidst the Indian snakes dancers and cowchip throwers was Larry Mahan, who is also making a transition, but only in reverse. Rodeo to Hollywood.

Rodeo's all-everything for many, many years won so much hardware he finally had to buy another house. At least that what his fellow cowboys tell.

"I decided if I was going to be a serious actor I'd have to be closer to work. So I bought a home in Sherman Oaks," said Mahan of his move from Dallas.

He helped set up the Arena for its first rodeo and has appeared in half the previous 15th shows.

Close to work also brings him closer to Long Beach for this rodeo. Saturday was not one of his better showings, but he made the most of his three events.

Sandwiched in between 59 and 57-point efforts on poor bareback and bull riding stock respectively, Mahan tallied 70 points aboard Alamo to become the leader in saddle bronc to take the lead in that event going into today's finale.

"It's mostly the luck of the draw," he said. "I just drew some weak ducks."

Mahan had come off the Tales of the Unexpected set at 4:30 Saturday morning. He's had a number of other roles in Quinn-Martin shows and is relishing the life of an actor.

"It's a lot like the rodeo," he said, comparing his two careers. "Both are for competitive people. Whether you're in front of the cameras or on a bull, you've got to block out everything else in the world during that period and really get into your role."

Mahan believes it's that competitiveness that is drawing the Caans and Elliotts into the sport.

Many people believe Mahan is in the twilight of his riding career and expect retirement soon.

"I ask myself the same question," he said. "I've peaked in rodeo, accomplished every goal I set for myself. Now I wonder about my sanity at times — not to mention self preservation.

"You learn to forget about the element of danger, but sooner or later you have to face reality. You might be out of it before that happens."

It was a far better evening for steer wrestlers, four of whom leaped ahead of first-night leader Donnie Yandell (7.3 seconds). Harley May (4.1) led the pack.

Frank Ferreira Jr. and Sonny Cowden combined for the team roping lead with a 7.5-second effort. Cousins Leo and Reg Camarillo were quicker but broke the barrier early and were docked 10 seconds (16.9).

Northridge skater new queen of ice

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Linda Fratianne performed a pair of demanding triple jumps in the first 40 seconds of her routine and went on to win the senior women's title at the U.S. Figure Skating Championships Saturday night.

49ERS LOSE—

If the 49ers need shooting lessons, they need look no further than the Spartans, who offset a staggering 68-24 rebound deficit by making 29 of their 54 floor shots (54 per cent).

"You can give our defense part of the credit for their shooting," submitted Jones. "We've been terrible on defense lately."

It could be because the 49ers are so discouraged with the way things are going offensively.

Saturday night many of their season-high 80 shots were of the close-in variety that simply refused to go into the basket, misses that leave players talking to, and doubting themselves.

ONLY senior forward Lloyd McMillian has so far avoided the offensive plight of the 49ers.

McMillian, playing with a sore right shoulder and a bruised left wrist, played perhaps as well as he has all year against the Spartans, earning each of his game-high 23 points and adding 12 rebounds.

But only one other 49er — Larry Hudson with 10 points — reached double figures and that wasn't enough to offset San Jose's balanced scoring.

The Spartans, who have suddenly become a title factor with their fourth win in six games, got two-digit totals from Ken Mickey (17), Tracy Haynes (16), Rick Quinn (15) and Steve Sincock (13).

It was a pair of long-range bombs by Sincock, the former Millikan High and Long Beach City College star, and Mickey, that put San Jose ahead for good, 44-41, with 14:51 to play in the game.

LONG BEACH was within one, 50-49, at 10:51 remaining on two McMillian free throw when, to the delight of 4,211 onlookers, the roof of Independence High School fieldhouse fell in on the 49ers.

Baskets by Mickey and Haynes gave San Jose a five-point edge and then a technical on Jones was the spark in a 6-0 San Jose spurt that left the 49ers down, 60-49.

The 49ers were trying to inbound the ball in front of the Long Beach bench when Jones was hit with the two-shot foul.

"Mickey was holding Dale (Dillon) by the shirt and I told the official to make him let go," reported Jones. "He gave me a 'T' for that."

Sincock hit the two free throws and Mickey made an 18-footer to give San Jose four points out of the technical.

Long Beach rallied briefly behind freshman guard Donnie Martin, who scored six points in a four-minute span.

A DRIVING shot by Glen Gerke got Long Beach within four, 66-62, with 3:17 to go, but Mickey hit a driving shot to blunt that comeback.

Long Beach closed to five, 69-64, with 1:42 left on a Martin basket, but Mickey hit four free throws and Ron Ward two to keep the 49ers at arm's length.

Jones protested the game late in the first half after officials ruled a jump ball when San Jose shot two free throws on a personal foul and Long Beach got one on a technical foul when former LBCC forward Brian Lenzen checked into the game wearing an incorrect number.

It is unlikely the 49er protest will be upheld.

KINGS—

As a result, coach Bob Pulford's forces trail Pittsburgh by eight points. The Kings did maintain their eight-point bulge over the fourth-place Washington Caps, who tied the New York Islanders.

The NHL season is a long 80 games, and there are bound to be some contests that bore even the players, but even the Canadiens were aroused for their joust with L.A.

"We really had to work tonight to get back in the game, but nobody quit," Bowman said. "We have a lot of pride on this team and it showed tonight."

Don't mind Rogie Vachon if he's a little sore over seeing a victory escape him. The Canadiens leveled 48 shots at the little goaltender, including an undending barrage of 27 in the middle period.

"They just keep coming at you all night," Vachon sighed. "I thought we really were going to beat them for a change."

"It seems they have eight or nine guys on the ice," Vachon added. "They must be cheating.

"They have a lot of class. They kept it going when they were down 3-1," Rogie stressed. "They got 48 shots on the road and we didn't play that badly. If we play like this against other teams we can win. But we don't always do it," Vachon added.

Pulford was disappointed over the tie. "We didn't press them from the second period on. We tried to protect our two-goal lead and you can't do that against this team. We didn't forecheck them at all in the second period. We stood back and waited instead of going after them."

Montreal jumped off to a 1-0 lead when Guy Lafleur, the NHL's leading scorer, scored his 39th goal with only 1:25 elapsed.

Glenn Goldup pulled L.A. even when he collected his second goal in two games 1:03 later.

Dave Schultz, known more for his physical work than shooting prowess, put the Kings ahead, 2-1, with his seventh goal of the season with 48 seconds remaining in the first period.

Australia: the widest open spaces of all

By RICH ROBERTS

Tune up your git-ar and strum a sorrowful song for two lonesome cowboys halfway around the world from home.

"I was gonna come over this year and Pete was gonna come over next year," says Ian Whirton, 21, who hoped to do some saddle bronc and bareback riding in the 15th Long Beach Indoor Rodeo under way at the Long Beach Arena.

"But we were at a rodeo and got to talking and decided, well, two of us are better than one."

Two Australians generally mean twice as much trouble. The other is Peter Terry, 20, who plans to specialize in saddle bronc and bulls "and probably do a bit of dogging."

They have been in the U.S. for three weeks and plan to stay a year, campaigning on the American rodeo circuit like a handful of countrymen before them.

"In Australia they write American rodeo up to be something really great. But there's horses over home that buck just as well . ... the cowboys ride just as well."

— Peter Terry.

"Jimmy Dix comes from West Australia," Ian points out, "but he's pretty well American now."

WHIRTON and Terry are from Queensland, Australia's northeast division that lies behind the Great Barrier Reef. Their families' ranches—or "stations," as Aussies call them—are well inland across the Great Dividing Range in the vast and fertile Great Artesian Basin.

Is everything "great" in Australia? Well, rodeo competition is not as lucrative, but the average spread of land puts Texas to shame.

"We're 55,000 acres," Ian says.

"We have 500 square miles," Pete says. "That's about 400,000 acres. The place next door is 1,200 square miles. But out in the territory there are some really big ones."

It's the kind of place a fellow could ride all day without seeing another human soul.

Ian laughs. "You can ride forever and not see anybody!

"We drove from Marysville down to here this week and there were lights all the way. You drive that distance at home, you won't see lights for 50 miles."

AUSTRALIA is about the same same size as the U.S., less Alaska, but has only about 5 per cent the population. Most of the people live in the major cities along the coast.

This is not a geography lesson but a way to illustrate the impact of America's so-called way of life on a couple of chaps from the outback. Ian mentions that even rodeo publicist Bob Borton, who has been hanging around long Beach all week, "was saying that it was getting to him . . . people everywhere. I feel pretty much the same way, and I'vnly three weeks.

"Once I spent two weeks laboringc, the capital city of Queensland. Traffic in the morning, traffic at night . . . 8 to 4 or 8 to 5, whatever the day was . . . you signed on, you signed off, you got paid at the end of the week.

"It's just not like ranch work. You put in a lot more hours out on the ranches, but there's pleasure in it. You get things done at your own pace. You're working for yourself."

BUT IT'S not all negative. Whirton and Terry are adjusting.

"I don't mind American beer," Ian says. "It's pretty light. The Australian stuff's got a fair punch . . . pretty gassy stuff. Knocks me about the next morning."

Peter says, "You wake up in the morning and feel like you ran into a brick wall."

Peter allows that American girls "are wilder than at home."

Except for the money, rodeo is about the same.

"In Australia," Peter says, "they write American rodeo up to be something really great. When we came over here we went to Denver. We'd sort of looked at Denver as being one of the greatest rodeo shows on earth. We expected to see really great bulls and really great horses.

"But there's horses over home that buck just as well . . . the cowboys ride just as well."

Ian adds, "It's just that you've got the publicity machine."

THEY DECIDED to come to the U.S. for the same reason.

"I couldn't see myself getting any better," Ian says, "competing once every two weeks, when I could get to it. The distance is too great between rodeos.

"When I was working from home I tried to get to nearly every rodeo I could last year. To do that I was averaging 800 miles roundtrip . . . leave home on a Friday night and get back Monday morning. It just wears you down. You can't run ranches, or stations as we call them, and rodeo, too."

Peter says, "There's not as much money in the cattle business over there. The export market is down. We were trying to work and rodeo and you just can't afford to."

Ian points out, "You Americans don't eat enough beef, that's the trouble!"

THEY LAUGH. Australians seem to laugh a lot, just for the joy of living.

"We've had a pretty good time," says Ian, who like Pete will be happy for the experience and content to return to the life of an Australian station hand when his rodeoin' is over.

"It's just that you've got the publicity machine."

— Ian Whirton.

NFL threatens to bowl over college football

By WILLIAM N. WALLACE
New York Times Service

NEW YORK—The National Football League's decision to play its two conference championship games, which decide the Super Bowl teams, on Jan. 1 next year has caused concern among the sponsors of the four major college bowl games—Rose, Cotton, Orange and Sugar.

The latter's television ratings last season went down while pro football's went up.

So what's happening? Is pro football eating its young, meaning college football?

"That's what we don't want to happen," said Captain Joe T. Katz, the soon-to-retire executive director of New Orleans' Sugar Bowl.

The colleges hardly need the TV competition from the pros, competition which seems to grind a little harder each season.

The big-four college bowl games will be played on Jan. 2, a Monday and a holiday, next year with some of the lesser ones on Saturday, Dec. 31.

The bowls and the pros have shared the weekend before, five times since 1960, but never before has the economic impact seemed so dangerous for the promotors of the college game.

AFTER SIX hours of watching the NFL's best on Sunday, Jan. 1, 1978, how many millions will want to come back the next day for 10 hours of bowl games?

"It won't be the first time we've had TV problems with the pros," said Robert James, chairman of the NCAA's special events committee that sanctions bowl games and commissioner of the Middle Atlantic Conference. "If the turn of events continues to be harmful to us, we may have to seek some relief."

The latter is an euphemism for litigation, and James conceded that the NCAA and the bowl promotors had far less power than the networks and the professionals.

Captain Katz, a retired Naval officer, and the Sugar Bowl directors were dismayed at the numbers reported by the National Nielsen Ratings for their last game which involved Pittsburgh, No. 1 in the nation, and Georgia, the Southeastern champion.

The Sugar had a lower rating than the Cotton and the Orange, both of which had lesser attractions in Houston-Maryland and Colorado-Ohio State, respectively.

The Rose, with Michigan-USC, led as usual on New Year's with a 45 per cent share of the audience to 36 for the Cotton, 34 for the Orange, played at night, and 33 for the Sugar.

Compared to the year before, the four major bowl games lost 9.8 million "homes," the latter being the Nielsen term to relate the rating numbers.

"They are moving in on our bowl games."

— Bill Nicholas

That is a lot, and, if the trend continues, then the network fees for the rights to televise those games maybe adjusted downward, or at least never adjusted upward.

NBC pays $3 million for the Rose Bowl rights, $2 million for the Orange while the Cotton and Sugar cost CBS and ABC about $1 million each.

Most of the money trickles down to the athletic programs of the competiting colleges and others in their conferences, if they belong to one.

THE NFL did not deliberately schedule its conference title games to try to injure the college bowl television ratings. The point of view at NFL headquarters is that next season will be a "normal" one as to the calendar dates and because Jan. 1 falls on a Sunday that day belongs to the pros, as usual.

The colleges can have Saturday and Monday, Dec. 31 and Jan. 2.

The Rose Bowl, which sets the pattern because it is the oldest, richest and has the most prestige, chose Jan. 2 apparently without knowledge of what the NFL would do.

The subsequent NFL claim of Jan. 1 angered Bill Nicholas, chairman of the Tournament of Roses football committee.

"Now they are moving in on our bowl games," he said recently. "Pro football should not hurt us more than they have. I don't like what is happening."

Katz said, "It's a matter of self survival. We're competing to get the entertainment dollar to fight the pros."

Wilbur Evans, geral manager of the Cotton Bowl in Dallas, was less alarmed, although he definitely does not want the Cowboys in the National Conference championship game next New Year's.

"If that happens, we could be in trouble," he said. "We would lose space in the newspapers and on television."

FOR THE first time in years, the Cotton, Orange and Sugar Bowls games last New Year's did not fill their stadiums. Katz, taking Evans' point, said that should the New Orleans Saints ever become a 24-hour competitor with the Sugar Bowl, the latter would suffer tremendously.

Lost in the hustle after television's dollars is respect for church services. For decades the college bowl promoters avoided scheduling their contests on Sundays for fear of criticism from religious groups. The professionals have never been so sensitive, nor have the networks.

Talley: rueful thoughts of what might've been

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — This time a year ago, Archie Talley was the scoring sensation of college basketball.

He was averaging 41.2 points per game, was becoming the leading scorer in West Virginia Conference history, and was closing out his point-packed Salem College career by being selected Associated Press College Division Player of the Year.

But now, Talley is out of the limelight. Drafted by the New York Knicks in the ninth round of the NBA draft, he opted instead for a chance to perform for the Harlem Globetrotters.

UNEXPECTEDLY cut by the Trotters, he was encouraged to play in the semipro Eastern League, a sometimes proving ground for NBA hopefuls that is now comprised — generally — of has-beens and never-quite-will-be's.

Now he mostly sits on the bench of the Syracuse Centennials, works in a local high school as a hall monitor, and generally dreams of what might have been.

"A week or two after I got cut by the Globetrotters, I went to a Knicks-Washington game," recalls Talley. "A guy took me into the locker room after the game and introduced me to Knicks' Coach (Red) Holzman. Even though they had drafted me, he didn't recognize me.

"He asked, 'Hey, what happened to you? Why weren't you in camp?' I told him about the Globetrotters. Then I found out later that the Knicks already had a jersey with my name on it, and a number assigned to me...No. 36. It made me sick."

Talley had always said his dream — his life-long goal — was to be an NBA player, but the former Salem star was encouraged by his agent and friends last summer to try out for the Globetrotters.

The Knicks had an overabundance of guards, they told him. He had a better shot of doing what he does best—being a classy ballhandler, shooter, and showman — with the Trotters, they told him.

But the 6-foot-1 Seat Pleasant, Md., native now has only unhappy memories of basketball's traveling magicians.

"I was in shape and had a great tryout with the Globetrotters," Talley said. "If any man should have made that team, it should have been me. Instead they picked two seven-footers. I thought I was the kind of person they'd want. At camp, I did everything right."

TALLEY now recalls, with a tinge of bitterness how he was cut by the Trotters.

"I wish I'd had a film or tape of when Meadowlark Lemon let me go," Talley said. "He couldn't even look me in the eye. He didn't have any reason for cutting me.

"Maybe they thought I'd take the show over. That's the only thing I can figure."

Talley's only hope now is that he'll pick up the phone and somebody will want Archie Talley to play basketball for them again.

"I really think my next team will be the Knicks," Talley says. "I still kick myself every night because I know right now I could be with the Knicks.

"If I had just had a chance to show them what I could do. If I had just had a chance to play in front of the New York fans. I know they would have been on my side.

"I just know it."

Touts beware! Track security is on the alert

NEW YORK (AP) — Spencer Drayton was at the race track one day when a man walked up to him, said a few words and shook his hand.

"Listen," said thoroughbred racing's chief cop. "I know you're a tout. Why talk to me?"

"I got a couple of clients up in the back," replied the tout, "and I go up there and tell them you're giving me tips."

Drayton laughed when he told the story, but he finds nothing funny about touts in his job as head of the biggest security organization in sports, the Thoroughbred Racing Protective Bureau which he organized in 1946.

"I'm sure racetrack security is better," Drayton said. "All the others sports combined don't spend as much as racing does on security."

As for the type of people that can be found at a trace track, the former FBI agent said: "The usual class of people that go racing are the same as go to any other sport.

"Basically, it's a good sport and a clean sport," said Drayton. "The amount of illegal dollars is infinitesimal compared to the dollars a legislature gets."

He noted racing's constant vigil against bookmakers on the premises and added: "You go to Yankee Stadium and you'll meet every bookie you ever knew.

"We get general allegations that racing is funny, but no specific charges," said Drayton. "The specific charges come from within racing."

In 1976 there were 911 people fined, suspended or refused licenses in thoroughbred racing and when a person is barred by one Thoroughbred Racing Association member in the United States, he is barred by all 55.

The TRPB is concerned with every member of the racing community from grooms and hot walkers up to owners — "from 10,000 to 12,000 new people come into racing each year."

"As soon as they file an application, we check to see if they can afford to be in racing," Drayton said of owners. Another method of security, he said, is "We have people on the backstretch unknown to anybody, hopefully."

One big problem for Drayton's organization is drugs, and Drayton is more concerned with drugs in connection with the people in racing rather than with horses.

"It's a pretty serious problem," said Drayton. "It's the kids that have come on the track in the past 10 years.

"We are watching for patterns," he said of the fight against the human drug problem. "The thing that makes me mad, and we are doing the best we can, is that other sports aren't doing a thing about it."

In connection with horses being given illegal medications, Drayton said "that's almost nothing" and pointed out that in about 200,000 races last year, there were only 50 or 60 drug problems.

Asked about accusations that racing lies about the problem, he said, "We're the only sport that tests its contestants."

In New York, the 1-2 finishers plus a beaten favorite are given post-race tests and a horse also can be selected at random for testing. In the ninth race, which carries Big Triple betting, the 1-2-3 finishers and a beaten favorite are tested and in a stakes race, the first four finishers and a beaten favorite are tested.

Certain medications are legal to race horses on in certain states but there is no uniform national medication policy. Drayton doesn't think horses should race on medications.

Another problem Drayton faces is exotic betting — the picking of the finish of more than one horse in the race and a form of betting Drayton opposes.

"The big payoff is the thing that opens races up to illegal acivities," he said.

But he believes in the sport as much as ever.

"Gene Tunney (the former heavyweight champion) once told me, 'Burn them (race tracks) all down.'

"I told him 'Dempsey hit you once too often."

January, Lietzke all even at Hawaii

HONOLULU (AP) — Easy-going old pro Don January, who once appeared to have a lock on the lead, blew it, then salvaged a tie for the top with a birdie on the last hole — after television coverage ended — had some sage observations concerning today's final round of the $240,000 Hawaiian Open Golf Tournament.

"There're 18 holes left and a half dozen who can win," said the 47-year-old veteran who regained a tie for the top with Bruce Lietzke with a two-putt birdie on the 18th hole of the third round Saturday.

"Unless somebody jumps off to a big start, the last round usually comes down to the last five or six holes. And then it comes down to people.

"It comes down to who shoots at it, who shoots at it good, and who makes it.

"If I get in position to win, and can win, fine. If not, I'll just go home on Monday and forget about it."

THE HARD-HITTING Lietzke, who acquired the first title of his pro career with a playoff victory over Gene Littler at Tucson earlier this year, looked at the big board showing the standing of the leaders and observed:

"I know how tough Don January is. I can't say I'm as confident as I was in Tucson."

January once had a two-stroke lead but blew it with a double bogey six on the 14th hole and finished with a 69 and a tie with Lietzke at 204, 12-under-par on the 7,234 yard Waialae Country Club course. Lietzke had a 67.

Lanny Wadkins, once one of the game's most promising young stars but mired in a deep slump since surgery more than two years ago, ripped out a six-under-par 66 and was within a single stroke of the lead at 205.

Japanese star Takashi Murakami and Fuzzy Zoeller are next at 207. Zoeller had a 70 while Murakami had to struggle to a 73, one-over-par in occasionally gusty Trade Winds.

Cerritos is 5-2 and in second place, one game behind Fullerton. Those two tangle at Cerritos Wednesday night.

Chavez, a 6-8 sophomore, hit 11-of-17 field goal attempts and converted all 10 of his free throws. He also grabbed 10 rebounds.

USC BEATS HUSKIES—

The defeat was a crusher for Washington, which came into the Southland on Thursday tied for first place with UCLA and gathering steam with 13 wins in 14 games.

But after losses to the Bruins and Trojans, coach Marv Harshman assessed the trip as a disaster.

"Our outlook in the conference is very gloomy unless we can win all of our remaining league games," said Harshman. "The Trojans deserved to win. They outhustled us, outrebounded us and outshot us."

With12 minutes left, the Huskies appeared to be on the way to their fifth Pacific-8 victory in seven games. Although they were playing without injured guard Mike Neil, the Huskies held a six-point edge at 52-46 and no one was in foul trouble.

But Boyd, perhaps in desperation, upset the Huskies' tempo by going to a half-court trap defense and USC reeled off 10 consecutive points for a 58-52 lead.

Washington seemed to lose its poise as Marv Safford and Greg White bombed away successfully for USC.

But the play that ignited the Trojans and the crowd was turned in by senior guard Casey Jones. Flying downcourt with a Washington pursuer harassing him from close range, Jones tossed up an off-balance shot that caromed off the glass and into the basket.

The Huskies were never the same.

Oh, they cut USC's lead to four on three occasions, but the Trojans began pulling steadily away with 6:30 remaining and their margin reached 15 during the final minute.

"I'm elated," said Boyd. "I think our team has been playing well. One thing I think is important—with the adversity we've faced, we've maintained ourselves quite well."

BOYD agreed that the half-court trap defense did in the Huskies.

"Stan Walker (freshman forward) was shooting so well from the perimeter for Washington that we had to do something," said the Trojan coach. "I wouldn't say Washington panicked, but our defense seemed to confuse some of their players."

An important factor in USC's win seemed to be the 40-minute presence of Safford, who complained publicly three weeks ago that he didn't like being taken out of games every time he made a mistake.

The senior guard connected on 10 of 17 shots, none closer than 20 feet, and was the game's leading scorer with 25 points. White had 23 and Paul Henderson 19, including 9 of 10 at the free throw line.

USC's 2-3 zone defense made it difficult for Washington's 7-foot center, James Edwards, to get the ball, but he managed 24 points, 10 on free throws.

When it was all over, the Trojan band paraded out of the arena and fans stood at courtside, grinning and congratulating each other.

After all, a Pac-8 victory doesn't happen every day. Or year.

Morgan to Steinbrenner: 'Got any money left?'

Baseball is still 'grand' old game, as in $$$

NEW YORK (AP)—A week ago, Joe Morgan was accepting the National League's Most Valuable Player award at a baseball banquet in New York.

George Steinbrenner, principal owner of the New York Yankees and one of the biggest spenders in the free-agent marketplace, was on the dais with the Reds' second baseman.

There was a visible shudder at the Cincinnati table when Morgan began his remarks by turning to Steinbrenner with a smile and saying, "Got any money left?"

Welcome to baseball's new order.

The inmates have taken over the asylum, freed of any involuntary long-term obligation to their teams because of their newly won free-agent rights.

Morgan is one of five regulars on the world champion Reds who have not signed for 1977.

If you think a lot of money was flying during he first free-agent auction, consider the prices talent like Morgan, Pete Rose, Dave Concepcion, Ken Griffey and George Foster might attract.

All are unsigned and all know that players not signing contracts for 1977 may become free agents. The same is true of players completing six years of major league service.

Two dozen major leaguers took advantage of that option last season, creating a new dimension for contract negotiations this winter. Both management and employes have found advantages to long-term deals.

"The players want them for their own protection and clubs want them to assure having a player around for a few years," said Bob Kennedy, the new vice president and general manager of the Chicago Cubs.

Bill Veeck, principal owner if the Chicago White Sox, explains.

"A young kid who comes up wants a multi-year contract because he doesn't know if he'll make the club," he said. "If a player has great potential, the club is interested in the multi-year contract."

"Signings are slower," said Kennedy. "What it boils down to is that it doesn't make any difference how a player played, whether he hit .140 or .340. He's basing his demands on what is being paid out to others."

The Cubs stayed out of the free-agent frenzy but may be involved in a spinoff, anyway. Third baseman Bill Madlock is staging a war of words over his proposed contract numbers and vows not to sign unless they are substantially improved.

"I've won two straight batting titles and I want what I deserve," said Madlock. "When you see what's going on, I don't think my demands are that big."

Another Cub, Bill Buckner, recently acquired from the Dodgers in exchange for Rick Monday, has demanded a multi-year contract with big numbers. Agents like Jerry Kapstein won't like this, but Buckner thinks he can do just as well negotiating for himself as he can when someone else does the talking for him.

"I don't see paying some guy $1,000 for a couple of hours of talk," he said. "I can do that myself."

George Brett of Kansas City, the American League batting champion, agrees with Buckner's theory. He dismissed Kapstein.

"I couldn't see paying him $100,000 for what he was going to do," said Brett. "I'm the one who goes out and plays. I ought to know what I'm worth."

Brett said he's close to signing a long-term contract. "I'm not going to have any money problems," he said. "We've agreed on the amount. We're just arguing on how I'll get it. Their first offer was more than I was asking for."

It all comes down to money, said Veeck. "A lot of people resent amounts being asked and discussed. If a guy is laid off work in Ohio because there is no gas, I think he resents a player asking for $200,000 a year and preparing to go to Florida."

The laws of supply and demand will affect the marketplace, according to Veeck.

"I think there will be a lot of free agents after this year and as a result the prices players are asking will go down," he said.

BILL BUCKNER
No agents need apply

"You can't pay a player twice as much as you did a year ago if he had the same statistics he had the previous year, just because of the free agent business. You cannot continue running up deficits. It's not realistic. Look what happened to the ABA and the WFL."

Veeck might have added the Oakland A's to that list of sports disaster areas. With a half-dozen of their best players gone via the free-agent route, the joke in Oakland this winter is that the team is changing its name to the Triple A's . . . baseball's designation for a minor league.

A's owner Charles O. Finley understands. Citing Steinbrenner, Ray Kroc of San Diego and "The Cowboy," Angel owner Gene Autry, Finley said, "If I was a player and knew there were suckers in the game like that, I'd play out my option, too."

There is disagreement on the value of long-term contracts.

"I think they're good for both the players and the club," said Al Campanis, the Dodgers' vice president for player personnel.

"It gives players security, knowing they'll have X number of dollars coming in for a long period of time, and they can play better. It gives the club solidarity. We spend a number of years grooming a player, suffering with his errors, and when he develops, we know he'll be around for awhile. Multi-year contracts make it much easier for us to plan ahead."

But Tal Smith, president and general manager of the Houston Astros, isn't sure the multiyear agreement is such a good idea.

"Normally, you would base the 1977 contract on the 1976 performance," he said. "But it doesn't work that way anymore.

"You have to base multiyear contracts on production, but how can you look ahead to 1978 or 1979? We don't want to incur an obligation for several years if a player is not producing—and a player doesn't want to be bound by a contract if he has a good year."

Houston slugger Bob Watson, already signed for 1977, believes the free agent mania will bottom out when the owners have had enough.

"The first time around with the free-agent draft, some of the players got big contracts," he said. "I feel the guys who play out their options from now on will find it tougher to get the big deals you've been reading about."

Will the long-term security kill incentive? Harry Dalton,

"There may be a tendency in certain players' cases for them to lose initiative because they're signed multi-year contracts."

— Harry Dalton

general manager of the Angels, thinks it could.

"I think it can be beneficial, depending on the player himself," said Dalton. "I think there may be a tendency in certain players' cases for them to lose initiative because they've signed multi-year contracts."

Dalton and the Angels were active in the free-agent marketplace, signing Bobby Grich, Joe Rudi and Don Baylor, all with long-term agreements.

Cleveland invested $2 million in pitcher Wayne Garland and GM Phil Seghi described the situation as "a player quake." Later, though, Seghi had second thoughts about the signings scene.

"I don't want the ownership put on a cross and crucifi," he said. "Escalation of salaries is to be expected, but rules don't call for legal extortion."

The first team to satisfy all its players with new contracts this winter was the Detroit Tigers. General manager Jim Campbell says a basic honesty between both sides helped hasten talks.

"I throw out a figure I feel is a fair one," he explained.

Campbell said he'd like to give players more money than he does but, "I don't think I've ever signed a player for what I wanted to give him. I'm too Scotch for that."

ARTHUR ASHE —

SOMEHOW, PARENTS must instill a desire for learning alongside the desire to be Walt Frazier. Why not start by sending black professional athletes into high schools to explain the facts of life?

I have often addressed high school audiences and my message is always the same. For every hour you spend on the athletic field, spend two in the library. Even if you make it as a pro athlete, your career will be over by the time you are 35. So you will need that diploma.

Have these pro athletes explain what happens if you break a leg, get a sore arm, have one bad year or don't make the cut for five or six tournaments. Explain to them the star system, wherein every O.J. earning millions there are six or seven others making $15,000 or $20,000 or $30,000 a year.

But don't just have Walt Frazier or O.J. or Abdul-Jabbar address your class. Invite a benchwarmer or a guy who didn't make it. Ask him if he sleeps every night. Ask him whether he was graduated. Ask him what he would do if he became disabled tomorrow. Ask him where his old high school athletic buddies are.

WE HAVE BEEN on the same roads—sports and entertainment—too long. We need to pull over, fill up at the library and speed away to Congress and the Supreme Court, the unions and the business world.

We need more Barbara Jordans, Andrew Youngs, union cardholders, Nikki Giovannis and Earl Graveses. Don't worry: we will still be able to sing and dance and run and jump better than anybody else.

I'll never forget how proud my grandmother was when I graduated from UCLA in 1966. Never mind the Davis Cup in 1968, 1969 and 1970. Never mind the Wimbledon title, Forest Hills, etc. To this day, she still doesn't know what those names mean.

What mattered to her was that of her more than 30 children and grandchildren, I was the first to be graduated from college, and a famous college at that. Somehow, that made up for all those floors she scrubbed all those years.

THE SOVIETS—

For important conversations, they talked in the hotel corridors. Some executives even developed code words that they practiced using in their New York offices. The morning and afternoon negotiating sessions were followed by dinner meetings in Moscow restaurants.

"Those guys," one network executive recalls, "were willing to go out to dinner every night to eat well."

And to drink well. At lunch, one vodka toast was mandatory. At dinner, several vodka toasts were mannerly. At one dinner party for 22 people, 30 bottles of vodka were consumed and not all of the 22 people were drinking.

"I've had hangovers," one network executive recalls, "but the next morning I felt like I'd been kicked in the head."

The night before the negotiations began in early December, the Russians threw what became known as "The $80 Million Cocktail Party" — that's where the three networks first discussed pooling their funds and resources. The pool plan was submitted to the Justice Department for antitrust approval, but when CBS withdrew, the plan was abandoned.

Suddenly, only NBC and ABC were in the hunt and then NBC hired Lothar Bock.

But now even the network executives at ABC and CBS laugh at the most memorable joke the Russians told on themselves. It seems that a comrade and his small son were traveling on a Moscow trolley when the boy had a question for his father.

"How wide," the boy asked, "is Red Square?"

"About 600 meters," his father answered.

"And how long," the boy said, "is Gorky Street?"

"About 6 kilometers," his father replied.

"And how high is the Soviet government?"

"That's a silly question," his father said. "There is no answer as to how high the Soviet government is."

Across the trolley, an old man looked up.

"Yes," the old man said, "there is an answer for your son's question as to how high the Soviet government is. I know I am 1.8 meters high. From that I know that the Soviet government must be 1.6 meters high because," and he touched his throat, "I have had it up to here."

Before the 1980 Olympics are over, NBC probably will have had the Soviet government up to here, but Lothar Bock will have had the last laugh.

GUARDS PROPEL UCLA—

At halftime the lead was 35-23. The guards showed 16 points and Johnson 3—all from the free throw line. His final totals weren't any better, three of 12 from the floor.

"Twelve shots," coach Gene Bartow muttered with a frown. "That's not enough for an all-America. Next week I'm definitely putting Marques on a wing."

The Bruin coach gazed at a sheet of final statistics.

"I think this tells the story," he said, pointing to UCLA's .518 shooting against WSU's .364. "On a bad shooting night we would have been fighting for our lives."

He credited Raveling with a defense that was effective.

"We battled Donaldson every way that we could," he said. "He was sure a lot more active than he was against USC Thursday night. I guess UCLA brings out the best in everyone."

Raveling would not discount that fact.

"The score doesn't indicate how close it was," he said. "We made a good accounting of ourselves and I'm super happy with the way we played. I bet we'll have something to say about who wins it (the conference championship)."

Raveling said he thought his defense was the only way to stop Johnson. "I'd rather have them taking 20-foot jumpshots than Marques dunking the ball," he reasoned.

The Cougars, for all their size and bulk, are woefully slow, and against a team of sprinters like UCLA that can be fatal.

House, for all his advance billing, was one large disappointment (1-of-8 shooting, 2 points, 4 rebounds). Donaldson, despite his size, seldom shot further away than a foot or two from the offensive basket and could manage only four rebounds at the other end of the floor.

WSU's only weapon became guard Harold Rhodes, a deadly shooter, who connected on 11 of 24 for 26 points. At 6-2, he also led the Cougars in rebounds with eight.

"Even with Puidokas in there, I think the outcome would have been about the same," said Bartow, "because they couldn't play Donaldson at the same time. They can't play all three, can they?"

Raveling might try it. He'd do anything to get some fanfare.

"One of these days someone will have to give us a little credit," he moaned. "Each year we keep getting better and better. We come into town 15-4 and there isn't a word in the papers about WSU."

Better luck next week, coach.

$40,000 win for Sugar Ray

BALTIMORE (AP)—Sugar Ray Leonard didn't score a knockout as predicted, but the charismatic Olympic champion earned a whopping $40,000 in his pro debut while scoring a unanimous six-round victory over Luis (The Bull) Vega Saturday.

"I predicted a fourth-round knockout," Leonard said after the nationally televised junior welterweight bout, which drew a crowd of 10,270 to the Civic Centre.

"But I'm glad it went the distance because it gave me a chance to see how tough this pro game is."

The 20-year-old Leonard was given each round by the three officials, and the victory was a popular one with a crowd which contributed to a gross gate of $72,320. His purse included $10,000 from CBS.

Leonard said the experienced Vega proved to be a tough opponent, as predicted by veteran trainer Angelo Dundee, who was in Leonard's corner along with regular trainer Dave Jacobs.

ASKED WHY he nodded to a group of spectators late in the fight, Leonard said he was directing his attention to those who had heard his knockout prediction.

"I was looking at them, and saying, 'No way,'" he said.

14 run for riches in hundred-grand Strub

Mrs. Connie M. Ring's Hollywood Derby winner Crystal Water carries top weight of 123 pounds today as the nation's first $100,000-added thoroughbred race of 1977, the Charles H. Strub Stakes, will be contested by a full field of 14 at Santa Anita Park.

Named for the founder of the Arcadia race track, the prestigious Strub, a classic 1¼-mile test exclusively for 4-year-olds, will gross $135,900, with $90,900 going to the winner.

Racing fans today also have an added chance for monetary reward, in the Santa Anita Sweepstakes, when 20 names will be drawn from entry forms to determine the winner of a $5,000 first prize.

Providing the major challenges to Crystal Water, who will be ridden by Laffit Pincay, are Kirby Lane (Sandy Hawley, 118 pounds), Romantic Lead (Ron Turcotte, 116) and L'Heureux (Don Pierce, 119).

Crystal Water appears to be rounding into form after a pair of sub-par comeback outings and shows a recent exceptional workout, a 2:04⅘ clocking for two miles.

New York's record-setting apprentice, Steve Cauthen, and his similarly youthful friend, Mark Sellers, both get their first starts in a hundred-grander.

Cauthen, 16, returns to ride Pocket Park, who will carry 117 pounds and will run as an Elmendorf-owned entry with Rajab, to carry 114 and Marcos Castaneda.

Sellers, 17, son of Johnny Sellers, is scheduled to handle Proud Birdie, also with a 117-pound impost.

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Bill Shoemaker has the mount on King's Cliffe, 115.

D.B.'s Dream (Jerry Lambert, 117), Properantes (Angel Cordero, 114), Dr. Krohn (Octavio Vergara, 116), American Trader (Darrel McHargue, 117), Double Discount (Fernand Toro, 115) and Samburu (Frank Olivares, 115) complete the lineup.

PIERCE KEPT HAIL HILARIOUS off the pace set by My Juliet for most of the race, then urged his mount to the front in the homestretch for a mild upset in Santa Anita's Saturday feature, the $58,550 Santa Maria Handicap.

The triumph, with Hail Hilarious edging fast-closing Swingtime by a head, capped a riding triple for Pierce, his second of the week. He opened the afternoon's card with a $20.20 victory on Eagle in Flight, then came back aboard $5.40 victor Countess Fager in the fourth race.

Hail Hilarious, a 4-year-old by Fast Hilarious, covered the mile and 1/16 in 1:42 in besting a field of nine in the event for older fillies and mares.

The winner, who carried 122 pounds, returned $9.40, $5.40 and $3. Swingtime, 120, ridden by Shoemaker, was part of a Charlie Whittingham-trained entry with Vagabonda and paid $6.60 and $3.20. The show payoff on the favored Bastonera II was $2.40. Bastonera II, highweighted at 126, was ridden by Angel Cordero and finished four lengths back of the leaders.

My Juliet, ridden by Tony Black, faded to fifth.

4 winners for Cauthen

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Patriot's Dream broke on top and led all the way to win the $55,100 Stymie Handicap at Aqueduct Saturday while sensational apprentice Steve Cauthen rode four more winners.

A crowd of 18,026 turned out despite an all-night snowfall and saw the 4-year-old Patariot's Glint, ridden by Ron Turcotte, turn back the challenge of Itsagoodlife and then the closing rush of Turn and Count to score by 1½-lengths.

Frampton Delight finished third, three-quarters of a length behind Turn and Count.

The 16-year-old Cauthen, who also finished second three times, finished fifth aboard Itsagoodlife, who raced alongside Patriot's Dream until the halfmile pole before fading.

Cauthen's winners were Bold and Stormy, $8, in the second race; Bold Rondo, $7.60 in the sixth; Someday Queen, $14.20 in the seventh, and I'm For Anything, $5.80 in the ninth.

He has had 237 mounts at the current Aqueduct meeting, which opened Jan. 3, with 70 winners, 47 seconds and 38 thirds. He is 50 winners ahead of the runnerup at the meeting, Angel Santiago.

A Zure Request's stretch run captures title at Los Alamitos

A Zure Request came from behind to overtake Little Blue Sheep in the final strides to win the $50,000 Horsemen's Quarter Horse Racing Association Championship Saturday night at Los Alamitos Race Course.

The jockey-trainer combination of Kenneth Hart and Blane Schvaneveldt combined their talents for the victory, with Hart notching his 50th triumph of the current meeting as he maintained his lead over Danny Cordoza in the rider race.

For Schvaneveldt, the win was his 34th of the season as he equaled the single-season winter meeting record for wins by a trainer.

Little Blue Sheep, winner of last summer's rich Vessels Maturity but still in search of his first win of the winter entering the race, was far in front throughout most of the 440-yard dash and appeared a winner less than 40 yards from the wire.

But A Zure Request, the horse who owns the second fastest 440-yard time in Los Alamitos history, when he finished second to record-setting Dash For Cash in last December's Champion of Champions, turned on the afterburners near the wire and caught the 5-year-old mare in the final strides, eventually notching a neck win.

A son of Azure Te, A Zure Request won nine of 15 races last year as a 3-year-old, closing out 1976 with a victory in the Auld Lange Syne Stakes. The Championship win Saturday night was his first win of 1977 and pushed his earnings past the $167,000 mark.

For Hart, the $50,000 win was his first major victory since 1973 when he guided Andy Go to a muddy triumph in this same HQHRA Championship.

"This whole meeting has been the biggest thrill of my life," said Hart following his 20th lifetime stakes win at Los Alamitos. "I hadn't won a major race in quite awhile and it certainly was satisfying.

"That mare (Little Blue Sheep) had us the whole way. But I was confident we were going to catch her. . .and we did."

A Zure Request ran the 440-yard distance in 21.72 seconds, the second fastest Championship in HQHRA history. Charger Bar's 21.68 mark in 1974 is the stakes record.

A Zure Request paid $6.40, $3.60 and $2.60. Little Blue Sheep, under John Watson, held on for second, paying $9.40 and $5, while Twin Jet, part of the Earl Holmes-trained entry, closed strongly to get third, returning $3.20.

Native Creek was fourth in the nine-horse field while 9-5 favorite She's Precious finished fifth.

January, Lietzke all even at Hawaii

HONOLULU (AP) — Easy-going old pro Don January, who once appeared to have a lock on the lead, blew it, then salvaged a tie for the top with a birdie on the last hole — after television coverage ended — had some sage observations concerning today's final round of the $240,000 Hawaiian Open Golf Tournament.

"There're 18 holes left and a half dozen who can win," said the 47-year-old veteran who regained a tie for the top with Bruce Lietzke with a two-putt birdie on the 18th hole of the third round Saturday.

"Unless somebody jumps off to a big start, the last round usually comes down to the last five or six holes. And then it comes down to people.

"It comes down to who shoots at it, who shoots it good, and who makes it.

"If I get in position to win, and can win, fine. If not, I'll just go home on Monday and forget about it."

THE HARD-HITTING Lietzke, who acquired the first title of his pro career with a playoff victory over Gene Littler at Tucson earlier this year, looked at the big board showing the standing of the leaders and observed:

"I know how tough Don January is. I can't say I'm as confident as I was in Tucson."

January once had a two-stroke lead but blew it with a double bogey six on the 14th hole and finished with a 69 and a tie with Lietzke at 204, 12-under-par on the 7,234 yard Waialae Country Club course. Lietzke had a 67.

Lanny Wadkins, once one of the game's most promising young stars but mired in a deep slump since surgery more than two years ago, ripped out a six-under-par 66 and was within a single stroke of the lead at 205.

Japanese star Takashi Murakami and Fuzzy Zoeller are next at 207. Zoeller had a 70 while Murakami had to struggle to a 73, one-over-par in occasionally gusty Trade Winds.

USC BEATS HUSKIES—

The defeat was a crusher for Washington, which came into the Southland on Thursday tied for first place with UCLA and gathering steam with 13 wins in 14 games.

But after losses to the Bruins and Trojans, coach Marv Harshman assessed the trip as a disaster.

"Our outlook in the conference is very gloomy unless we can win all of our remaining league games," said Harshman. "The Trojans deserved to win. They outhustled us, outrebounded us and outshot us."

With12 minutes left, the Huskies appeared to be on the way to their fifth Pacific-8 victory in seven games. Although they were playing without injured guard Mike Neil, the Huskies held a six-point edge at 52-46 and no one was in foul trouble.

But Boyd, perhaps in desperation, upset the Huskies' tempo by going to a half-court trap defense and USC reeled off 10 consecutive points for a 58-52 lead.

Washington seemed to lose its poise as Marv Safford and Greg White bombed away successfully for USC.

But the play that ignited the Trojans and the crowd was turned in by senior guard Casey Jones. Flying downcourt with a Washington pursuer harassing him from close range, Jones tossed up an off-balance shot that caromed off the glass and into the basket.

The Huskies were never the same.

Oh, they cut USC's lead to four on three occasions, but the Trojans began pulling steadily away with 6:30 remaining and their margin reached 15 during the final minute.

"I'm elated," said Boyd. "I think our team has been playing well. One thing I think is important—with the adversity we've faced, we've maintained ourselves quite well."

BOYD agreed that the half-court trap defense did in the Huskies.

"Stan Walker (freshman forward) was shooting so well from the perimeter for Washington that we had to do something," said the Trojan coach. "I wouldn't say Washington panicked, but our defense seemed to confuse some of their players."

An important factor in USC's win seemed to be the 40-minute presence of Safford, who complained publicly three weeks ago that he didn't like being taken out of games every time he made a mistake.

The senior guard connected on 10 of 17 shots, none closer than 20 feet, and was the game's leading scorer with 25 points. White had 23 and Paul Henderson 19, including 9 of 10 at the free throw line.

USC's 2-3 zone defense made it difficult for Washington's 7-foot center, James Edwards, to get the ball, but he managed 24 points, 10 on free throws.

When it was all over, the Trojan band paraded out of the arena and fans stood at courtside, grinning and congratulating each other.

After all, a Pac-8 victory doesn't happen every day. Or year.

Bob Smith installed as president

Compton H&F Club starts 33rd year

A small group of men gathered in Compton in 1946 just after World War II and started a club dedicated to the ideals of better fishing, hunting, hiking, camping and related outdoor sports. They called it the Compton Hunting and Fishing Club. Within a year the membership had soared toward the 200 mark and plans were started for a building fund.

Thursday night Bob Smith, 2827 Candlewood St., Lakewood, was installed as the 33rd president of the club which now has a membership close to its allowable 300. In addition, there is a very active Women's CHFC Auxiliary numbering just short of 100 members.

BOB SMITH
Club president

The club not only has its own clubhouse, with underground target range where boys and even adults take their Hunter Safety courses, but it owns property in Ventura County where the club expects to build a trap and skeet range.

Bob Smith has been in the club for several years. He is a native of Los Angeles, went to school in El Monte and served 10 years in the U.S. Navy, mostly in the Pacific area through the Korean fracas. He is an electrician for Hirst and Chick Construction Company of Long Beach.

The new president and his wife Dottie have a son, Bobby, 9. Smith's enthusiasm for the outdoors is shared by his family.

The Compton HFC is one of the strongest supporters of the Long Beach Sportsman's Club's annual Ducks

DONNELL CULPEPPER

Unlimited Night and also a consistent backer of the Southern Council of Conservation Clubs.

TAKING OFFICE with Smith were Jesse Scott, vice president; Bob Robertson, recording secretary; E. K. Nelson, financial secretary; Don Bruckler, sergeant-at-arms; Harrison McClain, delegate to the Southern Council. Directors: Harold Jessee, Ed Glines, Herb Lonberger, Ray Bass, Lyle Chick, Larry Hosler, Walt Coleman, Stan Engstrom and Harrison McClain.

Ray Bass was the outgoing president, and former president Lyle Chick was the installing officer.

Frank Cravens, the hunting chairman, gave awards to Glen Hosler, Glines, Bruckler, Merl Folker, Lonberger, Sid Brucker Jr. and Paul Christensen.

Brad Warner, Norm Loven and Ron Fennell were the trap chairmen for 1976, and they gave trophies to Ted Dooms, Coleman, Les Miller, Ron Calvert, Lonberger, Harold Jessee, Larry Akers, Scott, Bob Smith, McClain and Brad Warner. The Bob Davidson Trophy for high overall went to Gordon Coffman.

Skeet chairman Coleman gave awards to Coffman, Wayne Fuller, Bruckler, and the high over-all to himself.

The Compton club is one of the highest-rated family-oriented groups in the Southland. Both clubs, men's and women's, take part in various social activities throughout the year. There are dances, fishing tournaments, trap and skeet events, campouts on the club property in Ventura County. The annual fish fry in July is attended by hundreds from various cities in Los Angeles County.

OUTDOOR MINIS—An eight-week course in hunting dog training will be offered, starting Saturday, at Linc Raahauge's Pheasant Hunting Reserve near Corona. The class will start each Saturday at 8 a.m. Mike Raahauge says that a professional dog trainer will cover such subjects as obedience, retrieving, pointing and holding. The number of dog will be limited to 25 and advance reservations are necessary. For information call (714) 735-2361.

Plants of silver salmon yearlings in two Southland streams have been concluded for 1977. The fish ranged from four to 12 inches and the plants, all made in January, totaled 100,750 for the Santa Margarita River near Oceanside and Calleguas Creek in Ventura County. All of the fish came from the man-made spawning channel of the DFG's Merced River Fish Hatchery in Snelling (Merced County). There is, of course, no hope that the salmon will ever spawn, but the DFG people hope that the fish, if they survive, will return to the areas in two or three years and provide a different kind of fishery for Southland anglers.

A final report on waterfowl hunting at the 18 DFG-controlled areas for the season just ended showed that 115,048 hunters participated in the DFG or U.S. Fish and Wildlife areas. They killed 246,829 ducks, 18,980 geese, and 5,877 coots for a total of 271,686 birds, or 2.4 birds per hunter. Two upstate National Wildlife Refuges—Merced and Colusa—had the best averages.

49ers point for track nationals

By ELAINE RISINGER
Staff Writer

She has a crisp British accent, trains with the men's track team and is expected to be a standout for Long Beach State.

Andrea Lynch, world class runner and 49er freshman, is an athlete Long Beach fans should keep in mind as the WCAA track and field competition draws near.

Andrea is also one reason coach La Tanya Glass is looking ahead to the new season with high hopes of sending several team members to the nationals.

La Tanya got her first good look at the young sprinter's ability Friday when Andrea competed for an AAU team at the Los Angeles Indoor Games at the Forum. Since her transfer from L.A. Southwest College this semester, Andrea has been under the guidance of LBSU's Ron Allice, who also coaches her fiance, Brian Saunders, a member of the men's team who is Canada's No. 1 quarter miler.

Allice, who has trained women's track teams as well as men's (he was a L.B. Comets coach in the 60s), describes Andrea as a "super" athlete. She has been electronically timed at 11.011 for 100 meters and 22.8 at meters.

Andrea competed for Great Britain in the 1972 and 1976 Olympics. Her family moved in 1965 from its home in Barbados, West Indies, to London.

Ranked second in the world in the 100 meters during 1975, Andrea finished fifth at that distance during the Montreal games. A back injury prevented her from performing at her peak, Allice said. Andrea also anchored the 400 sprint relay in Montreal.

WOMEN IN SPORTS

At LBSU, Andrea will be competing in the at 100 and 200 meters and in the 400 meter relay.

Another bright spot for coach Glass is her field events team. La Tanya is blessed with five strong high jumpers — Cathy Cook, Sandy Tyler, Brenda Little, Adrienne Mosely and Fern Simon. La Tanya expects at least four to reach the national 5-4 qualifying standards.

Cathy Cook jumped 5-6 recently at Irvine, and Fern Simon hit the same mark last year when she went to nationals.

Also on La Tanya's track and field team of 20 athletes are two young women who compete in the pentathlon, Sandy Tyler and Syd Brown, and quarter miler Patty Cape, a Long Beach City College transfer.

The 49ers will participate in a combined men's and women's invitational meet at the University of Redlands Feb. 26.

AS THE first round of WCAA basketball competition ends, Long Beach State shares a first place tie with UCLA and Cal State Fullerton. The 49ers ended Fullerton itsfirst defeat Wednesday evening in a 79-74 game that Long Beach State controlled except for a brief period in the second half.

"I'm so proud of my players," beamed coach Fran Schaafsma, who saw her team put it all together to latch on to the No. 1 spot. "We played our game plan and kept our poise."

The key to the win, Fran felt, was control of rebounding, the pace of play and dominance at the free throw line. The 49ers were 19-for-24 shooting free throws with Fullerton going 10-for-17.

"We played a beautiful defensive game. I can't overemphasize that," she added.

LBSU will host UCLA Wednesday. UCLA, which lost to Fullerton, gave the 49ers its only loss.

Kristy Durnard posted a strong second-place finish in all-around competition although the Long Beach gymnastics team dropped a close 137.1 to 131.65 loss to Fullerton.

Kristy captured first places in vaulting and free exercise and was fifth on the uneven parallel bars.

$40,000 win for Sugar Ray

BALTIMORE (AP)—Sugar Ray Leonard didn't score a knockout as predicted, but the charismatic Olympic champion earned a whopping $40,000 in his pro debut while scoring a unanimous six-round victory over Luis (The Bull) Vega Saturday.

"I predicted a fourth-round knockout," Leonard said after the nationally televised junior welterweight bout, which drew a crowd of 10,270 to the Civic Centre.

"But I'm glad it went the distance because it gave me a chance to see how tough this pro game is."

The 20-year-old Leonard was given each round by the three officials, and the victory was a popular one with a crowd which contributed to a gross gate of $72,320. His purse included $10,000 from CBS.

Leonard said the experienced Vega proved to be a tough opponent, as predicted by veteran trainer Angelo Dundee, who was in Leonard's corner along with regular trainer Dave Jacobs.

ASKED WHY he nodded to a group of spectators late in the fight, Leonard said he was directing his attention to those who had heard his knockout prediction.

"I was looking at them, and saying, 'No way,'" he said.

Carson hosts softball teams

All nine Pacific Coast Softball League teams have entered the third Carson Parks and Recreation Invitational Tournament March 4-6, 12-13.

The Open ASA league is seeking a 10th team by Feb. 15 to balance its division play. Interested teams contact Don Callow, president, at 830-5051.

BIG LEAGUERS VS. USC TODAY

Major league baseball players Bobby Grich, Tony Muser, Ed Crosby, Lyman Bostock and Al Cowens, along with other members of the Southern California Baseball Association, will play against the USC varsity today at Dedeaux Field on the USC campus.

Grich, Muser and Crosby played with the Long Beach Rockets during the recently concluded winter season, as did former LBCC pitcher Greg Harris, who will also suit up for the all-stars.

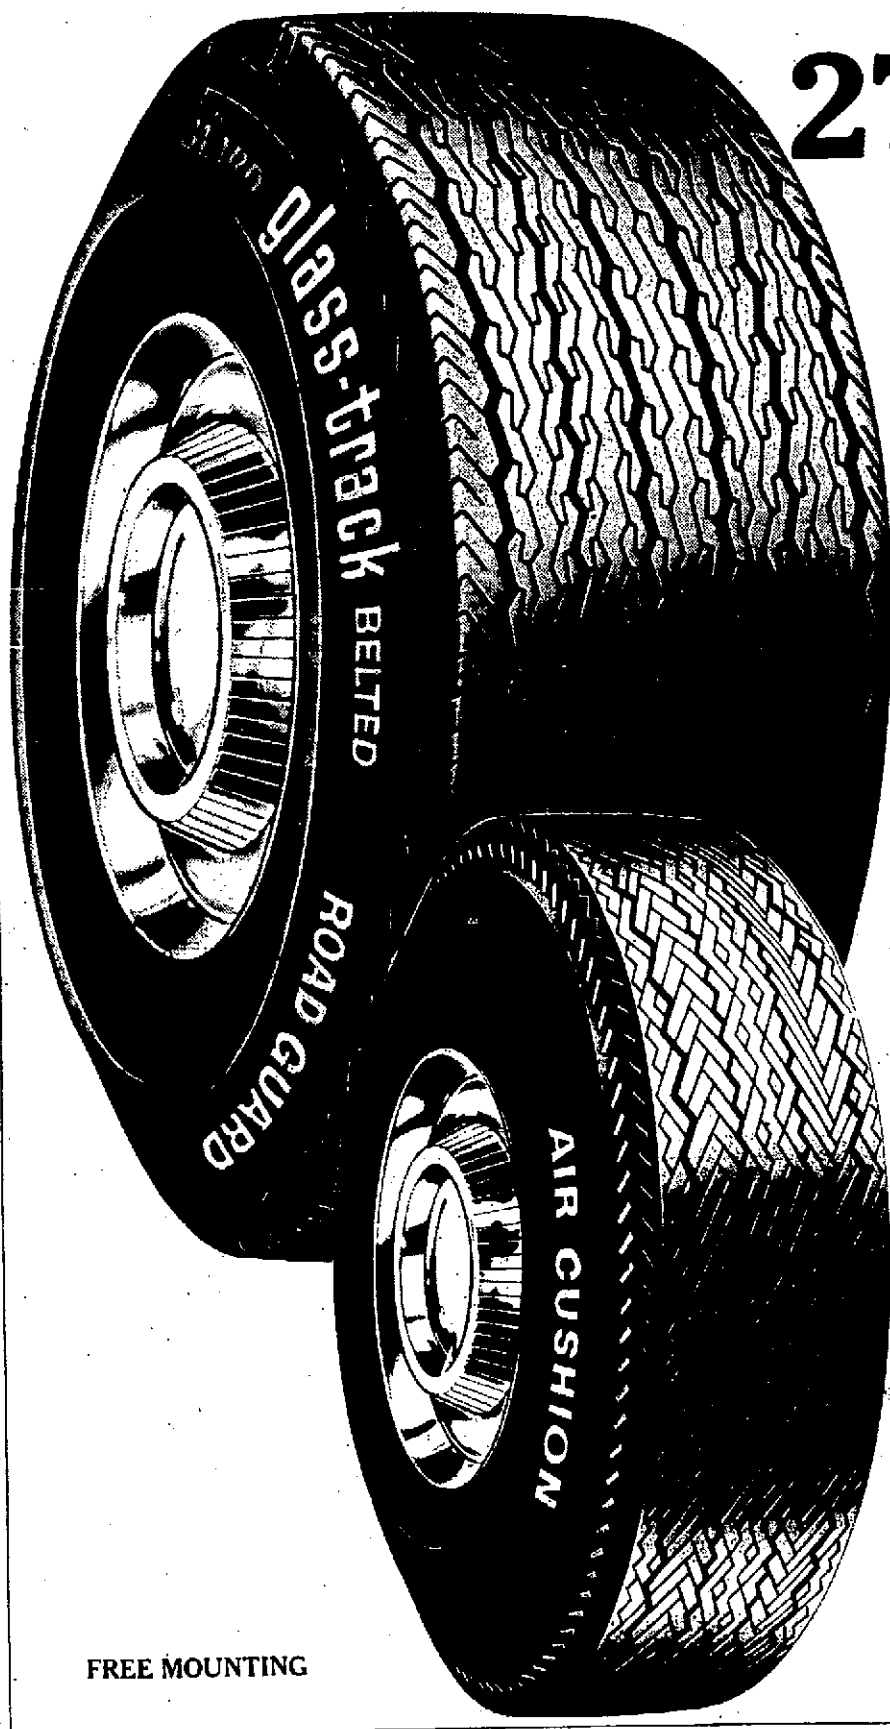

Funds from the 1 p.m. game will be used for the players' medical insurance program. Spectators are asked to donate $2 for adults, $1 for children up to 12.

Saturday USC defeated an alumni team, 12-6, in a game highlighted by six home runs, two by Steve Kemp, now with the Detroit Tigers.

14 run for riches in hundred-grand Strub

Mrs. Connie M. Ring's Hollywood Derby winner Crystal Water carries top weight of 123 pounds today as the nation's first $100,000-added thoroughbred race of 1977, the Charles H. Strub Stakes, will be contested by a full field of 14 at Santa Anita Park.

Named for the founder of the Arcadia race track, the prestigious Strub, a classic 1¼-mile test exclusively for 4-year-olds, will gross $135,900, with $90,900 going to the winner.

Racing fans today also have an added chance for monetary reward, in the Santa Anita Sweepstakes, when 20 names will be drawn from entry forms to determine the winner of a $5,000 first prize.

Providing the major challenges to Crystal Water, who will be ridden by Laffit Pincay, are Kirby Lane (Sandy Hawley, 118 pounds), Romantic Lead (Ron Turcotte, 116) and L'Heureux (Don Pierce, 119).

Crystal Water appears to be rounding into form after a pair of sub-par comeback outings and shows a recent exceptional workout, a 2:04⅘ clocking for two miles.

New York's record-setting apprentice, Steve Cauthen, and his similarly youthful friend, Mark Sellers, both get their first starts in a hundred-grander.

Cauthen, 16, returns to ride Pocket Park, who will carry 117 pounds and will run as an Elmendorf-owned entry with Rajab, to carry 114 and Marcos Castaneda.

Sellers, 17, son of Johnny Sellers, is scheduled to handle Proud Birdie, also with a 117-pound impost.

Bill Shoemaker has the mount on King's Cliffe, 115.

D.B.'s Dream (Jerry Lambert, 117), Properantes (Angel Cordero, 114), Dr. Krohn (Octavio Vergara, 116), American Trader (Darrel McHargue, 117), Double Discount (Fernand Toro, 115) and Samburu (Frank Olivares, 115) complete the lineup.

PIERCE KEPT HAIL HILARIOUS off the pace set by My Juliet for most of the race, then urged his mount to the front in the homestretch for a mild upset in Santa Anita's Saturday feature, the $58,550 Santa Maria Handicap.

The triumph, with Hail Hilarious edging fast-closing Swingtime by a head, capped a riding triple for Pierce, his second of the week. He opened the afternoon's card with a $20.20 victory on Eagle in Flight, then came back aboard $5.40 victor Countess Fager in the fourth race.

Hail Hilarious, a 4-year-old by Fast Hilarious, covered the mile and 1/16 in 1:42 in besting a field of nine in the event for older fillies and mares.

The winner, who carried 122 pounds, returned $9.40, $5.40 and $3. Swingtime, 120, ridden by Shoemaker, was part of a Charlie Whittingham-trained entry with Vagabonda and paid $6.60 and $3.20. The show payoff on the favored Bastonera II was $2.40. Bastonera II, highweighted at 126, was ridden by Angel Cordero and finished four lengths back of the leaders.

My Juliet, ridden by Tony Black, faded to fifth.

A Zure Request's stretch run captures title at Los Alamitos

A Zure Request came from behind to overtake Little Blue Sheep in the final strides to win the $50,000 Horsemen's Quarter Horse Racing Association Championship Saturday night at Los Alamitos Race Course.

The jockey-trainer combination of Kenneth Hart and Blane Schvaneveldt combined their talents for the victory, with Hart notching his 50th triumph of the current meeting as he maintained his lead over Danny Cordoza in the rider race.

For Schvaneveldt, the win was his 34th of the season as he equaled the single-season winter meeting record for wins by a trainer.

Little Blue Sheep, winner of last summmer's rich Vessels Maturity but still in search of his first win of the winter entering the race, was far in front throughout most of the 440-yard dash and appeared a winner less than 40 yards from the wire.

But A Zure Request, the horse who owns the second fastest 440-yard time in Los Alamitos history, when he finished second to record-setting Dash For Cash in last December's Champion of Champions, turned on the afterburners near the wire and caught the 5-year-old mare in the final strides, eventually notching a neck win.

A son of Azure Te, A Zure Request won nine of 15 races last year as a 3-year-old, closing out 1976 with a victory in the Auld Lange Syne Stakes. The Championship win Saturday night was his first win of 1977 and pushed his earnings past the $167,000 mark.

For Hart, the $50,000 win was his first major victory since 1973 when he guided Andy Go to a muddy triumph in this same HQHRA Championship.

"This whole meeting has been the biggest thrill of my life," said Hart following his 20th lifetime stakes win at Los Alamitos. "I hadn't won a major race in quite awhile and it certainly was satisfying.

"That mare (Little Blue Sheep) had us the whole way. But I was confident we were going to catch her...and we did."

A Zure Request ran the 440-yard distance in 21.72 seconds, the second fastest Championship in HQHRA history. Charger Bar's 21.68 mark in 1974 is the stakes record.

A Zure Request paid $6.40, $3.60 and $2.60. Little Blue Sheep, under John Watson, held on for second, paying $9.40 and $5, while Twin Jet, part of the Earl Holmes-trained entry, closed strongly to get third, returning $3.20.

Native Creek was fourth in the nine-horse field while 9-5 favorite She's Precious finished fifth.

4 winners for Cauthen

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Patriot's Dream broke on top and led all the way to win the $55,100 Stymie Handicap at Aqueduct Saturday while sensational apprentice Steve Cauthen rode four more winners.

A crowd of 18,026 turned out despite an all-night snowfall and saw the 4-year-old Patariot's Glint, ridden by Ron Turcotte, turn back the challenge of Itsagoodlife and then the closing rush of Turn and Count to score by 1½-lengths.

Frampton Delight finished third, three-quarters of a length behind Turn and Count.

The 16-year-old Cauthen, who also finished second three times, finished fifth aboard Itsagoodlife, who raced alongside Patriot's Dream until the halfmile pole before fading.

Cauthen's winners were Bold and Stormy, $8, in the second race; Bold Rondo, $7.60 in the sixth; Someday Queen, $14.20 in the seventh, and I'm For Anything, $5.80 in the ninth.

He has had 237 mounts at the current Aqueduct meeting, which opened Jan. 3, with 70 winners, 47 seconds and 38 thirds. He is 50 winners ahead of the runnerup at the meeting, Angel Santiago.

CHIEF PRONTO got the edge late and just lasted over SYLLABUS. The latter took up at the start, began to rally at the quarter pole, took up into the upper stretch, found room later on the rail and closed fastest. POLKOVNIK needed time to settle, circled ground and finished eagerly, in the middle of the course. EASTERN STAR took up on the first turn and broke sharply again entering the stretch.

FEATHERFOOT, atomp the inside early, slackened on the backstretch, changed course to the outside at the three furlong pole, closed and alternated with the lead to hold the edge in the final fifty yards but barely lasted. STARDUST MEL, under a confident ride, was kept outside all the way, went up to share the lead at the quarter pole, drifted inward and battled to the end. THE KEED HIMSELF, on the rail, set most of the pace.

Scratched — Madera Sun, Stef.

HAIL HILARIOUS broke cleanly and was sent to the first turn to be close to the lead while losing ground, closed to share the lead nearing the quarter pole, battled then from between horses through the stretch to get the edge and held narrowly over SWINGTIME. The latter broke in stride, settled on the backstretch, gained ground while wide about the quarter pole, drove hard through midstretch to challenge for the advantage and pressed the issue to the final stride. BASTONERA II lagged well back to the far turn, came wide to midstretch, maneuvered inside the first flight for her best challenge then lost some of her punch in the late stages. STAR BALL showed no early speed and overtook tired horses. MY JULIET broke alertly to hold a clear lead, held briefly then gave way and bore out after being headed. MERRY LADY III saved ground and lacked a closing kick. MODUS VIVENDI weakened. VAGABONDA was too far back.

Scratched — Stravina.

Bob Smith installed as president

Compton H&F Club starts 33rd year

A small group of men gathered in Compton in 1946 st after World War II and started a club dedicated to e ideals of better fishing, hunting, hiking, camping and lated outdoor sports. They called it the Compton unting and Fishing Club. Within a year the member- ip had soared toward the 200 mark and plans were arted for a building fund.

Thursday night Bob Smith, 2827 Candlewood St., kewood, was installed as the 33rd president of the club which now has a membership close to its allowable 300. In addition, there is a very active Women's CHFC Auxiliary numbering just short of 100 members.

BOB SMITH
Club president

The club not only has its own clubhouse, with underground target range where boys and even adults take their Hunter Safety courses, but it owns property in Ventura County where the club expects to build a trap and skeet range.

Bob Smith has been in the club for several years. He is a native of Los Angeles, went to school in El Monte and served 10 years in the U.S. Navy, mostly in the Pacific area hrough the Korean fracas. He is an electrician for Hirst and Chick Construction Company of Long Beach.

The new president and his wife Dottie have a son, Bobby, 9. Smith's enthusiasm for the outdoors is shared by his family.

The Compton HFC is one of the strongest supporters of the Long Beach Sportsman's Club's annual Ducks

DONNELL CULPEPPER

Unlimited Night and also a consistent backer of the Southern Council of Conservation Clubs.

TAKING OFFICE with Smith were Jesse Scott, vice president; Bob Robertson, recording secretary; E. K. Nelson, financial secretary; Don Bruckler, sergeant-at-arms; Harrison McClain, delegate to the Southern Council. Directors: Harold Jessee, Ed Glines, Herb Lonberger, Ray Bass, Lyle Chick, Larry Hosler, Walt Coleman, Stan Engstrom and Harrison McClain.

Ray Bass was the outgoing president, and former president Lyle Chick was the installing officer.

Frank Cravens, the hunting chairman, gave awards to Glen Hosler, Glines, Bruckler, Merl Folker, Lonberger, Sid Brucker Jr. and Paul Christensen.

Brad Warner, Norm Loven and Ron Fennell were the trap chairman for 1976, and they gave trophies to Ted Dooms, Coleman, Les Miller, Ron Calvert, Lonberger, Harold Jessee, Larry Akers, Scott, Bob Smith, McClain and Brad Warner. The Bob Davidson Trophy for high overall went to Gordon Coffman.

Skeet chairman Coleman gave awards to Coffman, Wayne Fuller, Bruckler, and the high over-all to himself.

The Compton club is one of the highest-rated family-oriented groups in the Southland. Both clubs, men's and women's, take part in various social activities throughout the year. There are dances, fishing tournaments, trap and skeet events, campouts on the club property in Ventura County. The annual fish fry in July is attended by hundreds from various cities in Los Angeles County.

OUTDOOR MINIS—An eight-week course in hunting dog training will be offered, starting Saturday, at Line Raahauge's Pheasant Hunting Reserve near Corona. The class will start each Saturday at 8 a.m. Mike Raahauge says that a professional dog trainer will cover such subjects as obedience, retrieving, pointing and holding. The number of dog will be limited to 25 and advance reservations are necessary. For information call (714) 735-2361.

Plants of silver salmon yearlings in two Southland streams have been concluded for 1977. The fish ranged from four to 12 inches and the plants, all made in January, totaled 100,750 for the Santa Margarita River near Oceanside and Calleguas Creek in Ventura County. All of the fish came from the man-made spawning channel of the DFG's Merced River Fish Hatchery in Snelling (Merced County). There is, of course, no hope that the salmon will ever spawn, but the DFG people hope that the fish, if they survive, will return to the areas in two or three years and provide a different kind of fishery for Southland anglers.

A final report on waterfowl hunting at the 18 DFG-controlled areas for the season just ended showed that 115,948 hunters participated in the DFG or U.S. Fish and Wildlife areas. They killed 246,829 ducks, 18,960 geese and 5,877 coots for a total of 271,686 birds, or 2.4 birds per hunter. Two upstate National Wildlife Refuges—Merced and Colusa—had the best averages.

49ers point for track nationals

By ELAINE RISINGER
Staff Writer

She has a crisp British accent, trains with the men's track team and is expected to be a standout for Long Beach State.

Andrea Lynch, world class runner and 49er freshman, is an athlete Long Beach fans should keep in mind as the WCAA track and field competition draws near.

Andrea is also one reason coach La Tanya Glass is looking ahead to the new season with high hopes of sending several team members to the nationals.

La Tanya got her first good look at the young sprinter's ability Friday when Andrea competed for an AAU team at the Los Angeles Indoor Games at the Forum. Since her transfer from L.A. Southwest College this semester, Andrea has been under the guidance of LBSU's Ron Allice, who also coaches her fiance, Brian Saunders, a member of the men's team who is Canada's No. 1 quarter miler.

Allice, who has trained women's track teams as well as men's (he was a UB Comets coach in the 60s), describes Andrea as a "super" athlete. She has been electronically timed at 11.011 for 100 meters and 22.8 at meters.

Andrea competed for Great Britain in the 1972 and 1976 Olympics. Her family moved in 1965 from its home in Barbados, West Indies, to London.

Ranked second in the world in the 100 meters during 1975, Andrea finished fifth at that distance during the Montreal games. A back injury prevented her from performing at her peak, Allice said. Andrea also anchored the 400 sprint relay in Montreal.

WOMEN IN SPORTS

At LBSU, Andrea will be competing in the at 100 and 200 meters and in the 400 meter relay.

Another bright spot for coach Glass is her field events team. La Tanya is blessed with five strong high jumpers — Cathy Cook, Sandy Tyler, Brenda Little, Adrienne Mosely and Fern Simon. La Tanya expects at least four to reach the national 5-4 qualifying standards.

Cathy Cook jumped 5-6 recently at Irvine, and Fern Simon hit the same mark last year when she went to nationals.

Also on La Tanya's track and field team of 20 athletes are two young women who compete in the pentathlon, Sandy Tyler and Syd Brown, and quarter miler Patty Cape, a Long Beach City College transfer.

The 49ers will participate in a combined men's and women's invitational meet at the University of Redlands Feb. 26.

AS THE first round of WCAA basketball competition ends, Long Beach State shares a first place tie with UCLA and Cal State Fullerton. The 49ers ended Fullerton itsfirst defeat Wednesday evening in a 79-74 game that Long Beach State controlled except for a brief period in the second half.

"I'm so proud of my players," beamed coach Fran Schaalsma, who saw her team put it all together to latch on to the No. 1 spot. "We played our game plan and kept our poise."

The key to the win, Fran felt, was control of rebounding, the pace of play and dominance at the free throw line. The 49ers were 19-for-24 shooting free throws with Fullerton going 10-for-17.

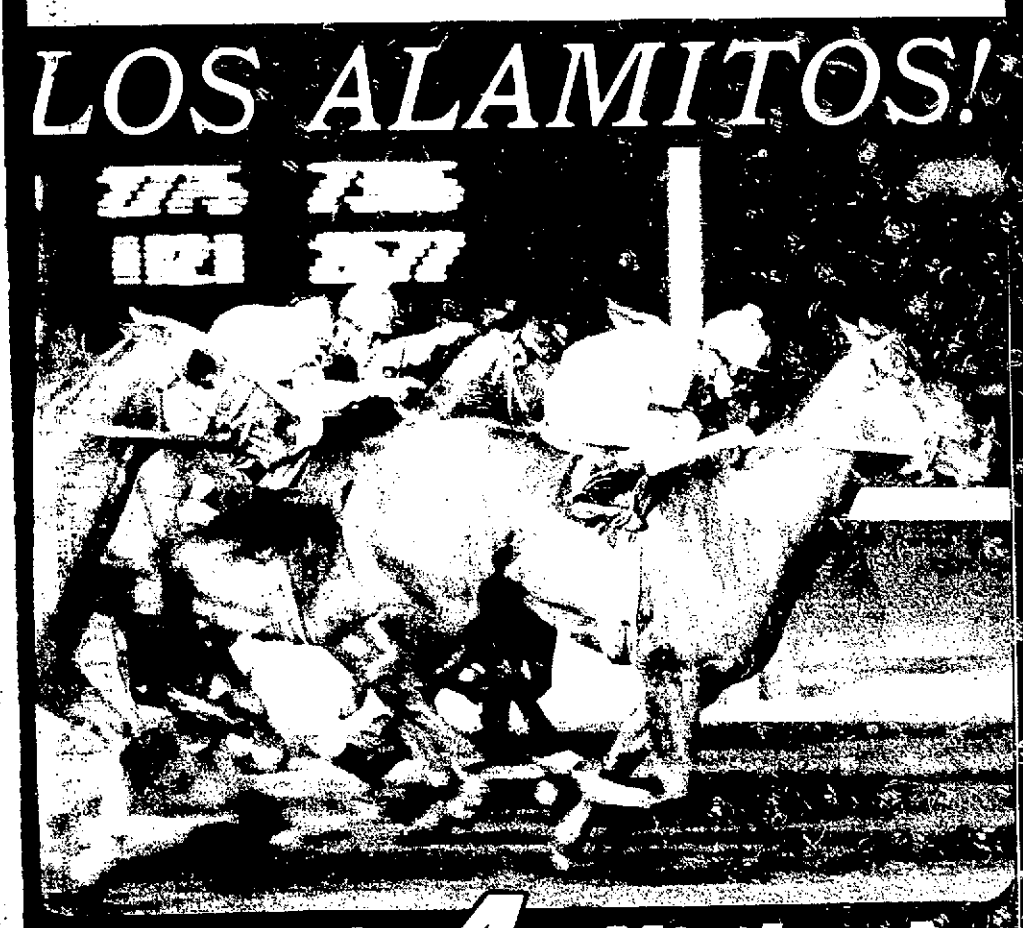

"We played a beautiful defensive game. I can't overemphasize that," she added.

LBSU will host UCLA Wednesday. UCLA, which lost to Fullerton, gave the 49ers its only loss.

Kristy Durnard posted a strong second-place finish in all-around competition although the Long Beach gymnastics team dropped a close 137.1 to 131.65 loss to Fullerton.

Kristy captured first places in vaulting and free exercise and was fifth on the uneven parallel bars.

HERE'S THE TREASURE CHEST, SHORT-JOHN. RIGHT WHERE THE MAP SAID. ONLY THERE'S NO GOLD INSIDE. ONLY... CANDY BARS.

WHATS A CANDY BAR?

I DONT KNOW, BUT THAT'S WHAT IT SAYS ON THE WRAPPER.

SHORT-JOHN NERVOUSLY INSPECTS THE CANDY BAR, THEN ORDERS BIG JACK (THE SHIPS CULINARY EXPERT) TO TASTE IT FIRST.

AN OUTSIDE LAYER COMPOSED OF RICH MILK CHOCOLATE, WITH A CARAMEL CRUNCH CENTER. MOST EXTRAORDINARY.

THE WOODCHUCK IS A TRUE HIBERNATOR, FALLING INTO A DEEP COMATOSE STATE CLOSE TO DEATH

HE FATTENS UP IN AUTUMN AND LIVES OFF THIS STORED ENERGY ALL WINTER

BUT THE LENGTH OF HIS WINTER SLEEP IS NOT REGULATED BY THE CALENDAR

IF A SHORT AUTUMN SENDS HIM TO BED EARLY HE MAY EMERGE LEAN AND HUNGRY IN EARLY SPRING...

WHILE A MILD FALL SEASON GIVES HIM TIME TO PUT ON EXTRA WEIGHT AND HE SLEEPS TILL SPRING IS WELL UNDER WAY

Adam Arkin has a lark in 'Busting Loose'

By BOB MARTIN, TV-Radio Editor

How would you like to be 20 years old and the star of a prime-time television series on a major network?

Take it from Adam Arkin, it's all very exciting.

He won't turn 21 until Aug. 19, and he's the top star of "Busting Loose," a new CBS situation comedy series which made its bow on Monday night, Jan. 17.

Although thrilled to get the part of Lenny Markowitz, Adam admits to having been a bit frightened at first, also.

"I was in a panic after being notified I'd been picked," he told me at lunch the other day at El Adobe Cafe in Hollywood. "Why, I woke up at 3 in the morning, shaking all over."

The Mexican restaurant is across the street (Melrose Avenue) from Paramount Studios, where the series is produced. It's not fancy, but is said to be a place Gov. Jerry Brown often visits when he's in town. In fact, Gov. Brown is on the menu — a dish named after him, that is.

Adam is too young to order a margarita, or any other intoxicating beverage, so the 6-foot, 1 ½-inch, 200-pound actor settled for iced coffee.

HE IS THE son of Alan Arkin, the noted actor who has starred in such movies as "The Russians Are Coming, the Russians Are Coming," "Wait Until Dark," "Popi," "The Heart Is a Lonely Hunter," "Catch 22," "Hearts of the West" and "The Seven-Per-Cent Solution."

"My father's going to guest star in an episode of 'Busting Loose' that we'll be doing soon," Adam disclosed. "He's going to play Lenny's grandfather."

Adam pointed out that he and his dad have been living together in a hotel lately while the elder Arkin finishes work on the movie "Fire Sale" in Hollywood and the younger Arkin performs in the TV series.

"We watch the series together in our room," he said.

Does the father offer advice on acting?

"Sure, he offers tips — mainly technical."

Adam added that he and his father are "great pals," and said he has learned much from the famous actor over the years.

YOUNG ARKIN "busted loose" from his family at age 18, after finishing high school at New York's Professional Children's School. He came to Hollywood on his own, and started getting jobs as an actor in television. "I arrived on a Friday and had a part in an episode of 'We'll Get By' on Monday," he recalled.)

The black-haired, brown-eyed young man also has had TV roles — both dramatic and comedic — in such series as "Harry O," "Hawaii Five-O" "Barney Miller" and "Happy Days" and in the TV movies "All Together Now" and "It Couldn't Happen to a Nicer Guy." But "Busting Loose" is his first TV series as a regular.

As 22-year-old Lenny Markowitz, he's a college graduate with a degree in engineering who has finally boosted loose from the family nest and gone out to face life on his own. He wants to be a sports telecaster, but works in a shoe store to support himself.

Jack Kruschen and Pat Carroll play his overprotective Jewish parents, and Barbara Rhoades is cast as his curvaceous apartment-house neighbor who "dates" for a living. There are six other regulars, in addition to guest performers each week.

The comedy was created by Mark Rothman, 29, and Lowell Ganz, 28, who created and formerly produced "Laverne and Shirley" for ABC. They are the executive producers of the new CBS series for Paramount Television and also are the show's writers.

"We did very well in the Nielsen ratings the first week," Adam pointed out, "but not as well the second week, and then CBS pre-empted us for a special ("Evel Knievel's Death Defiers" last Monday night.) Is that any way to treat a new series?"

The show finished No. 16 in the national Nielsen ratings the first week and No. 38 the second week.

Adam thinks "Busting Loose" has a good chance of being a hit series, but he says he can take it in stride if the show is canceled. "I'll just go on to other things," he said.

IN THE episode airing Monday night, Ben Davidson guest stars as a big bully, a delivery man who makes life miserable for Lenny at the shoe store. Ben is the giant former defensive end for the pro football Oakland Raiders,

"We do a 'Rocky' in one night," said Arkin. "I get fed up with Ben's calling me Dumpy, and finally I challenge him to a fight in the neighborhood gym. I get whipped, but I score a moral victory as he quits calling me Dumpy."

The series is set in New York, which is where Adam was born (Brooklyn). He grew up in a show business environment, and decided at an early age to be an actor. His parents split up when he was a youngster, and he lived for awhile with his mother in St. Louis and, later, in San Luis Obispo. Since the age of 11, however, he has lived with his father, except for the times in the last couple of years when he has been on his own.

His father and stepmother, actress-writer Barbara Dana, make their home in the East. Adam has two younger brothers, Matthew, 16, and Anthony, 8, both of whom have gotten started in acting.

"Our whole family did 'Joan of Lorraine' on the stage in Stamford, Conn., for a month last year," Adam said. "My stepmother played the title role."

ADAM ARKIN . . . a chip off the old block

THE STAR of "Busting Loose" made his professional debut at age 13 with brother Matthew in "People Soup," a film short subject produced by Alan Arkin. It received an Academy Award nomination.

Adam went to drama classes and performed as an actor throughout his high school years. He appeared in off-Broadway and suburban theaters, and, in 1973, toured with the national company of "The New Mount Olive Hotel," starring James Whitmore. He made his motion picture debut in 1971 in "Made for Each Other," and later appeared in "Baby Blue Marine."

Before coming to Hollywood to launch his TV career, he had done a pilot for CBS in New York titled "Mo and Joe," with Louise Lasser.

What does the future hold for Adam Arkin?

"My main goal always has been to do movies," he said.

But it won't make him a bit angry if "Busting Loose" runs for a long, long time.

Three-hour movie tonight tells story of McCarthy's witch hunt

By JERRY BUCK
Associated Press

"Tail Gunner Joe" is an enlightening — and frightening — television movie about the rise and fall of Sen. Joseph McCarthy.

His Communist-hunting tactics in the 1950s stirred fear and hatred, as well as admiration, and added "McCarthyism" to the vocabulary as a synonym for "publicized accusations of subversion without substantiation."

Peter Boyle delivers a stunning portrayal of the charming, enigmatic, opportunistic and, finally, self-destructive McCarthy in the three-hour "Tail Gunner Joe" on the NBC "Big Event" at 8 tonight (Channel 4). The ease with which he appears to bring off his accusations and cow his critics is frightening.

THE FILM is told through the device of a television reporter (Heather Menzies) digging up old sources who recall McCarthy's life in flashbacks and then reflect on it from an historical perspective.

It begins and ends with the 1954 Army-McCarthy hearings, where Burgess Meredith as Joseph Welch, the wily attorney who defended the Army against McCarthy's charges, pushes him toward his downfall.

The film is as objective as one can be about so controversial a figure, but it does take the viewpoint that McCarthy's anti-Communist crusade came not from conviction but from a desire to save himself from a re-election defeat by capitalizing on the issue.

"IN ANY objective appraisal of McCarthy you'd have to be anit-McCarthy," said John Forsythe, who plays a newspaper reporter who was a drinking buddy of McCarthy, publicized his sensational charges and pointed out his foibles. It is one of the few fictional roles in the film.

"I think now we can look back objectively and I think it's because of Watergate," said Forsythe. "I think this is the only country that can examine itself as we did with Watergate. It's inspired a whole spate of self-examinations. The time of McCarthy was a dramatic period — and I think there is some guilt involved."

Forsythe defends the role of the press to the young TV reporter, also a fictional character.

"McCARTHY was news and the press wasn't always responsible in that area," he said. "The press would blow up the wild statements and minimize the actions taken against him by responsible people."

Major figures from the period are portrayed. President Harry S. Truman (Robert Symonds) ducks a confrontation with McCarthy. President Dwight D. Eisenhower (Andrew Duggan) equivocates on defending his military mentor and close friend, Gen. George C. Marshall, from McCarthy's charges. Vice President Richard M. Nixon (Richard M. Dixon) appears briefly.

Sen. Margaret Chase Smith (Patricia Neal) takes him on in the Senate, but McCarthy stalks out. Columnist Drew Pearson (Robert F. Simon) is slugged by McCarthy for his opposition.

FORSYTHE said, "This character I play is an interesting cat. He's a critic, drinking companion and commentator on the scene. The complexity of the part interested me. I've been getting more parts like that. I'm tired of playing the straight leading man who gets the girl."

At the end of the film Miss Menzies observes that despite all the rhetoric, all the accusations, all the controversy, McCarthy "never turned up a single Communist in government."

PETER BOYLE (right) stars as the late Sen. Joseph McCarthy, and Richard M. Dixon has a small part as Richard M. Nixon in the new, three-hour TV movie "Tail Gunner Joe" on Ch. 4 at 8 p.m. Sunday.

SUSAN HAMPSHIRE stars as Glencora Palliser in the 22-part, British-made series "The Pallisers," the second episode of which airs at 9 p.m. Monday on Ch. 28.

Three-hour movie tonight tells story of McCarthy's witch hunt

By JERRY BUCK
Associated Press

"Tail Gunner Joe" is an enlightening — and frightening — television movie about the rise and fall of Sen. Joseph McCarthy.

His Communist-hunting tactics in the 1950s stirred fear and hatred, as well as admiration, and added "McCarthyism" to the vocabulary as a synonym for "publicized accusations of subversion without substantiation."

Peter Boyle delivers a stunning portrayal of the charming, enigmatic, opportunistic and, finally, self-destructive McCarthy in the three-hour "Tail Gunner Joe" on the NBC "Big Event" at 8 tonight (Channel 4). The ease with which he appears to bring off his accusations and cow his critics is frightening.

THE FILM is told through the device of a television reporter (Heather Menzies) digging up old sources who recall McCarthy's life in flashbacks and then reflect on it from an historical perspective.

It begins and ends with the 1954 Army-McCarthy hearings, where Burgess Meredith as Joseph Welch, the wily attorney who defended the Army against McCarthy's charges, pushes him toward his downfall.

The film is as objective as one can be about so controversial a figure, but it does take the viewpoint that McCarthy's anti-Communist crusade came not from conviction but from a desire to save himself from a re-election defeat by capitalizing on the issue.

"IN ANY objective appraisal of McCarthy you'd have to be anit-McCarthy," said John Forsythe, who plays a newspaper reporter who was a drinking buddy of McCarthy, publicized his sensational charges and pointed out his foibles. It is one of the few fictional roles in the film.

"I think now we can look back objectively and I think it's because of Watergate," said Forsythe. "I think this is the only country that can examine itself as we did with Watergate. It's inspired a whole spate of self-examinations. The time of McCarthy was a dramatic period — and I think there is some guilt involved."

Forsythe defends the role of the press to the young TV reporter, also a fictional character.

"McCARTHY was news and the press wasn't always responsible in that area," he said. "The press would blow up the wild statements and minimize the actions taken against him by responsible people."

Major figures from the period are portrayed. President Harry S. Truman (Robert Symonds) ducks a confrontation with McCarthy. President Dwight D. Eisenhower (Andrew Duggan) equivocates on defending his military mentor and close friend, Gen. George C. Marshall, from McCarthy's charges. Vice President Richard M. Nixon (Richard M. Dixon) appears briefly.

Sen. Margaret Chase Smith (Patricia Neal) takes him on in the Senate, but McCarthy stalks out. Columnist Drew Pearson (Robert F. Simon) is slugged by McCarthy for his opposition.

FORSYTHE said, "This character I play is an interesting cat. He's a critic, drinking companion and commentator on the scene. The complexity of the part interested me. I've been getting more parts like that. I'm tired of playing the straight leading man who gets the girl."

At the end of the film Miss Menzies observes that despite all the rhetoric, all the accusations, all the controversy, McCarthy "never turned up a single Communist in government."

PETER BOYLE (right) stars as the late Sen. Joseph McCarthy, and Richard M. Dixon has a small part as Richard M. Nixon in the new, three-hour TV movie "Tail Gunner Joe" on Ch. 4 at 8 p.m. Sunday.

SUSAN HAMPSHIRE stars as Glencora Palliser in the 22-part, British-made series "The Pallisers," the second episode of which airs at 9 p.m. Monday on Ch. 28.

JAMES CAAN stars in the 1975 movie "Rollerball," which makes its TV debut at 9 p.m. Wednesday on Ch. 2.

THE BIBLE Says

J. T. SMITH

"JUDGE NOT" (Matt. 7:1-2)

Many misunderstand the teachings of the Lord in these passages believing that the Lord is forbidding anyone to ever be able to say that another is wrong or teaching false doctrine. These passages, nor the Bible, teach this.

The word "judge" in the above passage carries with it the meaning of "condemn" or harsh censorious judgment. Jesus here forbids censuring others hastily and without love. For, in doing this, we invite the severe judgment of others on ourselves (Rom. 2:1).

Paul says in 1 Cor. 6:2 that the "saints shall judge the world." The fact of the matter is, that when we endeavor to show another his mistakes, as we point them out from the Bible, we are not placing personal judgments on these matters — but we are simply restating the Lord's judgments on the matter. For example, the apostle Paul said he was judging regarding the man who had his father's wife in 1 Cor. 5:1-3. But whose judgment was it? He said it was by the authority of the Lord Jesus Christ that he gave the instruction for the congregation to withdraw from that person. Hence, if one is violating some teaching of Christ or the apostles in word or deed and we call attention to the fact that they must quit that practice or be lost, it is not our judgment, but Christ's.

Also, knowing that the Lord does not contradict himself, it is obvious from Matt. 7:15-16 that He is not condemning our examining the teachings and practices of others and exposing error. "Beware of false prophets, who come to you in sheep's clothing, but inwardly are ravening wolves. By their fruits ye shall know them." Thus when one teaches a thing that is contrary to the Bible and it is obvious to every honest person, then we are not judging, but simply inspecting the fruit. And if fruit is rotten, we expose it by God's Word, and discard it. We urge you to do the same.

Roz Kelly finds there's thin line between stardom and heartbreak

By GARY DEEB
Chicago Tribune

A few months ago she was headed straight for the top, an overnight sensation whose appearances on "Happy Days," the most popular program on television, were seen by 60 million viewers a week.

For awhile it looked as though she'd become a regular on that show, as a sort of female equivalent of Fonzie, the macho greaser with girls at his command and a fast answer to most of life's problems.

Later she seemed to be a shoo-in to go even further — as the star of her own weekly show.

But, today, those blue-sky dreams have vanished for Roz Kelly. The girl who played Pinky Tuscadero is the victim of a series of strange circumstances that have put her career at a standstill.

"ROZ HAS a very special magic," says "Happy Days" producer Garry Marshall. "It's just a matter of finding the right spot to use it."

That testimonial notwithstanding, the fact remains that Miss Kelly, who not long ago thought she was destined for stardom, now finds herself in a cruel limbo. She's not sure what will happen next. Her future is on "hold."

It's an intriguing story and a textbook example of the fragile nature of show business, particularly TV.

One day you're nobody; the next day you're the lightning rod for coast-to-coast gossip and adulation. For Roz Kelly, it's already back to "nobody" status, though perhaps only temporarily.

IT ALL STARTED last spring when ABC program whiz Fred Silverman "discovered" Roz in the pilot episode of the "Lorenzo and Henrietta Music Show," a dreadful talk-variety series that died after just three weeks on the air.

Large-busted and pretty, Miss Kelly attracted Silverman's interest as a potential idol of the children and teenagers who make up a huge segment of ABC's nightly audience.

Just like that, Silverman and producer Marshall decided to hire her to get "Happy Days" off to a roaring start for its new fall season. Plucked from obscurity, Miss Kelly became Pinky Tuscadero, the motorcycle riding doll who almost married Fonzie.

THE TROUBLES OF ROZ KELLY

AND ALTHOUGH she played her part well and boosted the ratings of "Happy Days," Roz also suffered her first surprise setback.

"Our original idea was to possibly make Roz a regular or a semiregular on the show," Marshall explains. "But we got such a tremendous flow of mail from viewers who didn't want Fonzie to have a steady girl.

"Our audience got very nervous. You see, Pinky was a hit with the viewers, but they didn't want her to be Fonzie's girl. They wanted him to keep spreading himself around with a lot of girls, so they could continue to fantasize about the Fonz."

AS THE protest mail poured in, ABC also screened the Pinky episodes for "test audiences" in New York, Chicago, Los Angeles and other cities. The conclusion was the same:

The Fonz should play the field.

Meanwhile, Roz and Henry Winkler, who plays Fonzie, weren't exactly becoming fast friends in real life. One reliable report has it that Winkler handed his producers an ultimatum — either Kelly goes or he walks.

WITH ALL those strikes against her, Roz quickly was written out of "Happy Days." But ABC still was impressed with her prospects as a major TV star and so the network ordered a pilot called "Pinky," in which the character becomes a Las Vegas showgirl.

Unfortunately, the project was high on glamour and low on laughs. ABC passed on it.

Then, a crazy twist of fate: ABC's "Nancy Walker Show" was doing poorly in the ratings, but the network wanted to save Miss Walker by placing her in a new program. The Las Vegas pilot was revived, this time with Nancy starring as a den mother to a group of chorus girls and Roz co-starring as Pinky.

The series was retitled "Blansky's Beauties" and set for Saturday nights (it begins this week).

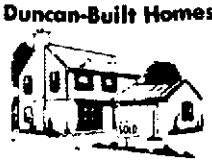

EVERYBODY, finally, seemed happy. It didn't last long, however, because Miss Walker reportedly wanted Roz out of the show.

And that's precisely what's happening. Miss Kelly will "guest star" in the first two "Blansky" episodes, then drop out of sight as Miss Walker becomes the absolute star of the show.

What it all means is that Roz Kelly, who thought she had caught the proverbial lightning in a bottle just a few months ago, now is looking for work.

Sometimes superstardom and heartbreak are just inches apart.

THE BIBLE Says

J. T. SMITH

"JUDGE NOT" (Matt. 7:1-2)

Many misunderstand the teachings of the Lord in these passages believing that the Lord is forbidding anyone to ever be able to say that another is wrong or teaching false doctrine. These passages, nor the Bible, teach this.

The word "judge" in the above passage carries with it the meaning of "condemn" or harsh censorious judgment. Jesus here forbids censuring others hastily and without love. For, in doing this, we invite the severe judgment of others on ourselves (Rom. 2:1).

Paul says in 1 Cor. 6:2 that the "saints shall judge the world." The fact of the matter is, that when we endeavor to show another his mistakes, as we point them out from the Bible, we are not placing personal judgments on these matters — but we are simply restating the Lord's judgments on the matter. For example, the apostle Paul said he was judging regarding the man who had his father's wife in 1 Cor. 5:1-3. But whose judgment was it? He said it was by the authority of the Lord Jesus Christ that he gave the instruction for the congregation to withdraw from that person. Hence, if one is violating some teaching of Christ or the apostles in word or deed and we call attention to the fact that they must quit that practice or be lost, it is not our judgment, but Christ's.

Also, knowing that the Lord does not contradict himself, it is obvious from Matt. 7:15-16 that He is not condemning our examining the teachings and practices of others and exposing error. "Beware of false prophets, who come to you in sheep's clothing, but inwardly are ravening wolves. By their fruits ye shall know them." Thus when one teaches a thing that is contrary to the Bible and it is obvious to every honest person, then we are not judging, but simply inspecting the fruit. And if fruit is rotten, we expose it by God's Word, and discard it. We urge you to do the same.

Roz Kelly finds there's thin line between stardom and heartbreak

By GARY DEEB
Chicago Tribune

A few months ago she was headed straight for the top, an overnight sensation whose appearances on "Happy Days," the most popular program on television, were seen by 60 million viewers a week.

For awhile it looked as though she'd become a regular on that show, as a sort of female equivalent of Fonzie, the macho greaser with girls at his command and a fast answer to most of life's problems.

Later she seemed to be a shoo-in to go even further — as the star of her own weekly show.

But, today, those blue-sky dreams have vanished for Roz Kelly. The girl who played Pinky Tuscadero is the victim of a series of strange circumstances that have put her career at a standstill.

"ROZ HAS a very special magic," says "Happy Days" producer Garry Marshall. "It's just a matter of finding the right spot to use it."

That testimonial notwithstanding, the fact remains that Miss Kelly, who not long ago thought she was destined for stardom, now finds herself in a cruel limbo. She's not sure what will happen next. Her future is on "hold."

It's an intriguing story and a textbook example of the fragile nature of show business, particularly TV.

One day you're nobody; the next day you're the lightning rod for coast-to-coast gossip and adulation. For Roz Kelly, it's already back to "nobody" status, though perhaps only temporarily.

IT ALL STARTED last spring when ABC program whiz Fred Silverman "discovered" Roz in the pilot episode of the "Lorenzo and Henrietta Music Show," a dreadful talk-variety series that died after just three weeks on the air.

Large-busted and pretty, Miss Kelly attracted Silverman's interest as a potential idol of the children and teenagers who make up a huge segment of ABC's nightly audience.

Just like that, Silverman and producer Marshall decided to hire her to get "Happy Days" off to a roaring start for its new fall season. Plucked from obscurity, Miss Kelly became Pinky Tuscadero, the motorcycle riding doll who almost married Fonzie.

THE TROUBLES OF ROZ KELLY

AND ALTHOUGH she played her part well and boosted the ratings of "Happy Days," Roz also suffered her first surprise setback.

"Our original idea was to possibly make Roz a regular or a semiregular on the show," Marshall explains. "But we got such a tremendous flow of mail from viewers who didn't want Fonzie to have a steady girl.

"Our audience got very nervous. You see, Pinky was a hit with the viewers, but they didn't want her to be Fonzie's girl. They wanted him to keep spreading himself around with a lot of girls, so they could continue to fantasize about the Fonz."

AS THE protest mail poured in, ABC also screened the Pinky episodes for "test audiences" in New York, Chicago, Los Angeles and other cities. The conclusion was the same:

The Fonz should play the field.

Meanwhile, Roz and Henry Winkler, who plays Fonzie, weren't exactly becoming fast friends in real life. One reliable report has it that Winkler handed his producers an ultimatum — either Kelly goes or he walks.

WITH ALL those strikes against her, Roz quickly was written out of "Happy Days." But ABC still was impressed with her prospects as a major TV star and so the network ordered a pilot called "Pinky," in which the character becomes a Las Vegas showgirl.

Unfortunately, the project was high on glamour and low on laughs. ABC passed on it.

Then, a crazy twist of fate: ABC's "Nancy Walker Show" was doing poorly in the ratings, but the network wanted to save Miss Walker by placing her in a new program. The Las Vegas pilot was revived, this time with Nancy starring as a den mother to a group of chorus girls and Roz co-starring as Pinky.

The series was retitled "Blansky's Beauties" and set for Saturday nights (it begins this week).

EVERYBODY, finally, seemed happy. It didn't last long, however, because Miss Walker reportedly wanted Roz out of the show.

And that's precisely what's happening. Miss Kelly will "guest star" in the first two "Blansky" episodes, then drop out of sight as Miss Walker becomes the absolute star of the show.

What it all means is that Roz Kelly thought she had caught the proverbial lightning in a bottle just a few months ago, now is looking for work.

Sometimes superstardom and heartbreak are just inches apart.

Guess who's coming to dinner?

If you're lucky, it's just a burglar who's come only to steal. If you're not so lucky, it's a homicidal maniac who'll take nothing less than your life.

This sort of urban violence goes on day and night, even in nice neighborhoods like yours. And the police can't do much to stop it. So you better find out how to protect yourself.

Jerry Dunphy can help you. All this week he'll show simple and inexpensive methods of safeguarding your home...and your life.

Watch the Eyewitness Closeup "How To Beat the Bad Guys" every night this week at 6 o'clock on Channel 7.

It could be a lifesaver.

Is it worth buying a color television?

We're a nation of owners. So why rent an everyday appliance?

But consider a moment. What benefits do you derive from owning a color television? A down payment, and interest charges on the balance while you pay the set off. Or a big cash payment, losing interest from your savings. And forever after, you still have repair bills. Potentially expensive repairs.

Rentacolor changes all that. No down payment. No interest charges, just our reasonable monthly rental.

And no repair or service bills. None, ever. Rentacolor provides free service and repair by courteous, company-trained technicians. Guaranteed.

Why would anyone want to buy a color television?

Guess who's coming to dinner?

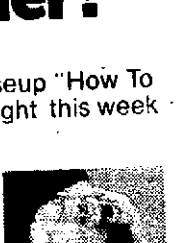

If you're lucky, it's just a burglar who's come only to steal. If you're not so lucky, it's a homicidal maniac who'll take nothing less than your life.

This sort of urban violence goes on day and night, even in nice neighborhoods like yours. And the police can't do much to stop it. So you better find out how to protect yourself.

Jerry Dunphy can help you. All this week he'll show simple and inexpensive methods of safeguarding your home...and your life.

Watch the Eyewitness Closeup "How To Beat the Bad Guys" every night this week at 6 o'clock on Channel 7.
It could be a lifesaver.

Is it worth buying a color television?

We're a nation of owners. So why rent an everyday appliance?

But consider a moment. What benefits do you derive from owning a color television? A down payment, and interest charges on the balance while you pay the set off. Or a big cash payment, losing interest from your savings. And forever after, you still have repair bills. Potentially expensive repairs.

Rentacolor changes all that. No down payment. No interest charges, just our reasonable monthly rental.

And no repair or service bills. None, ever. Rentacolor provides free service and repair by courteous, company-trained technicians. Guaranteed.

Why would anyone want to buy a color television?

"BARGAIN" CARPET
CAN COST TOO MUCH

Some people think they save money when they buy the "inexpensive" carpet for their home.
THE TRUTH IS it costs as much to install "cheap" carpet as to custom install the best . . . and when you buy better carpet it lasts longer — as much as twice the wear. So you really pay less in the long run.

"BARGAIN" CARPET
CAN COST TOO MUCH
Some people think they save money when they buy the "inexpensive" carpet for their home.
THE TRUTH IS it costs as much to install "cheap" carpet as to custom install the best . . . and when you buy better carpet it lasts longer — as much as twice the wear.
So you really pay less in the long run.

GEN. DOUGLAS MacARTHUR IN 1946 WITH WIFE JEAN

Q. What does Mrs. Douglas MacArthur think of the film made of her husband, Gen. MacArthur, by a Hollywood studio?—Steve Conkovich, Granite City, Ill.
A. Mrs. Jean MacArthur says she has always been opposed to such a movie, has no connection with it at all, thinks no movie can do justice to the general's career.

Q. Can you tell me the true reason why the Shah of Iran has paid $18 million for the Italian luxury liners Michelangelo and Raffaello? Each of them can carry 1500 passengers. Surely, no man wants two yachts that big.—G.F., Chicago.
A. The Shah did not purchase the two luxury liners for his personal use. He bought them for the purpose of turning them into seagoing hotels for his officers and their families. Upon refitting, they will become part of the Iranian Navy.

JACKIE ONASSIS

Q. If Jackie Onassis is ever foolish enough to marry again, would she lose the $250,000 she gets tax-free each year from the Onassis estate? Also, how much is she worth?—Vinnie Byrd, Montauk, N.Y.
A. Marriage would cost Jackie the bulk of her inheritance from Onassis. She is said to be worth in the vicinity of $3 million.

Q. Sal Mineo, the young actor who was murdered in front of his Hollywood apartment last year—has any progress been made in finding his murderer?—Janice Gershenson, Newark, N.J.
A. To date, practically none.

Q. Is it a fact that H. John Heinz, heir to the pickle and ketchup fortune, spent $5 million to be elected U.S. Senator from Pennsylvania? Has any other Senatorial candidate come near spending that much?—G.T., Lancaster, Pa.
A. H. John Heinz (R., Pa.) spent $2.93 million in the 1976 campaign. Of that amount, only $540,000 came from outside contributions. Heinz set a new record for campaign spending since the federal campaign finance disclosure law came into being in April 1972. The previous campaign spending record was established in 1972 by John R. Tower (R., Tex.), who spent $2.3 million getting himself reelected.

Q. There has been so much gossip about the love affair between the late Franklin D. Roosevelt and Lucy Mercer Rutherfurd, his wife's secretary, that I really do not know how much is truth and how much is gossip. Is there any reliable book that tells the truth?—Mrs. G.H.K., Hickory, N.C.
A. One of the fairest and most authoritative is "My Parents: A Differing View," by James Roosevelt and Bill Libby. Apparently FDR fell in love with Lucy Mercer, the affair endured until his death, and it changed considerably the character of his marriage to Eleanor Roosevelt.

CYRUS VANCE

Q. Cyrus Vance, the Secretary of State—can you tell us what boards and clubs he sits on and whether he will resign from all? —K.L., Larchmont, N.Y.
A. Cyrus Vance sat on the boards of The New York Times, IBM, Pan Am, a Lehman Brothers mutual fund, Yale University trustees, the Rockefeller Foundation, Presbyterian Hospital of New York. He is a member of the Century Association and Links Club in New York, the Metropolitan Club in Washington. He has resigned from all the above boards and says he will resign from any "non-integrated" club.

Q. Can you verify whether Rudolf Nureyev, who defected from the Kirov Ballet in Leningrad 15 years ago, is moving to Hollywood?—Flora H., Miami, Fla.
A. Nureyev, who resides in London, recently finished starring in the film "Valentino." If the picture is any good, he may receive Hollywood offers. In that event, he would consider leaving England, where the tax bite is heavier than it is here.

FIRST WIFE,CYNTHIA, AND BEATLE JOHN LENNON IN 1966

Q. Some weeks ago Cynthia Lennon, first wife of Beatle John Lennon, criticized him as an irresponsible father in a magazine article. Lennon replied in a blistering letter that was made public. What did he have to say about her charges that they took drug trips and so forth?—D.Y., Swampscott, Mass.
A. Lennon wrote: "As you and I well know, our marriage was over long before the advent of LSD or Yoko Ono.

"Your memory is impaired, to say the least. Your version of our first LSD trips is rather vague. You seem to have forgotten subsequent trips altogether.

"You also seem to have forgotten that only two years ago, while I was separated from Yoko Ono, you suddenly brought Julian [Lennon's son by Cynthia] to see me in Los Angeles after three years of silence.

"During this visit you didn't allow me to be alone with him for one moment. You even asked me to remarry you or give you another child 'for Julian's sake.'

"Finally, I don't blame you for wanting to get away from your Beatle past, but if you are serious about it you should try to avoid talking to and posing for magazines and newspapers.

"We did have some good years, so dwell on them for a change."

Cynthia is married to engineer John Twist, lives in North Wales. Lennon, Yoko and their son Sean live in New York City.

Q. Why is Sen. Barry Goldwater getting divorced after all these years, or is it his brother Bob who is getting unhitched?—G.L., Tucson, Ariz.
A. It is Senator Goldwater's son, Rep. Barry Goldwater Jr., and his wife Susan who have decided upon a trial separation after four years and one son. Susan, mother of 22-month-old Barry 3rd, is managing Previews, Inc., a real estate firm in Washington, D.C., while Goldwater continues to represent his California district.

INDEPENDENT PRESS-TELEGRAM

PARADE'S SPECIAL

INTELLIGENCE REPORT

by LLOYD SHEARER

BECAUSE OF VOLUME OF MAIL RECEIVED, PARADE REGRETS IT CANNOT ANSWER QUERIES ABOUT THIS COLUMN.

CARTER TO TED KENNEDY: "... THERE WILL BE TIME FOR YOU AFTER I'VE SERVED EIGHT YEARS IN THE WHITE HOUSE."

CARTER'S CAMP

Political aficionados who like to collect golden nuggets of inside information will find "Convention," a new book by Richard Reeves, a treasury of revealing tidbits.

For example, during the Democratic National Convention, screen star Warren Beatty offered to organize a "Stars for Carter" committee after his first two choices--Sen. Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts and Gov. Jerry Brown of California--were shot down. "Thanks," said Jerry Rafshoon, one of Jimmy Carter's major media advisers, "but we don't take sloppy thirds."

Jimmy Carter's most influential friend at the convention was Charles Kirbo, the slow-talking Atlanta attorney from King & Spalding, who is still his most influential adviser. When Kirbo wanted five tickets to see "A Chorus Line," the Broadway musical hit of the season, "...within 10 minutes the public relations man for the show's producer, Joseph Papp, called back. Five of the best orchestra seats were no problem at all. Mr. Papp would come to the theater himself to make sure that Mr. Kirbo and his party were comfortable...."

When Carter started to search for a running mate, "those closest to him were convinced that he was going to choose Sen. Frank Church of Idaho. But when Carter went through the motions of telephoning '30 distinguished Americans' for their opinions of the men on his list, he kept hearing that Church was something of a windbag--the actual words were more polite. The men he kept getting good reports on were Walter Mondale, [Sen. John] Glenn and sometimes Sen. Edmund Muskie of Maine."

Among those who received phone calls from Carter, Kirbo and Hamilton Jordan about possible Vice Presidential candidates were Ralph Nader, John Gardner, Derek Bok (President of Harvard), Kingman Brewster Jr. (President of Yale), James Reston of The New York Times and Franklin D. Roosevelt Jr.

One of Carter's most effective money-raisers was Phil Walden of Macon, Ga., president of Capricorn Records, who used the Allman Brothers and other performers to promote $850,000 for Jimmy.

"On the day Carter announced his candidacy for President, Dec. 12, 1974 --at the time, it hardly seemed a date worth remembering--he stopped by [Ted] Kennedy's office to ask the 42-year-old Senator's plans. Kennedy told Carter the same thing he had been telling the newspapers, that under no circumstances would he run. 'That's good,' Carter replied, 'because there will be time for you after I've served eight years in the White House.'"

Reeves employed a half dozen reporters to help him cover the 1976 Democratic National Convention, and their combined coverage makes for information and titillation.

MOST FEARED DISEASES

A special Gallup Poll reveals that cancer is the disease most feared by the American public, followed by blindness and heart disease.

The 1976 poll, covering 1548 persons across the country, shows the following breakdown of diseases and ailments most feared:

1. Cancer...58%
2. Blindness...21%
3. Heart disease...10%
4. Arthritis...2%
5. Polio...2%
6. Loss of limb...2%
7. Tuberculosis...1%
8. Deafness...1%
9. Undecided...3%

OLYMPIC GAMES PRESS CENTER

To attract newswriters from everywhere, Soviet authorities announced recently that they will build a gigantic press center to accommodate journalists covering the 1980 Olympic Games in Moscow.

According to Tass, the official Soviet news agency, the main press center will be erected on Zubovsky Boulevard, 10 minutes away by bus from Lenin Central Stadium in Luzhniki Park, where about a third of the events will be staged.

The press center will offer a 500-seat auditorium, Tass says, plus TV and radio studios, accreditation offices, photo labs, a TV theater, and a rental and repair shop for equipment. Journalists will also be serviced by an automated computer system, "Olympiad," which will provide them with instant information on all Olympic events. In addition, a vast communications center -- 2000 square yards -- will feed stories to the world via telephone, teleprinter, telex and facsimile facilities.

Foreign journalists who have worked in the Soviet Union say they'll believe the press center when they see it.

GEN. DOUGLAS MacARTHUR IN 1946 WITH WIFE JEAN

Q. What does Mrs. Douglas MacArthur think of the film made of her husband, Gen. MacArthur, by a Hollywood studio?—Steve Conkovich, Granite City, Ill.

A. Mrs. Jean MacArthur says she has always been opposed to such a movie, has no connection with it at all, thinks no movie can do justice to the general's career.

Q. Can you tell me the true reason why the Shah of Iran has paid $18 million for the Italian luxury liners Michelangelo and Raffaello? Each of them can carry 1500 passengers. Surely, no man wants two yachts that big.—G.F., Chicago.

A. The Shah did not purchase the two luxury liners for his personal use. He bought them for the purpose of turning them into seagoing hotels for his officers and their families. Upon refitting, they will become part of the Iranian Navy.

JACKIE ONASSIS

Q. If Jackie Onassis is ever foolish enough to marry again, would she lose the $250,000 she gets tax-free each year from the Onassis estate? Also, how much is she worth?—Vinnie Byrd, Montauk, N.Y.

A. Marriage would cost Jackie the bulk of her inheritance from Onassis. She is said to be worth in the vicinity of $3 million.

Q. Sal Mineo, the young actor who was murdered in front of his Hollywood apartment last year—has any progress been made in finding his murderer?—Janice Gershenson, Newark, N.J.

A. To date, practically none.

Q. Is it a fact that H. John Heinz, heir to the pickle and ketchup fortune, spent $5 million to be elected U.S. Senator from Pennsylvania? Has any other Senatorial candidate come near spending that much?—G.T., Lancaster, Pa.

A. H. John Heinz (R., Pa.) spent $2.93 million in the 1976 campaign. Of that amount, only $540,000 came from outside contributions. Heinz set a new record for campaign spending since the federal campaign finance disclosure law came into being in April 1972. The previous campaign spending record was established in 1972 by John R. Tower (R., Tex.), who spent $2.3 million getting himself reelected.

Q. There has been so much gossip about the love affair between the late Franklin D. Roosevelt and Lucy Mercer Rutherfurd, his wife's secretary, that I really do not know how much is truth and how much is gossip. Is there any reliable book that tells the truth?—Mrs. G.H.K., Hickory, N.C.

A. One of the fairest and most authoritative is "My Parents: A Differing View," by James Roosevelt and Bill Libby. Apparently FDR fell in love with Lucy Mercer, the affair endured until his death, and it changed considerably the character of his marriage to Eleanor Roosevelt.

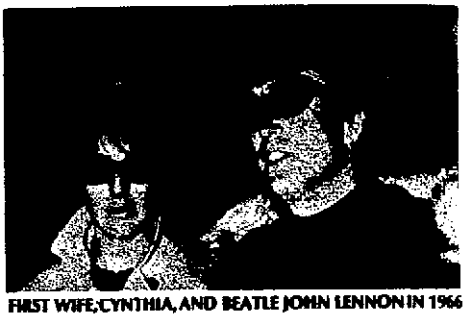

CYRUS VANCE

Q. Cyrus Vance, the Secretary of State—can you tell us what boards and clubs he sits on and whether he will resign from all?—K.L., Larchmont, N.Y.

A. Cyrus Vance sat on the boards of The New York Times, IBM, Pan Am, a Lehman Brothers mutual fund, Yale University trustees, the Rockefeller Foundation, Presbyterian Hospital of New York. He is a member of the Century Association and Links Club in New York, the Metropolitan Club in Washington. He has resigned from all the above boards and says he will resign from any "non-integrated" club.

Q. Can you verify whether Rudolf Nureyev, who defected from the Kirov Ballet in Leningrad 15 years ago, is moving to Hollywood?—Flora H., Miami, Fla.

A. Nureyev, who resides in London, recently finished starring in the film "Valentino." If the picture is any good, he may receive Hollywood offers. In that event, he would consider leaving England, where the tax bite is heavier than it is here.

FIRST WIFE, CYNTHIA, AND BEATLE JOHN LENNON IN 1966

Q. Some weeks ago Cynthia Lennon, first wife of Beatle John Lennon, criticized him as an irresponsible father in a magazine article. Lennon replied in a blistering letter that was made public. What did he have to say about her charges that they took drug trips and so forth?—D.Y., Swampscott, Mass.

A. Lennon wrote: "As you and I well know, our marriage was over long before the advent of LSD or Yoko Ono.

"Your memory is impaired, to say the least. Your version of our first LSD trips is rather vague. You seem to have forgotten subsequent trips altogether.

"You also seem to have forgotten that only two years ago, while I was separated from Yoko Ono, you suddenly brought Julian [Lennon's son by Cynthia] to see me in Los Angeles after three years of silence.

"During this visit you didn't allow me to be alone with him for one moment. You even asked me to remarry you or give you another child 'for Julian's sake.'

"Finally, I don't blame you for wanting to get away from your Beatle past, but if you are serious about it you should try to avoid talking to and posing for magazines and newspapers.

"We did have some good years, so dwell on them for a change."

Cynthia is married to engineer John Twist, lives in North Wales. Lennon, Yoko and their son Sean live in New York City.

Q. Why is Sen. Barry Goldwater getting divorced after all these years, or is it his brother Bob who is getting unhitched?—G.L., Tucson, Ariz.

A. It is Senator Goldwater's son, Rep. Barry Goldwater Jr., and his wife Susan who have decided upon a trial separation after four years and one son. Susan, mother of 22-month-old Barry 3rd, is managing Previews, Inc., a real estate firm in Washington, D.C., while Goldwater continues to represent his California district.

WILD VALENTINE FOR YOUR WILD GUY

In his wildest dreams, your man probably wouldn't expect a Valentine's Day greeting like this. Isn't that the best reason in the world to surprise him with the great Wild Turkey?

PARADE'S SPECIAL

INTELLIGENCE REPORT

by LLOYD SHEARER

BECAUSE OF VOLUME OF MAIL RECEIVED, PARADE REGRETS IT CANNOT ANSWER QUERIES ABOUT THIS COLUMN.

CARTER TO TED KENNEDY: "... THERE WILL BE TIME FOR YOU AFTER I'VE SERVED EIGHT YEARS IN THE WHITE HOUSE."

CARTER'S CAMP Political aficionados who like to collect golden nuggets of inside information will find "Convention," a new book by Richard Reeves, a treasury of revealing tidbits.

For example, during the Democratic National Convention, screen star Warren Beatty offered to organize a "Stars for Carter" committee after his first two choices--Sen. Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts and Gov. Jerry Brown of California--were shot down. "Thanks," said Jerry Rafshoon, one of Jimmy Carter's major media advisers, "but we don't take sloppy thirds."

Jimmy Carter's most influential friend at the convention was Charles Kirbo, the slow-talking Atlanta attorney from King & Spalding, who is still his most influential adviser. When Kirbo wanted five tickets to see "A Chorus Line," the Broadway musical hit of the season, "...within 10 minutes the public relations man for the show's producer, Joseph Papp, called back. Five of the best orchestra seats were no problem at all. Mr. Papp would come to the theater himself to make sure that Mr. Kirbo and his party were comfortable...."

When Carter started to search for a running mate, "those closest to him were convinced that he was going to choose Sen. Frank Church of Idaho. But when Carter went through the motions of telephoning '30 distinguished Americans' for their opinions of the men on his list, he kept hearing that Church was something of a windbag--the actual words were more polite. The men he kept getting good reports on were Walter Mondale, [Sen. John] Glenn and sometimes Sen. Edmund Muskie of Maine."

Among those who received phone calls from Carter, Kirbo and Hamilton Jordan about possible Vice Presidential candidates were Ralph Nader, John Gardner, Derek Bok (President of Harvard), Kingman Brewster Jr. (President of Yale), James Reston of The New York Times and Franklin D. Roosevelt Jr.

One of Carter's most effective money-raisers was Phil Walden of Macon, Ga., president of Capricorn Records, who used the Allman Brothers and other performers to promote $850,000 for Jimmy.

"On the day Carter announced his candidacy for President, Dec. 12, 1974 --at the time, it hardly seemed a date worth remembering--he stopped by [Ted] Kennedy's office to ask the 42-year-old Senator's plans. Kennedy told Carter the same thing he had been telling the newspapers, that under no circumstances would he run. 'That's good,' Carter replied, 'because there will be time for you after I've served eight years in the White House.'"

Reeves employed a half dozen reporters to help him cover the 1976 Democratic National Convention, and their combined coverage makes for information and titillation.

OLYMPIC GAMES PRESS CENTER To attract newswriters from everywhere, Soviet authorities announced recently that they will build a gigantic press cent r to accommodate journalists covering the 1980 Olympic Games in Moscow.

According to Tass, the official Soviet news agency, the main press center will be erected on Zubovsky Boulevard, 10 minutes away by bus from Lenin Central Stadium in Luzhniki Park, where about a third of the events will be staged.

The press center will offer a 500-seat auditorium, Tass says, plus TV and radio studios, accreditation offices, photo labs, a TV theater, and a rental and repair shop for equipment. Journalists will also be serviced by an automated computer system, "Olympiad," which will provide them with instant information on all Olympic events. In addition, a vast communications center -- 2000 square yards -- will feed stories to the world via telephone, teleprinter, telex and facsimile facilities.

Foreign journalists who have worked in the Soviet Union say they'll believe the press center when they see it.

HALFWAY ROUND THE WORLD, SOLO: MRS. KRYSTYNA CHOJNOWSKA-LISKIEWICZ OF POLAND IN SYDNEY, AUSTRALIA, WITH HER SLOOP (IN BACKGROUND)

UNSUNG HEROINE In 1966, when Francis Chichester of England arrived in Sydney, Australia, on his successful round-the-world solo trip in his boat, Gypsy Moth, he was hailed as one of the great sailors of all time and subsequently knighted.

A few weeks ago, a 40-year-old Polish woman named Krystyna Chojnowska-Liskiewicz sailed halfway round the world in her single-masted boat, Mazurek, unnoticed and unpublicized.

The first woman to do it alone, she began her trip in the Canary Islands, sailed across the Atlantic, through the Panama Canal, then to Tahiti, Fiji and Sydney, Australia. Next week she sets out on the return trip from Australia to Europe.

"I had nothing for company," says Mrs. Chojnowska-Liskiewicz, who is married to a boat-builder in Gdynia, "except a yellow teddy bear called Albatross and a tiny doll called Seagull."

When she arrived in Sydney this past December, there were no officials to meet her, a marked contrast to the fanfare which greeted Francis Chichester 10 years ago.

Mrs. Chojnowska-Liskiewicz is a naval architect herself and was chosen for the trip by the Polish Yachting Federation.

NEW SOVIET WEAPONS Do the Soviets want military parity or military superiority? That is one of the key questions President Jimmy Carter and his intelligence advisers will have to decide upon in the months to come.

The word from U.S. intelligence sources in Europe is that the Soviets are arming their forces in East Germany for the first time with a new antiaircraft missile system designed to destroy low-flying enemy planes.

The Soviet SA-8 radar-guided system fires two missiles simultaneously at a single target.

It is the second advanced weapon the Russians have moved into East Germany in recent months. The first was the T-72 tank, which rolled into East Germany last November. The T-72 is heavily armored against antitank missiles and can fire accurately while on the move, which many U.S. tanks cannot do.

Until a few months ago, the Soviets refused to deploy the SA-8 antiaircraft missile and the T-72 outside the Soviet Union.

What does this mean -- that the Soviets are bolstering their air- and ground-defense systems in East Germany or building up their offensive capability? Probably both.

U.S. INDIANS STERILIZED Thousands of American Indian women have been sterilized by the Indian Health Service (IHS) without properly consenting to their sterilization.

A report by the General Accounting Office reveals that 3400 Indians were sterilized during a four-year period in the four areas surveyed alone and suggests that the total probably goes much higher.

The GAO report covers Albuquerque, N. Mex.; Phoenix, Ariz.; Aberdeen, S. Dak., and Oklahoma City, Okla. Sen. James Abourezk (D., S. Dak.) asked the GAO to look into the situation after receiving many complaints about the surgery. Apparently many Indian women consented to sterilization believing that the operation was mandatory instead of optional. More complete explanations should have been made.

LABOR BEFORE LEISURE In a national referendum, the hard-working Swiss people recently rejected a proposal to reduce their working week from 48 hours to 40. In the same referendum, they supported the government's right to continue supervising prices.

Of all the nations in the world, Switzerland has the soundest currency and one of the best records for continued labor peace.

OIL TANKER SAFETY The trans-Alaska $8 billion pipeline will be finished sometime this year. But questions of oil tanker safety will apparently persist.

As the supertankers ply their way southward from Port Valdez to Washington, Oregon or California, how many accidents are likely?

One study recently completed in Alaska, based on statistical analyses of tanker safety elsewhere, holds that at least 20 major accidents are likely, with spillage of more than 3 million gallons of oil.

Valdez Harbor has a navigation hazard known as "Middle Rock," which is located in the center of the 6000-foot-wide channel and, according to a second report, "poses a psychological barrier" for some pilots.

In December the tanker Argo Merchant, flying the Liberian flag, broke apart off Nantucket, Mass., dumping most of its 7.6 million gallons of heavy industrial oil into the North Atlantic.

Can you imagine what 20 such accidents would do to the Alaska-to-California shoreline?

ARGO MERCHANT, WITH 7.6 MILLION GALLONS OF OIL, BREAKS APART OFF NANTUCKET

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat in the yard of his villa 15 miles from Cairo and seven minutes by a helicopter that was presented to him by Nixon as a gift.

An Interview With Egyptian President Sadat:

Peace Prospects Are Better Than Ever

by George Michaelson

Sadat with his second wife, Jihan. They have three married daughters and a son. Mrs. Sadat is progressive-minded and tends to be an advocate for women's rights. She is in her third year of studies at Cairo University.

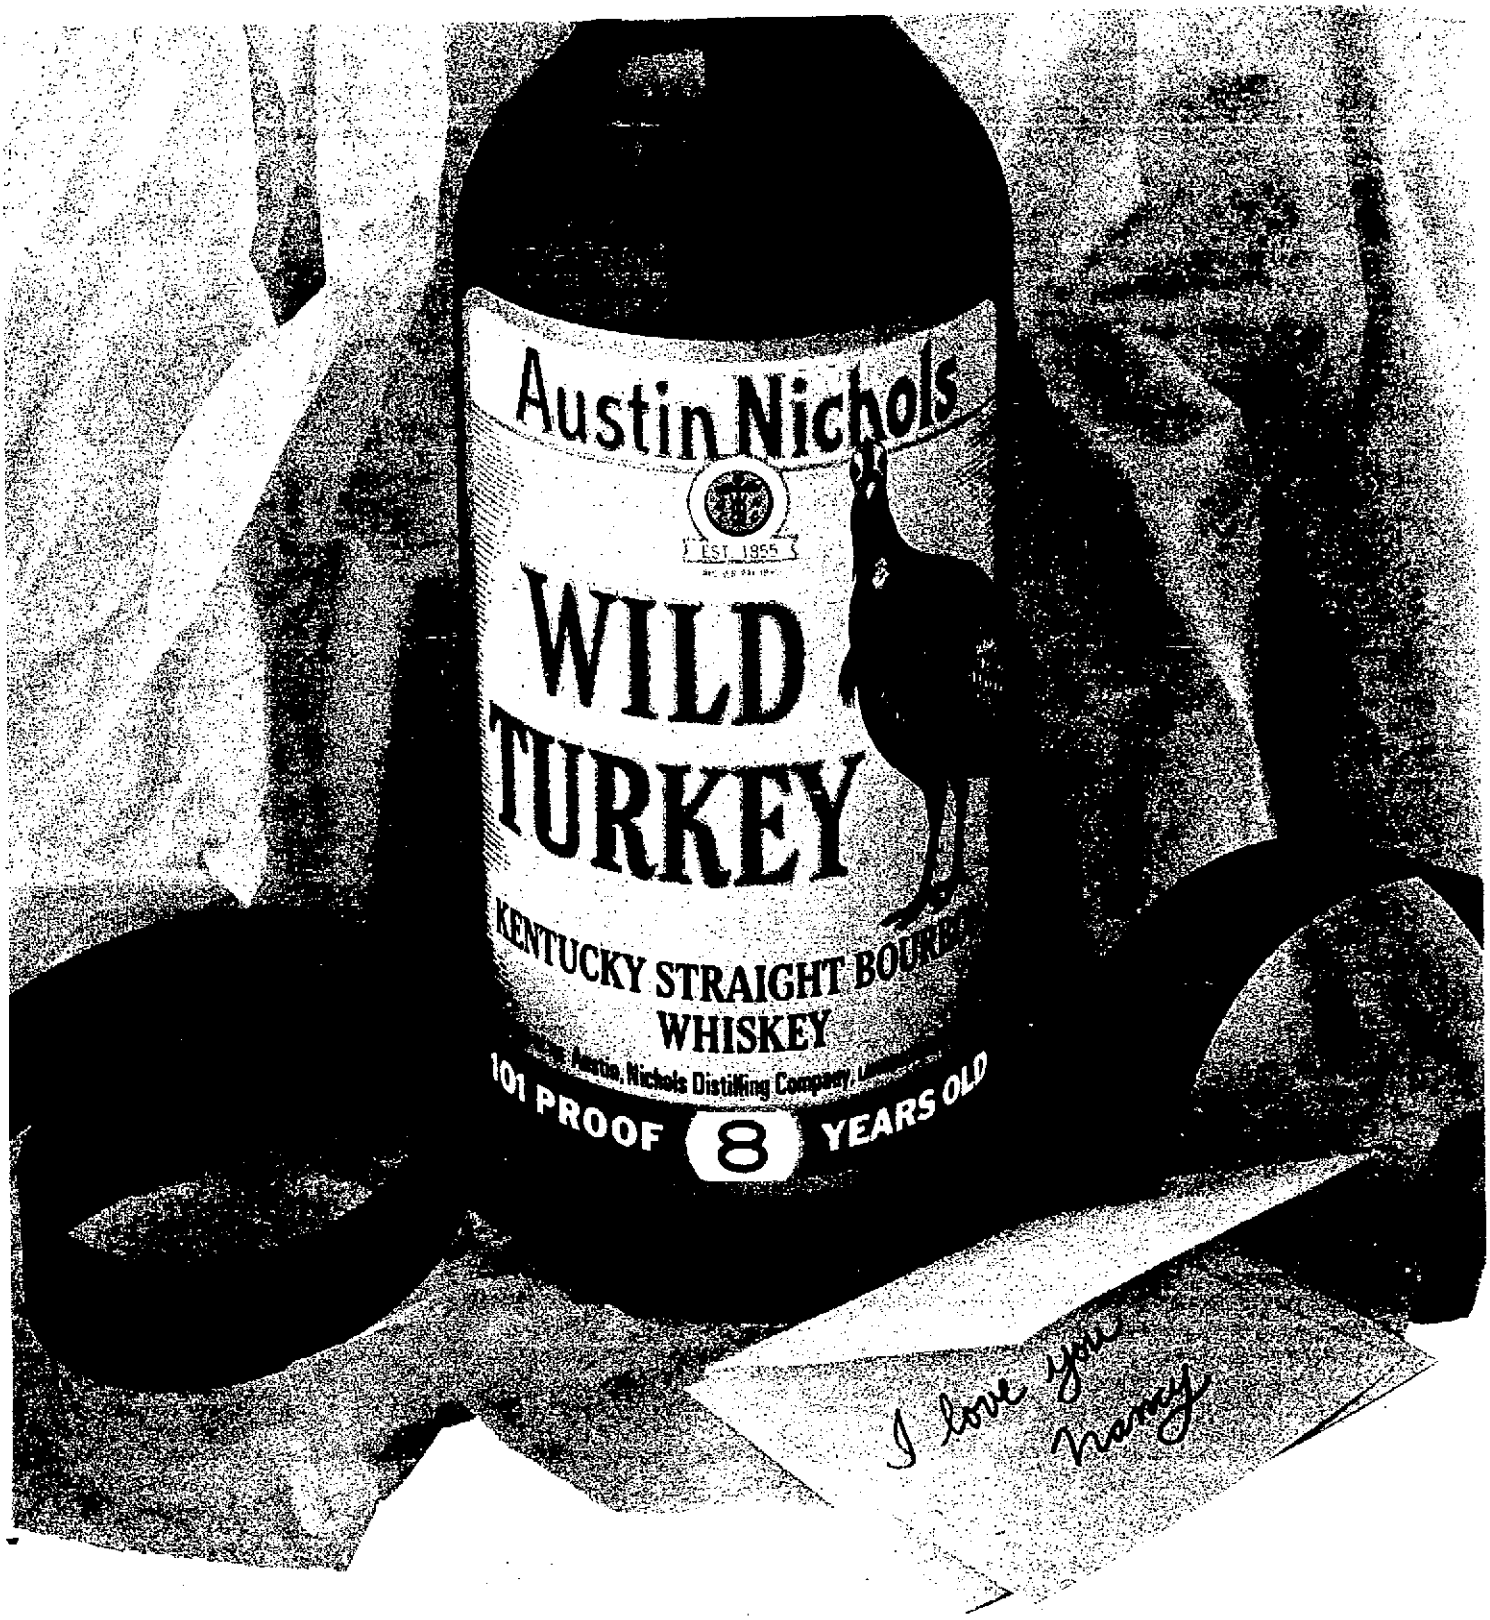

CAIRO, EGYPT.

The dapper, 59-year-old Egyptian President, Anwar Sadat, was strolling through the plush garden of his Nile villa when he stopped suddenly. Leaning over a tall bush of pink roses, the national flower of Egypt, he plucked one and brought it to me. Then, in his deep-voiced, fluent English, he said: "I want the American people to know something. I want them to know that never before have the prospects for peace been better. Not in the last 28 years—since Israel was created—have we had a better chance for a permanent settlement in the Middle East. We must not lose this chance."

It was a dramatic statement, to be sure. And coming in the course of a far-ranging, 80-minute discussion with this writer and PARADE's editor, Jess Gorkin, it was also a statement with a purpose—namely, to convince the American public and the Carter Administration that Anwar Sadat, as key spokesman for the Arab "moderates," is ready to make peace.

Indeed, as the suave and personable Egyptian leader put it himself: "I want Jimmy Carter to hear me. I realize the man has just come into office, and I don't want to hurry him before he has a chance to acquaint himself with our situation. But let's face it, you Americans are crucial to the peace process here, and I think it of the utmost importance that I have an opportunity to talk face-to-face with your President."

Precisely when President Carter will meet with Anwar Sadat is not clear at this writing. But what has become obvious is that the Egyptian leader is staking the future of Middle East peace talks, and possibly his personal future as well, on America's intentions. As noted Egyptian journalist Mohamed Heikal

WILD VALENTINE FOR YOUR WILD GUY

In his wildest dreams, your man probably wouldn't expect a Valentine's Day greeting like this. Isn't that the best reason in the world to surprise him with the great Wild Turkey?

told PARADE: "Sadat has put all his eggs in the American basket and has sold the Egyptian public on the fact that you are going to deliver."

This vital move to put his "eggs in the American basket," it may be remembered, was first made by Sadat in 1973, right at the end of the October War—the first war that Egypt did not lose to Israel. With the Egyptian troops having successfully crossed over the Suez Canal (Sadat is still publicly heralded in Egypt as "The Hero of the Crossing"), but with his army unable to recapture any more of the once-Egyptian Sinai, Sadat openly welcomed the United States' efforts to intervene and bring about a cease-fire.

'My good friend Henry'

And this we did. In the person of Secretary of State Kissinger, whom Sadat continues to refer to as "my good friend Henry," America helped end the fourth Arab-Israeli war. Subsequently, through Kissinger's "shuttle diplomacy," we helped negotiate the two Sinai disengagement pacts (January 1974, September 1975) that have returned to Egypt the oil fields and crucial Sinai passes—though not the bulk of Sinai, which remains in Israel's hands.

Recalls President Sadat of these historic meetings with the former U.S. Secretary of State: "Henry Kissinger came along at a very important juncture for us, and he brought with him the willingness of America to resume its crucial role here. Both my country and Israel desperately needed someone we could trust, because, understandably, neither of us has any trust in the other. Henry Kissinger turned out to be that man. Today, if you ask whether I would like to see Henry Kissinger continue as a special emissary in future negotiations, I can tell you, of course, I like Henry. But whomever you choose will be okay with me, and really what is essential is that the U.S. continue its willingness to help us negotiate a permanent settlement here."

Sadat's terms for Israel

At this point, the settlement that Sadat hopes the U.S. can help him achieve—by using its special influence with Israel—is one that calls for a return to the Arabs of the territories occupied by Israel in the June '67 War: that is, the rest of Sinai to Egypt, the Golan Heights to Syria, and the once-Jordanian West Bank along with the Gaza Strip to the Palestinians. In exchange, Sadat says, he is willing to go to the Geneva Conference and sign "a peace agreement" with Israel which would end the state of war between the two countries.

"I defy the Israelis to state what they are willing to do as I have stated my plan," Sadat told us, his voice rising to the challenge. "They will not do it. Rabin's government has been very weak, and they are afraid of peace. I tell you frankly, I would have preferred it if I were dealing now with Golda Meir [Rabin's predecessor]. Even though she is a 'hawk,' she at least has guts; she has all the guts in Israel. As it is, the Israelis have nobody in power telling them the facts, telling them what must be done. Meanwhile, we are ready here. I have the confidence of my people, and I am putting my plans quite clearly for everyone to see."

'Great political risks'

Whether or not one agrees with Sadat's pointed comments on Israel and its leadership, most observers here would acknowledge that the Egyptian President has put forth his plans "quite clearly"—moreover, that he has demonstrated some courage in doing so. As one U.S. diplomat in Cairo commented to us: "Sadat has taken great political risks in talking as plainly as he has. And, in fact, it is a point of pride with him that he is willing to speak so directly. You see, deep down, Sadat likes to think of himself as still being a simple Egyptian villager, a fellah—that is, a man who holds firm beliefs but is not afraid to tell you straight what he is thinking, with no frills attached."

Nowadays, in his elegant Savile Row suit, the urbane Egyptian leader looks anything but a fellah, though he was born and raised in a typical Egyptian village in the Nile delta, a place called Mit Abu al Kom. To this day he regularly visits there and prays at the village mosque dressed in his galabiya, the traditional peasant outfit. (Sadat is a devout Moslem, and on his forehead is a large callus which comes from bowing his head five times a day in prayer toward Mecca.)

Nasser's boyhood friend

While many of Sadat's relatives are still fellahin, his immediate family—he is one of 12 children—actually left the village for Cairo back when he was a teen-ager. Young Anwar at the time was sent off to the prestigious Abbassieh Military Academy, and it was there that he became friends with a boy a year older than he: Gamal Abdel Nasser. From then on, his personal star was tied to Nasser's.

With Nasser, he became one of the dozen Free Officers who overthrew the feudal monarchy of King Farouk in 1952. Nasser emerged as Egypt's No. 1 man, and his loyal friend Sadat became a publicist and spokesman for the new regime. He represented Nasser at foreign conferences and served for a number of years as editor of the semi-official newspaper Al Goumhouriya. (Sadat is the author of several books.) He was appointed head of Egypt's parliament (1961) and eventually became Vice President to Nasser (1964-67, 1969-70). When the charismatic strongman died in 1970, Sadat was selected to fill Nasser's spot—an assignment that nobody felt he, or anyone else, could ever do.

Mural in downtown Cairo shows Sadat as "Hero of the Crossing," which refers to the crossing of the Suez Canal into Sinai in the 1973 war. This was the first war in four not lost to the Israelis and it bolstered Egyptian morale.

But, as it turned out, Sadat soon emerged as rais (chief) in his own right. Today, with his picture displayed prominently on billboards throughout Egypt, he is the undisputed leader in this country of 38 million people. Moreover, in the 6½ years he has been in power (last September he was elected to a second six-year term as President), he has gradually weaned Egypt away from several of Nasser's most fervently held policies.

Arab 'moderates'

Thus, whereas Nasser was at bitter odds with the conservative oil monarchy of Saudi Arabia, Sadat has patched up this relationship to the point where the Egypt-Saudi Arabia axis along with Jordan and Syria now make up the Arab "moderates" who are pushing for a negotiated settlement with Israel. (A "rejectionist" front made up of Libya, Iraq and some radical Palestinian factions opposes any attempt at negotiations.) In addition, while Nasser sailed staunchly along with the Soviet Union, Sadat has begun to steer a more Western-oriented course—a decision that was presaged back in 1972, when he expelled almost all the 20,000 Soviet military and civilian technicians then in Egypt.

When we asked about his present relations with the Soviets—who, as Egypt's military backer, have provided billions of rubles of war equipment—Sadat answered: "Quite frankly, my relations with the Soviet Union are still very highly strained. They are not sending us military equipment, not even spare parts, and they refuse to reschedule our debts to them. I would prefer to normalize my situation with them, though I have told them I am willing to do so only if they accept me as I am and don't try to make me into what they want. But, for their part, they don't like how I have dealt with Kissinger and

HALFWAY ROUND THE WORLD, SOLO: MRS. KRYSTYNA CHOJNOWSKA-LISKIEWICZ OF POLAND IN SYDNEY, AUSTRALIA, WITH HER SLOOP (IN BACKGROUND)

UNSUNG HEROINE In 1966, when Francis Chichester of England arrived in Sydney, Australia, on his successful round-the-world solo trip in his boat, Gypsy Moth, he was hailed as one of the great sailors of all time and subsequently knighted.

A few weeks ago, a 40-year-old Polish woman named Krystyna Chojnowska-Liskiewicz sailed halfway round the world in her single-masted boat, Mazurek, unnoticed and unpublicized.

The first woman to do it alone, she began her trip in the Canary Islands, sailed across the Atlantic, through the Panama Canal, then to Tahiti, Fiji and Sydney, Australia. Next week she sets out on the return trip from Australia to Europe.

"I had nothing for company," says Mrs. Chojnowska-Liskiewicz, who is married to a boat-builder in Gdynia, "except a yellow teddy bear called Albatross and a tiny doll called Seagull."

When she arrived in Sydney this past December, there were no officials to meet her, a marked contrast to the fanfare which greeted Francis Chichester 10 years ago.

Mrs. Chojnowska-Liskiewicz is a naval architect herself and was chosen for the trip by the Polish Yachting Federation.

NEW SOVIET WEAPONS Do the Soviets want military parity or military superiority? That is one of the key questions President Jimmy Carter and his intelligence advisers will have to decide upon in the months to come.

The word from U.S. intelligence sources in Europe is that the Soviets are arming their forces in East Germany for the first time with a new antiaircraft missile system designed to destroy low-flying enemy planes.

The Soviet SA-8 radar-guided system fires two missiles simultaneously at a single target.

It is the second advanced weapon the Russians have moved into East Germany in recent months. The first was the T-72 tank, which rolled into East Germany last November. The T-72 is heavily armored against antitank missiles and can fire accurately while on the move, which many U.S. tanks cannot do.

Until a few months ago, the Soviets refused to deploy the SA-8 antiaircraft missile and the T-72 outside the Soviet Union.

What does this mean -- that the Soviets are bolstering their air- and ground-defense systems in East Germany or building up their offensive capability? Probably both.

U.S. INDIANS STERILIZED Thousands of American Indian women have been sterilized by the Indian Health Service (IHS) without properly consenting to their sterilization.

A report by the General Accounting Office reveals that 3400 Indians were sterilized during a four-year period in the four areas surveyed alone and suggests that the total probably goes much higher.

The GAO report covers Albuquerque, N. Mex.; Phoenix, Ariz.; Aberdeen, S. Dak., and Oklahoma City, Okla. Sen. James Abourezk (D., S. Dak.) asked the GAO to look into the situation after receiving many complaints about the surgery. Apparently many Indian women consented to sterilization believing that the operation was mandatory instead of optional. More complete explanations should have been made.

LABOR BEFORE LEISURE In a national referendum, the hard-working Swiss people recently rejected a proposal to reduce their working week from 48 hours to 40. In the same referendum, they supported the government's right to continue supervising prices.

Of all the nations in the world, Switzerland has the soundest currency and one of the best records for continued labor peace.

OIL TANKER SAFETY The trans-Alaska $8 billion pipeline will be finished sometime this year. But questions of oil tanker safety will apparently persist.

As the supertankers ply their way southward from Port Valdez to Washington, Oregon or California, how many accidents are likely?

One study recently completed in Alaska, based on statistical analyses of tanker safety elsewhere, holds that at least 20 major accidents are likely, with spillage of more than 3 million gallons of oil.

Valdez Harbor has a navigation hazard known as "Middle Rock," which is located in the center of the 6000-foot-wide channel and, according to a second report, "poses a psychological barrier" for some pilots.

In December the tanker Argo Merchant, flying the Liberian flag, broke apart off Nantucket, Mass., dumping most of its 7.6 million gallons of heavy industrial oil into the North Atlantic.

Can you imagine what 20 such accidents would do to the Alaska-to-California shoreline?

Gum for oil wells. A thickener called xanthan gum is being used with detergents to help free oil that clings to underground rock formations and resists recovery by conventional methods. Once injected into a well, the thickener restricts the detergent to where it will do the most good, keeping it from running all over the place. This and other methods of enhanced recovery may eventually add billions of barrels to America's oil reserves (about two-thirds of the oil ever discovered in this country is still underground, because it's hard to get out). The ultimate problem is economic, not technological. Some experimental recovery methods double the price of a barrel of oil, and others are even more costly.

how I have made such an understanding with the United States."

As a matter of fact, throughout our discussion, it was this understanding with the U.S. that the Egyptian leader continued to stress. And what is more, he made it clear that he wants the rapprochement to go on. Having restored diplomatic relations with the U.S. in 1973 (which Nasser had severed during the June '67 War), Sadat says he now wants to enhance those ties. He stated that a hot line between Cairo and Washington would be "a welcome idea." In addition, Sadat is hopeful that the U.S. will continue, and perhaps increase, its aid to Egypt, which last year amounted to $900 million.

Yet, for all his desire to improve his own relationship with America, Sadat nonetheless is quick to emphasize that he is not trying to drive a wedge between the U.S. and Israel—not now and not in the future peace agreement, either. Says Sadat: "I never asked the United States—and I shall never ask it—to drop its special relations with Israel. On the contrary, I tell you even if every Israeli wants to have a gun and a Phantom [jet], give it to them; but tell them not to use it on us. I even go further: If Israel wants to have a military pact with you, I will not oppose it. I shall not be asking for a pact, but if Israel wants one, give her this guarantee. I don't mind."

U.S. troops in Sinai

In terms of "guarantees," we then asked how Sadat would view the stationing of American troops in a future buffer zone between Egypt and Israel. (Presently, as part of disengagement agreement No. 2, some 200 American civilian technicians are stationed in the buffer zone between the two countries in Sinai, where they are monitoring the truce.) Sadat mulled the question over, puffing deeply on his pipe, and then said: "Well, I shall not oppose the stationing of U.S. troops. I don't think it's the ideal solution. It would be better to have a force made up of all the major powers. But I supported the idea of the U.S. technicians—in fact, I suggested it. And if Israel wants the guarantee of U.S. troops as part of the peace agreement, I

An Interview With Egyptian President Sadat:

Peace Prospects Are Better Than Ever

by George Michaelson

Sadat with his second wife, Jihan. They have three married daughters and a son. Mrs. Sadat is progressive-minded and tends to be an advocate for women's rights. She is in her third year of studies at Cairo University.

CAIRO, EGYPT.

The dapper, 59-year-old Egyptian President, Anwar Sadat, was strolling through the plush garden of his Nile villa when he stopped suddenly. Leaning over a tall bush of pink roses, the national flower of Egypt, he plucked one and brought it to me. Then, in his deep-voiced, fluent English, he said: "I want the American people to know something. I want them to know that never before have the prospects for peace been better. Not in the last 28 years—since Israel was created—have we had a better chance for a permanent settlement in the Middle East. We must not lose this chance."

It was a dramatic statement, to be sure. And coming in the course of a far-ranging, 80-minute discussion with this writer and PARADE's editor, Jess Gorkin, it was also a statement with a purpose—namely, to convince the American public and the Carter Administration that Anwar Sadat, as key spokesman for the Arab "moderates," is ready to make peace.

Indeed, as the suave and personable Egyptian leader put it himself: "I want Jimmy Carter to hear me. I realize the man has just come into office, and I don't want to hurry him before he has a chance to acquaint himself with our situation. But let's face it, you Americans are crucial to the peace process here, and I think it of the utmost importance that I have an opportunity to talk face-to-face with your President."

Precisely when President Carter will meet with Anwar Sadat is not clear at this writing. But what has become obvious is that the Egyptian leader is staking the future of Middle East peace talks, and possibly his personal future as well, on America's intentions. As noted Egyptian journalist Mohamed Heikal told PARADE: "Sadat has put all his eggs in the American basket and has sold the Egyptian public on the fact that you are going to deliver."

This vital move to put his "eggs in the American basket," it may be remembered, was first made by Sadat in 1973, right at the end of the October War—the first war that Egypt did not lose to Israel. With the Egyptian troops having successfully crossed over the Suez Canal (Sadat is still publicly heralded in Egypt as "The Hero of the Crossing"), but with his army unable to recapture any more of the once-Egyptian Sinai, Sadat openly welcomed the United States' efforts to intervene and bring about a cease-fire.

'My good friend Henry'

And this we did. In the person of Secretary of State Kissinger, whom Sadat continues to refer to as "my good friend Henry," America helped end the fourth Arab-Israeli war. Subsequently, through Kissinger's "shuttle diplomacy," we helped negotiate the two Sinai disengagement pacts (January 1974, September 1975) that have returned to Egypt the oil fields and crucial Sinai passes—though not the bulk of Sinai, which remains in Israel's hands.

Recalls President Sadat of these historic meetings with the former U.S. Secretary of State: "Henry Kissinger came along at a very important juncture for us, and he brought with him the willingness of America to resume its crucial role here. Both my country and Israel desperately needed someone we could trust, because, understandably, neither of us has any trust in the other. Henry Kissinger turned out to be that man. Today, if you ask whether I would like to see Henry Kissinger continue as a special emissary in future negotiations, I can tell you, of course, I like Henry. But whomever you choose will be okay with me, and really what is essential is that the U.S. continue its willingness to help us negotiate a permanent settlement here."

Sadat's terms for Israel

At this point, the settlement that Sadat hopes the U.S. can help him achieve—by using its special influence with Israel—is one that calls for a return to the Arabs of the territories occupied by Israel in the June '67 War: that is, the rest of Sinai to Egypt, the Golan Heights to Syria, and the once-Jordanian West Bank along with the Gaza Strip to the Palestinians. In exchange, Sadat says, he is willing to go to the Geneva Conference and sign "a peace agreement" with Israel which would end the state of war between the two countries.

"I defy the Israelis to state what they are willing to do as I have stated my plan," Sadat told us, his voice rising to the challenge. "They will not do it. Rabin's government has been very weak, and they are afraid of peace. I tell you frankly, I would have preferred it if I were dealing now with Golda Meir [Rabin's predecessor]. Even though she is a 'hawk,' she at least has guts; she has all the guts in Israel. As it is, the Israelis have nobody in power telling them the facts, telling them what must be done. Meanwhile, we are ready here. I have the confidence of my people, and I am putting my plans quite clearly for everyone to see."

'Great political risks'

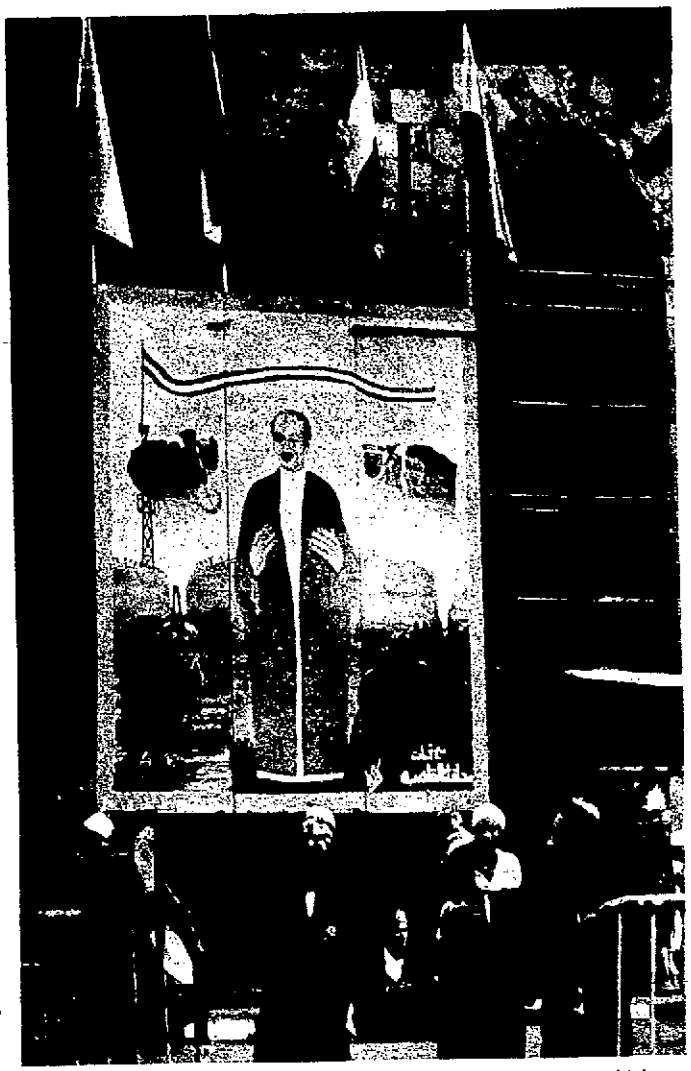

Whether or not one agrees with Sadat's pointed comments on Israel and its leadership, most observers here would acknowledge that the Egyptian President has put forth his plans "quite clearly"—moreover, that he has demonstrated some courage in doing so. As one U.S. diplomat in Cairo commented to us: "Sadat has taken great political risks in talking as plainly as he has. And, in fact, it is a point of pride with him that he is willing to speak so directly. You see, deep down, Sadat likes to think of himself as still being a simple Egyptian villager, a fellah—that is, a man who holds firm beliefs but is not afraid to tell you straight what he is thinking, with no frills attached."

Nowadays, in his elegant Savile Row suit, the urbane Egyptian leader looks anything but a fellah, though he was born and raised in a typical Egyptian village in the Nile delta, a place called Mit Abu al Kom. To this day he regularly visits there and prays at the village mosque dressed in his galabiya, the traditional peasant outfit. (Sadat is a devout Moslem, and on his forehead is a large callus which comes from bowing his head five times a day in prayer toward Mecca.)

Nasser's boyhood friend

While many of Sadat's relatives are still fellahin, his immediate family—he is one of 12 children—actually left the village for Cairo back when he was a teen-ager. Young Anwar at the time was sent off to the prestigious Abbassieh Military Academy, and it was there that he became friends with a boy a year older than he: Gamal Abdel Nasser. From then on, his personal star was tied to Nasser's.

With Nasser, he became one of the dozen Free Officers who overthrew the feudal monarchy of King Farouk in 1952. Nasser emerged as Egypt's No. 1 man, and his loyal friend Sadat became a publicist and spokesman for the new regime. He represented Nasser at foreign conferences and served for a number of years as editor of the semi-official newspaper Al Goumhouriya. (Sadat is the author of several books.) He was appointed head of Egypt's parliament (1961) and eventually became Vice President to Nasser (1964-67, 1969-70). Closed during the 1967 war, the Suez Canal reopened in June 1975. U.S. minesweepers helped clear it and Japanese dredgers are at work deepening and widening it. The canal raises $500 million a year, but Egypt hopes improvements will increase revenues and cut its annual balance-of-payments deficit of $3 billion.

Army officers taking a group of Egyptian citizens on tour of captured Israeli fortifications in the Sinai. Egyptians have kept the fortifications intact and expect to keep them as a showpiece. They also plan to build two tunnels under the canal to pipe fresh water into the Sinai to irrigate the land for agriculture.

will not oppose this. As I say, give her whatever guarantees she wants. I will have no objection."

As forthcoming as all this may be, Sadat is aware that the concessions he is offering are less than what Israel wants. For one thing, the Israelis assert that under no conditions will they feel safe enough to return all the territories. And secondly, Israel says that a peace "agreement" is simply not enough. What they desire is a peace "treaty," which will completely normalize relations between Arabs and Israelis and, they argue, indicate that the Arabs "accept" Israel's existence. Specifically, Israel wants a free movement of people and goods across the borders and the exchange of diplomatic envoys.

To this plan for trade and person-to-person exchanges, Sadat told us: "These are conditions that Israel is trying to impose on us in order to block a settlement from being made. I wonder, after 28 years of bitterness and hostility between us, is it logical or practical to talk now about such exchanges? Look, I have already opened the Suez Canal and am letting Israeli cargo pass through. But, as for these other matters, no Arab country, no Arab leader, will agree to them; and you cannot take it as a sign of bad intentions from me that I don't. What I say is: let us first end the state of war, let Israel withdraw from our lands; then we can discuss such things, depending on Israel's conduct."

Rabin's doubts

At that point, we pressed the Egyptian leader on the fact that some people, especially the Israelis, are apt to regard his comments as an unwillingness to "accept" Israel. I recalled, for example, that Israeli Prime Minister Rabin, in an interview with PARADE this past summer, had said: "No Arab leader is willing to accept that we are here to stay."

Sadat listened carefully and then, in a voice tinged with anger, answered: "How could anyone believe this when I am saying that I am ready to go to the Geneva Conference with them? Who are they? A phantom? A ghost? I realize that Israel is a fact and I have said that I am willing to sign a peace agreement with them. This is something that no Arab leader has ever said. . . ."

Sadat paused, shook his head slowly and then, after some moments, added: "Believe me, I am sincere when I say I am ready to end the state of war with Israel; and, goodness knows, they must be ready, too. We in Egypt do not wish to go on like this, spending money and losing our people in war. My country needs peace. We have many domestic problems, and we need peace so that we can grow and develop normally."

Undoubtedly true. And this, perhaps more than any other reason, is why Sadat is calling for a "permanent settlement" now. Indeed, in the past three years, with the cease-fire between Egypt and Israel having remained unbroken, he has already been able to make some moves to bolster his sagging economy. With the help of the U.S. Navy, he has cleared the Suez Canal of debris and mines (the waterway had been out of use since the June '67 War); he is currently employing Japanese dredgers to deepen and widen it—with the aim of increasing its income well beyond the present $500 million a year.

Rebuilt Suez cities

Also, thanks to financial donations from the oil sheikhdoms, Sadat has been able to rebuild the destroyed cities along the canal, and most of the million refugees are back in spanking-new apartment houses. Egyptian designers now have plans to turn this sunbaked spot into a resort area and tourist attraction. (One of the "sights," we were told, is going to be the Israeli fortifications on the east bank of the canal, which the Egyptians captured in 1973 and have maintained intact.)

But apart from all this, the major financial gain has been the increase of Western investments here. In the last two years, Egypt has signed contracts with 22 oil companies to explore for additional oil throughout the country; and Sadat told us he expects oil production will be bringing in some $1.2 billion by 1980. Furthermore, assuming there is no resumption of war or a war-like atmosphere, Sadat says he is hopeful that Western firms of all types will invest in Egypt. As he put it: "We need your investment and know-how. In order to develop our country economically, we are going to need a lot from you . . . a whole lot."

America's importance

Then, relighting his pipe, he concluded: "But this is just part of it. As I've told you, you Americans are important not only economically, but politically as well. You have begun the peace process here and you must finish it. You hold 99 percent of the cards, and if you want to bring about a settlement, you can. I am sure of it. Quite frankly, I have laid my cards on the table and have told you, in all sincerity, that I want peace. Egypt needs peace—economically, politically, in every way. Please tell this to your readers, to the American public."

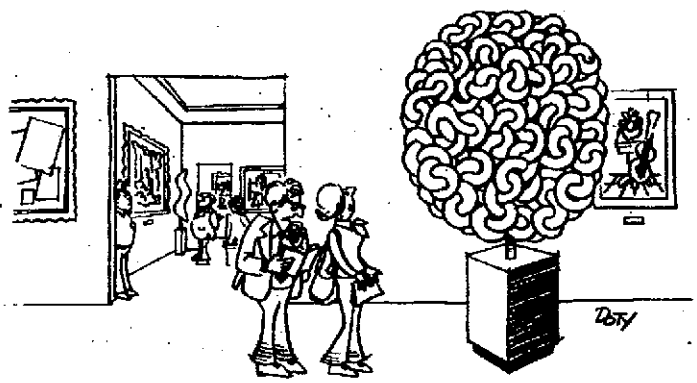

And with that, Sadat concluded the discussion and began heading back inside his villa—but not before adding, perhaps symbolically, that the pink rose which he had picked, and which I held in my hand, is a particularly hearty flower. Yes, he said, with just a little water, it is sure to keep its fragrance —and for a long time.

And what is more, he made it clear that he wants the rapprochement to go on. Having restored diplomatic relations with the U.S. in 1973 (which Nasser had severed during the June '67 War), Sadat says he now wants to enhance those ties. He stated that a hot line between Cairo and Washington would be "a welcome idea." In addition, Sadat is hopeful that the U.S. will continue, and perhaps increase, its aid to Egypt, which last year amounted to $900 million.

Yet, for all his desire to improve his own relationship with America, Sadat nonetheless is quick to emphasize that he is not trying to drive a wedge between the U.S. and Israel—not now and not in the future peace agreement, either. Says Sadat: "I never asked the United States—and I shall never ask it—to drop its special relations with Israel. On the contrary, I tell you even if every Israeli wants to have a gun and a Phantom [jet], give it to them; but tell them not to use it on us. I even go further: If Israel wants to have a military pact with you, I will not oppose it. I shall not be asking for a pact, but if Israel wants one, give her this guarantee. I don't mind."

U.S. troops in Sinai

In terms of "guarantees," we then asked how Sadat would view the stationing of American troops in a future buffer zone between Egypt and Israel. (Presently, as part of disengagement agreement No. 2, some 200 American civilian technicians are stationed in the buffer zone between the two countries in Sinai, where they are monitoring the truce.) Sadat mulled the question over, puffing deeply on his pipe, and then said: "Well, I shall not oppose the stationing of U.S. troops. I don't think it's the ideal solution. It would be better to have a force made up of all the major powers. But I supported the idea of the U.S. technicians—in fact, I suggested it. And if Israel wants the guarantee of U.S. troops as part of the peace agreement, I

New Salem Long Lights

Salem Lights

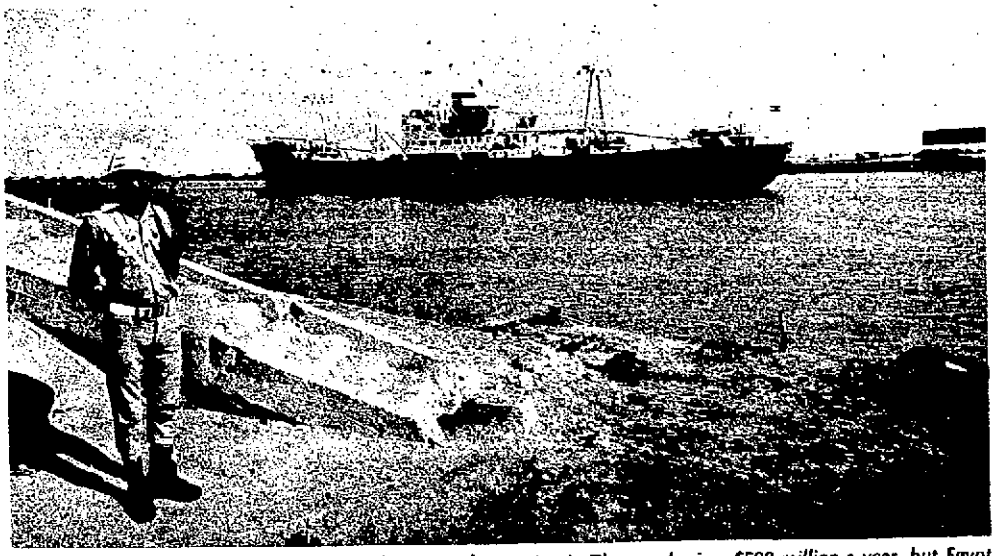

Salem Lights now come in a new longer length.

Longs smokers.
Now you can enjoy a low tar cigarette with Salem taste, too.

Warning: The Surgeon General Has Determined That Cigarette Smoking Is Dangerous to Your Health.

LIGHTS, LONG LIGHTS: 12 mg. "tar", 0.9 mg. nicotine, av. per cigarette, by FTC method.

Closed during the 1967 war, the Suez Canal reopened in June 1975. U.S. minesweepers helped clear it and Japanese dredgers are at work deepening and widening it. The canal raises $500 million a year, but Egypt hopes improvements will increase revenues and cut its annual balance-of-payments deficit of $3 billion.

Army officers taking a group of Egyptian citizens on tour of captured Israeli fortifications in the Sinai. Egyptians have kept the fortifications intact and expect to keep them as a showpiece. They also plan to build two tunnels under the canal to pipe fresh water into the Sinai to irrigate the land for agriculture.

will not oppose this. As I say, give her whatever guarantees she wants. I will have no objection."

As forthcoming as all this may be, Sadat is aware that the concessions he is offering are less than what Israel wants. For one thing, the Israelis assert that under no conditions will they feel safe enough to return all the territories. And secondly, Israel says that a peace "agreement" is simply not enough. What they desire is a peace "treaty," which will completely normalize relations between Arabs and Israelis and, they argue, indicate that the Arabs "accept" Israel's existence. Specifically, Israel wants a free movement of people and goods across the borders and the exchange of diplomatic envoys.

To this plan for trade and person-to-person exchanges, Sadat told us: "These are conditions that Israel is trying to impose on us in order to block a settlement from being made. I wonder, after 28 years of bitterness and hostility between us, is it logical or practical to talk now about such exchanges? Look, I have already opened the Suez Canal and am letting Israeli cargo pass through. But, as for these other matters, no Arab country, no Arab leader, will agree to them; and you cannot take it as a sign of bad intentions from me that I don't. What I say is: let us first end the state of war, let Israel withdraw from our lands; then we can discuss such things, depending on Israel's conduct."

Rabin's doubts

At that point, we pressed the Egyptian leader on the fact that some people, especially the Israelis, are apt to regard his comments as an unwillingness to "accept" Israel. I recalled, for example, that Israeli Prime Minister Rabin, in an interview with PARADE this past summer, had said: "No Arab leader is willing to accept that we are here to stay."

Sadat listened carefully and then, in a voice tinged with anger, answered: "How could anyone believe this when I am saying that I am ready to go to the Geneva Conference with them? Who are they? A phantom? A ghost? I realize that Israel is a fact and I have said that I am willing to sign a peace agreement with them. This is something that no Arab leader has ever said. . . ."

Sadat paused, shook his head slowly and then, after some moments, added: "Believe me, I am sincere when I say I am ready to end the state of war with Israel; and, goodness knows, they must be ready, too. We in Egypt do not wish to go on like this, spending money and losing our people in war. My country needs peace. We have many domestic problems, and we need peace so that we can grow and develop normally."

Undoubtedly true. And this, perhaps more than any other reason, is why Sadat is calling for a "permanent settlement" now. Indeed, in the past three years, with the cease-fire between Egypt and Israel having remained unbroken, he has already been able to make some moves to bolster his sagging economy. With the help of the U.S. Navy, he has cleared the Suez Canal of debris and mines (the waterway had been out of use since the June '67 War); he is currently employing Japanese dredgers to deepen and widen it—with the aim of increasing its income well beyond the present $500 million a year.

Rebuilt Suez cities

Also, thanks to financial donations from the oil sheikhdoms, Sadat has been able to rebuild the destroyed cities along the canal, and most of the million refugees are back in spanking-new apartment houses. Egyptian designers now have plans to turn this sunbaked spot into a resort area and tourist attraction. (One of the "sights," we were told, is going to be the Israeli fortifications on the east bank of the canal, which the Egyptians captured in 1973 and have maintained intact.)

But apart from all this, the major financial gain has been the increase of Western investments here. In the last two years, Egypt has signed contracts with 22 oil companies to explore for additional oil throughout the country; and Sadat told us he expects oil production will be bringing in some $1.2 billion by 1980. Furthermore, assuming there is no resumption of war or a war-like atmosphere, Sadat says he is hopeful that Western firms of all types will invest in Egypt. As he put it: "We need your investment and know-how. In order to develop our country economically, we are going to need a lot from you . . . a whole lot."

America's importance

Then, relighting his pipe, he concluded: "But this is just part of it. As I've told you, you Americans are important not only economically, but politically as well. You have begun the peace process here and you must finish it. You hold 99 percent of the cards, and if you want to bring about a settlement, you can. I am sure of it. Quite frankly, I have laid my cards on the table and have told you, in all sincerity, that I want peace. Egypt needs peace—economically, politically, in every way. Please tell this to your readers, to the American public."

And with that, Sadat concluded the discussion and began heading back inside his villa—but not before adding, perhaps symbolically, that the pink rose which he had picked, and which I held in my hand, is a particularly hearty flower. Yes, he said, with just a little water, it is sure to keep its fragrance —and for a long time.

A Computer in Every Home

by Theodore Berland

Home-size computers do bookkeeping, monitor investments, run appliances and teach. Karl Weller, 14, learns at home via instructive computer games.

CHICAGO.

When Karl Weller, 14, comes home from school, he leaves his books at the front door, shucks his coat, grabs a snack in the kitchen, and runs up to an attic room. There he sits before a television screen and flips some switches. Letters flash across the screen: TRY YOUR HAND AT GOVERNING ANCIENT SUMERIA SUCCESSFULLY FOR A 10-YEAR TERM OF OFFICE, HAMURABI

Karl replies to the TV screen by means of a typewriter keyboard which is connected to a tabletop computer. For the next hour or so, he will decide how many bushels of grain to sell, how many acres of land to plant, and how much grain to feed his people. When he fails as governor, the screen tells him how many Sumerians have starved and that he has been kicked out of office and declared a national fink. When he succeeds, he is declared a hero like Charlemagne, Disraeli or Jefferson.

"Hamurabi" is just one of many games Karl programs into the computer. Another is a stock market game of buy-and-sell in which he is "given" $10,000 at the start.

But Karl uses the computer-TV setup for more than games. He does his homework on it, plotting complex mathematical graphs in five colors.

Karl Weller is bright but not unique. Across the country, thousands of junior and senior high school students like him are sitting at home before similar typewriter keyboards linked to computers the size of stereo receivers.

Most of these computers are constructed from kits purchased from a new kind of retail business, the computer store—an American phenomenon which sprouted only last summer.

Walking into a computer store for the first time is like walking into a strange, new world where metal boxes bear arrays of pinpoint red lights, television screens glow in fascinating diagrams, and people use odd expressions such as "floppy disc" and "toggling in the bootstrap."

Computer clubs

Already, computer hobby clubs dot the map. California has 23, New York and Michigan seven each, Virginia five, metropolitan Chicago three.

Computer hobbyists love putting the kits together and playing games with their finished products. But more and more people are tailoring their computers to help in their businesses or professions.

Dr. A. Richard Goldman, a young Chicago dentist, is computerizing his office by himself. A few months ago he walked into the "itty bitty machine company" ("Don't call us IBM," I was warned.) near downtown Evanston, Ill., ignorant about computers but knowing what he would like one to do. After a clerk demonstrated an IMSAI computer, Dr. Goldman was hooked.

"Putting the kit together was easy," he explains. Dr. Goldman plans to have his system do all of his accounting, inventory, office scheduling, billing, and tax withholding.

"With this computer capability, I'll also be able to analyze my practice. It should be able to determine, for instance, the correct fees to charge."

Dr. Goldman's experience is typical, since home computers are often sold to people with no previous computer background. Lou van Eperen, president of the Chicago Computer Store in suburban Park Ridge, claims 80 percent of his customers walk in and say they don't know anything about computers.

Van Eperen's typical sale is about $2500—a price tag, he points out, similar to that of a complete stereo system, a fishing boat and rig, or a camper.

The initial purchase

Most first customers buy a basic Altair 8800 computer, a memory bank to store data and instructions, a TV-like display, a typewriter keyboard, and a device for getting information into and out of the computer.

Given the proper equipment and hookups, a small computer can do serious chores, even run a home. A program already in existence would turn up your thermostat at 5:30 a.m., start the coffee at 6:50, begin your bath at 6:53, wake you at 7, start your car at 7:30. It would also turn your lights on while you were away, producing a sequence that would perfectly mimic your evening activities and thus thoroughly fool would-be burglars.

Automated households, however, are easier to plan than realize in existing homes, owing to the complex wiring. Homes are now being designed to incorporate such automation.

But there is still much a microcomputer can do around your home. It can store recipes, help plan meals, compute prices of servings, do bookkeeping, plan budgets, monitor investments.

Computers are already in many homes. The popular TV Ping-Pong games are actually low-grade microcomputers. New radar microwave ovens contain microcomputers that program cooking times and sequences. At least one 1977 model automobile (Oldsmobile) has under its hood a microprocessor for continually regulating fuel-air injection mixtures.

All of this stems from the development of a tiny electronic brain that performs computer functions which a generation ago would have required a roomful of vacuum tubes and an outlay of hundreds of thousands of dollars. Today's version, the size of your fingernail, is sold for $26.

While a handful of electronics manufacturers now make these miniature brains, the largest-selling is the Intel 8080, made by the Intel Corporation of Santa Clara, Cal. It uses the principle of the transistor but is thousands of times more compact. And it makes microcomputers possible by performing 200,000 calculations a second and coordinating the arithmetic and memory activities of units connected to it.

The Intel 8080 miniature brain is the basis of the Altair 8800, which started the computer hobby craze. MITS, Inc., of Albuquerque, N. Mex., introduced the Altair kit for $387 in January 1975. MITS has sold more than 8000 computers and is still No. 1 in sales, although other companies—such as IMS Associates with its IMSAI 8080—have grabbed part of the exploding market.

Many of these computer kits, now available only through manufacturer franchise stores, will soon be sold in stereo stores.

Essential 'software'

To use the hardware, or equipment, you need "software," computerese for the programs of direction. "A computer is capable of doing anything you are capable of directing it to do," says Karl's father, Walter J. Weller, a computer professional. "But," he adds, "it takes your directions literally. It is not like communicating with a human. You can leave words out of a conversation and the other person will know your meaning. A computer can only do what you tell it to—no more, no less. This means careful analysis of every step required in the processing of your data."

To help neophytes into the computer world, Weller and two colleagues have written and published Practical Microcomputer Programming, the first book to explain in simple language the art of writing programs for hobby computers. Their book is but one item in the publication explosion of books and magazines for computer hobbyists. Among its contents are instructions for putting games like "Hamurabi" into the system, for writing poetry, playing tic-tac-toe, creating weird graphic illustrations, composing music, and—a favorite of most—playing the Star Trek game.

Imagination is key

The possibilities of a microcomputer's use are limited only by its master's imagination. Tom Layman, an Intel instructor, likens it to the development of the electric motor. "The first commercial motors were big 50-horsepower jobs which ran elaborate belt-and-pulley systems so that tools could be powered at various locations. Once we knew how to make small motors, we placed them right in the tool or appliance. That permitted the invention of electric drills, vacuum cleaners—all sorts of devices. The same has happened to computers. We used to have big ones feeding many terminals. Now we can have small computers which can be put anywhere we like."

Michael Hunter, assistant to the president of MITS, foresees a microcomputer in every home within a decade. Whether or not he's right, the evidence points to a clear realization: the Computer Age is here.

One-Dish Cookbook

If the cost of meat—not to mention other foodstuffs—has you down, a pleasant surprise is in store for you. It's The One-Dish Cookbook, dedicated to showing how to prepare tasty, appetizing and nutritious meals at a far lower cost than you thought possible.

Written by gourmet Robert Ackart and available to PARADE readers at the bargain price of $1.50 plus 25¢ for handling, this new book shows the way to wonderful low-cost dining step by step—from shopping for the most succulent yet less-expensive cuts at the butcher to preparing them with maximum economy and flavor.

The major thesis of The One-Dish Cookbook is that you don't have to go broke giving your family and guests meals they enjoy and admire. The author tells you, for instance, why beef may be more thrifty a buy than veal and why you'll be just as happy with second- and third-category beef as with first-category. And Ackart has many cooking tips to offer on pork, which he regards as the supreme meat for good eating, notwithstanding its comparatively low cost.

Despite its emphasis on cooking economically, this is a book that has plenty of recipes for stews, roasts, casseroles and other basics, plus unusual gourmet dishes. Many are taken from the cuisines of France, Italy, Greece, the Middle East and other gastronomic centers. The lively text is also sprinkled with historical tidbits—such as the fact that Homer mentions sausage in The Odyssey.

But it's the recipes themselves that are the big thing in the book. Clear, complete and kitchen-tested, they'll enable you to prepare delicious meals for a lot less than you're probably spending now. The One-Dish Cookbook is the one you'll use and cherish most of all.

TO ORDER. Send your name, address, zip code and $1.50 (plus 25¢ for postage and handling) in cash, check or money order for each copy of "The One-Dish Cookbook" to PARADE, Box 4, Dept. T, Kensington Station, Brooklyn, N.Y. 11218. Please allow three weeks for delivery. [GENERAL OFFICES: 1346 39TH ST., BROOKLYN, N.Y. 11218.]

A Computer in Every Home

by Theodore Berland

CHICAGO.

When Karl Weller, 14, comes home from school, he leaves his books at the front door, shucks his coat, grabs a snack in the kitchen, and runs up to an attic room. There he sits before a television screen and flips some switches. Letters flash across the screen: TRY YOUR HAND AT GOVERNING ANCIENT SUMERIA SUCCESSFULLY FOR A 10-YEAR TERM OF OFFICE, HAMURABI

Karl replies to the TV screen by means of a typewriter keyboard which is connected to a tabletop computer. For the next hour or so, he will decide how many bushels of grain to sell, how many acres of land to plant, and how much grain to feed his people. When he fails as governor, the screen tells him how many Sumerians have starved and that he has been kicked out of office and declared a national fink. When he succeeds, he is declared a hero like Charlemagne, Disraeli or Jefferson.

"Hamurabi" is just one of many games Karl programs into the computer. Another is a stock market game of buy-and-sell in which he is "given" $10,000 at the start.

But Karl uses the computer-TV setup for more than games. He does his homework on it, plotting complex mathematical graphs in five colors.

Karl Weller is bright but not unique. Across the country, thousands of junior and senior high school students like him are sitting at home before similar typewriter keyboards linked to computers the size of stereo receivers.

Most of these computers are constructed from kits purchased from a new kind of retail business, the computer store—an American phenomenon which sprouted only last summer.

Walking into a computer store for the first time is like walking into a strange, new world where metal boxes bear arrays of pinpoint red lights, television screens glow in fascinating diagrams, and people use odd expressions such as "floppy disc" and "toggling in the bootstrap."

Computer clubs

Already, computer hobby clubs dot the map. California has 23, New York and Michigan seven each, Virginia five, metropolitan Chicago three.

Computer hobbyists love putting the kits together and playing games with their finished products. But more and more people are tailoring their computers to help in their businesses or professions.

Dr. A. Richard Goldman, a young Chicago dentist, is computerizing his office by himself. A few months ago he walked into the "itty bitty machine company" ("Don't call us IBM," I was warned.) near downtown Evanston, Ill., ignorant about computers but knowing what he would like one to do. After a clerk demonstrated an IMSAI computer, Dr. Goldman was hooked.

"Putting the kit together was easy," he explains. Dr. Goldman plans to have his system do all of his accounting, inventory, office scheduling, billing, and tax withholding.

"With this computer capability, I'll also be able to analyze my practice. It should be able to determine, for instance, the correct fees to charge."

Dr. Goldman's experience is typical, since home computers are often sold to people with no previous computer background. Lou van Eperen, president of the Chicago Computer Store in suburban Park Ridge, claims 80 percent of his customers walk in and say they don't know anything about computers.

Van Eperen's typical sale is about $2500—a price tag, he points out, similar to that of a complete stereo system, a fishing boat and rig, or a camper.

Home-size computers do bookkeeping, monitor investments, run appliances and teach. Karl Weller, 14, learns at home via instructive computer games.

The initial purchase

Most first customers buy a basic Altair 8800 computer, a memory bank to store data and instructions, a TV-like display, a typewriter keyboard, and a device for getting information into and out of the computer.

Given the proper equipment and hookups, a small computer can do serious chores, even run a home. A program already in existence would turn up your thermostat at 5:30 a.m., start the coffee at 6:50, begin your bath at 6:53, wake you at 7, start your car at 7:30. It would also turn your lights on while you were away, producing a sequence that would perfectly mimic your evening activities and thus thoroughly fool would-be burglars.

Automated households, however, are easier to plan than realize in existing homes, owing to the complex wiring. Homes are now being designed to incorporate such automation.

But there is still much a microcomputer can do around your home. It can store recipes, help plan meals, compute prices of servings, do bookkeeping, plan budgets, monitor investments.

Computers are already in many homes. The popular TV Ping-Pong games are actually low-grade microcomputers. New radar microwave ovens contain microcomputers that program cooking times and sequences. At least one 1977 model automobile (Oldsmobile) has under its hood a microprocessor for continually regulating fuel-air injection mixtures.

All of this stems from the development of a tiny electronic brain that performs computer functions which a generation ago would have required a roomful of vacuum tubes and an outlay of hundreds of thousands of dollars. Today's version, the size of your fingernail, is sold for $26.

While a handful of electronics manufacturers now make these miniature brains, the largest-selling is the Intel 8080, made by the Intel Corporation of Santa Clara, Cal. It uses the principle of the transistor but is thousands of times more compact. And it makes microcomputers possible by performing 200,000 calculations a second and coordinating the arithmetic and memory activities of units connected to it.

The Intel 8080 miniature brain is the basis of the Altair 8800, which started the computer hobby craze. MITS, Inc., of Albuquerque, N. Mex., introduced the Altair kit for $387 in January 1975. MITS has sold more than 8000 computers and is still No. 1 in sales, although other companies—such as IMS Associates with its IMSAI 8080—have grabbed part of the exploding market.

Many of these computer kits, now available only through manufacturer franchise stores, will soon be sold in stereo stores.

Essential 'software'

To use the hardware, or equipment, you need "software," computerese for the programs of direction. "A computer is capable of doing anything you are capable of directing it to do," says Karl's father, Walter J. Weller, a computer professional. "But," he adds, "it takes your directions literally. It is not like communicating with a human. You can leave words out of a conversation and the other person will know your meaning. A computer can only do what you tell it to—no more, no less. This means careful analysis of every step required in the processing of your data."

To help neophytes into the computer world, Weller and two colleagues have written and published Practical Microcomputer Programming, the first book to explain in simple language the art of writing programs for hobby computers. Their book is but one item in the publication explosion of books and magazines for computer hobbyists. Among its contents are instructions for putting games like "Hamurabi" into the system, for writing poetry, playing tic-tac-toe, creating weird graphic illustrations, composing music, and—a favorite of most—playing the Star Trek game.

Imagination is key

The possibilities of a microcomputer's use are limited only by its master's imagination. Tom Layman, an Intel instructor, likens it to the development of the electric motor. "The first commercial motors were big 50-horsepower jobs which ran elaborate belt-and-pulley systems so that tools could be powered at various locations. Once we knew how to make small motors, we placed them right in the tool or appliance. That permitted the invention of electric drills, vacuum cleaners—all sorts of devices. The same has happened to computers. We used to have big ones feeding many terminals. Now we can have small computers which can be put anywhere we like."

Michael Hunter, assistant to the president of MITS, foresees a microcomputer in every home within a decade. Whether or not he's right, the evidence points to a clear realization: the Computer Age is here.

Thousands of smokers were tested.* The results: overall, they liked the taste of MERIT 100's as much as the higher tar 100mm brands tested.

MERIT and MERIT MENTHOL. King Size and new 100's.

The taste barrier for low tar smoking has been broken again.

Dogs Help The Deaf To Hear

by Michael W. Fedo

Donne L. Colton of Minneapolis, who is deaf, has a hearing dog trained to act as his "ears."

At the sound of a knock, the dog gives Colton a nudge and starts with him toward the door.

ST. PAUL, MINN.

A 15-month-old boy here woke from his afternoon nap and somehow lodged his head between the spokes of the crib rail. Since he had wakened nearly 30 minutes earlier than expected, his agonized cries would have gone unheeded for at least that long, because his mother is deaf. But thanks to Puff, her mix-breed dog, the mother was alerted to the baby's plight and rescued him.

It was no accident that Puff led her to the child. The dog was specifically trained to act as its owner's "ears" in a project begun by the Minnesota Humane Society several years ago and now under the auspices of the American Humane Association (AHA). Puff is one of America's first hearing dogs, and right now there are fewer than three dozen of them. But the AHA, which picked up the pilot project from Minnesota, anticipates that someday hearing dogs will be available to all who need and request one.

Though much effort and money is directed toward handicapped Americans, our 2 million deaf tend to receive minimal attention. Fortunately, the hearing dog program has the potential to be as meaningful to the deaf as the Seeing Eye dogs are to the blind—at a fraction of the cost.

Training is not as extensive for hearing dogs as it is for Seeing Eye dogs, and virtually any dog, regardless of size or breed, can qualify. "We've found that mix breeds will work out well," said Ruth Deschene, executive director of the Minnesota Humane Society and initiator of the project.

Trained to respond

The hearing dogs are trained to respond to all sounds the hearing person would react to—such as a car horn, a doorbell, smoke detector, siren, alarm clock, a crying child, boiling water.

The program began in 1973, when Mrs. Elva Janke, an elderly deaf woman in Minneapolis, wrote to a local action news program that she had lost a dog she had trained to respond to sounds. She was now too old to train another animal but wondered if the news staff knew of a center where dogs were trained to serve the deaf.

The staff turned the letter over to Mrs. Deschene. Then, after a broadcast and a plea for community help, a modest effort was launched and the hearing dog concept was underway. For two years, trainers with no previous experience with hearing dogs worked with the Minnesota Humane Society to define a program. Six dogs were trained, of which five were placed with deaf persons in St. Paul, and one in Lexington, Ky.

The first animal trained was Jody, a small black dog from the St. Paul animal shelter. And Jody's first meeting with Mrs. Janke was a poignant one. Mrs. Janke, her son and husband were seated in the training facility as Jody was brought in with its trainer. Immediately, the dog walked over to Mrs. Janke and put its head in her lap.

A sensitivity

Mrs. Deschene reports that this seems to be a common occurrence when dogs are first introduced to deaf masters. "Maybe it's in the training," she says, "but the dogs develop a sensitivity toward the person around them who cannot hear."

Hearing dogs are now being trained in 20 weeks at AHA headquarters in Denver, Colo. They are first trained in general obedience, then in learning to obey hand signals from the deaf. The next phase is called auditory or sound-awareness training, which teaches the dogs to react to specified sounds.

According to Robert White, director of the AHA program and a specialist in deaf education, "The first priority is to train dogs to respond to alarm clocks and smoke alarms."

The usual response of the animal is to nudge its master, run to the source of the sound, then back to its master.

The training program also involves the National Association for the Deaf, and it is expected that, in two or three years, 10 regional shelters around the country will be training hearing dogs to be provided free to deaf persons.

One special advantage of the hearing dog is that it opens up new vistas of play for deaf children who have been handicapped in developing the social skills and awareness that accompany playing and interacting with other children.

Colton's hearing dog remains with him until the caller at the door is identified. If there were any danger, the dog would try to protect him.

Hearing dogs can notify youngsters if someone or something is behind them, or warn the daydreaming child that a speeding auto is approaching, thus allaying the fears of parents while enabling their children to enjoy the full range of play activities.

Parents relax

The hearing dogs will also free parents of other worries. Prior to acquiring Sparky, the parents of Todd and Philip had to take the 13-year-old deaf twins everywhere or provide a sitter, even when performing routine grocery shopping. They feared that if a fire broke out, or some other emergency arose, the boys would not find out in time. But with Sparky, the parents can relax, secure in the knowledge that the dog will alert their sons to any sound demanding attention.

One of the first deaf persons in Minnesota to receive a dog was Donne L. Colton, a marketing supervisor with a large Minneapolis corporation. He reported that the dog helped in many ways while he was at work. It notified him when someone was at his door and when the phone rang. Colton, who can speak, could answer the phone and tell the caller to phone back when his secretary was in to take the message. He also reported that the animal acted as a guard dog in the home.

Warren Northwood of the AHA says that the program is now training 40 dogs to be placed with deaf mutes and is also developing a training manual.

"The people in Minnesota did an excellent job in bringing this concept to national attention," Northwood said. "It's our job now to make this a national outreach and, in a way, to provide dogs who will be ears to millions of hearing-impaired people."

Dogs Help The Deaf To Hear

by Michael W. Fedo

Donne L. Colton of Minneapolis, who is deaf, has a hearing dog trained to act as his "ears."

At the sound of a knock, the dog gives Colton a nudge and starts with him toward the door.

ST. PAUL, MINN.

A 15-month-old boy here woke from his afternoon nap and somehow lodged his head between the spokes of the crib rail. Since he had wakened nearly 30 minutes earlier than expected, his agonized cries would have gone unheeded for at least that long, because his mother is deaf. But thanks to Puff, her mix-breed dog, the mother was alerted to the baby's plight and rescued him.

It was no accident that Puff led her to the child. The dog was specifically trained to act as its owner's "ears" in a project begun by the Minnesota Humane Society several years ago and now under the auspices of the American Humane Association (AHA). Puff is one of America's first hearing dogs, and right now there are fewer than three dozen of them. But the AHA, which picked up the pilot project from Minnesota, anticipates that someday hearing dogs will be available to all who need and request one.

Though much effort and money is directed toward handicapped Americans, our 2 million deaf tend to receive minimal attention. Fortunately, the hearing dog program has the potential to be as meaningful to the deaf as the Seeing Eye dogs are to the blind—at a fraction of the cost.

Training is not as extensive for hearing dogs as it is for Seeing Eye dogs, and virtually any dog, regardless of size or breed, can qualify. "We've found that mix breeds will work out well," said Ruth Deschene, executive director of the Minnesota Humane Society and initiator of the project.

Trained to respond

The hearing dogs are trained to respond to all sounds the hearing person would react to—such as a car horn, a doorbell, smoke detector, siren, alarm clock, a crying child, boiling water.

The program began in 1973, when Mrs. Elva Janke, an elderly deaf woman in Minneapolis, wrote to a local action news program that she had lost a dog she had trained to respond to sounds. She was now too old to train another animal but wondered if the news staff knew of a center where dogs were trained to serve the deaf.

The staff turned the letter over to Mrs. Deschene. Then, after a broadcast and a plea for community help, a modest effort was launched and the hearing dog concept was underway. For two years, trainers with no previous experience with hearing dogs worked with the Minnesota Humane Society to define a program. Six dogs were trained, of which five were placed with deaf persons in St. Paul, and one in Lexington, Ky.

The first animal trained was Jody, a small black dog from the St. Paul animal shelter. And Jody's first meeting with Mrs. Janke was a poignant one. Mrs. Janke, her son and husband were seated in the training facility as Jody was brought in with its trainer. Immediately, the dog walked over to Mrs. Janke and put its head in her lap.

A sensitivity

Mrs. Deschene reports that this seems to be a common occurrence when dogs are first introduced to deaf masters. "Maybe it's in the training," she says, "but the dogs develop a sensitivity toward the person around them who cannot hear."

Hearing dogs are now being trained in 20 weeks at AHA headquarters in Denver, Colo. They are first trained in general obedience, then in learning to obey hand signals from the deaf. The next phase is called auditory or sound-awareness training, which teaches the dogs to react to specified sounds.

According to Robert White, director of the AHA program and a specialist in deaf education, "The first priority is to train dogs to respond to alarm clocks and smoke alarms."

The usual response of the animal is to nudge its master, run to the source of the sound, then back to its master.

The training program also involves the National Association for the Deaf, and it is expected that, in two or three years, 10 regional shelters around the country will be training hearing dogs to be provided free to deaf persons.

One special advantage of the hearing dog is that it opens up new vistas of play for deaf children who have been handicapped in developing the social skills and awareness that accompany playing and interacting with other children.

Colton's hearing dog remains with him until the caller at the door is identified. If there were any danger, the dog would try to protect him.

Hearing dogs can notify youngsters if someone or something is behind them, or warn the daydreaming child that a speeding auto is approaching, thus allaying the fears of parents while enabling their children to enjoy the full range of play activities.

Parents relax

The hearing dogs will also free parents of other worries. Prior to acquiring Sparky, the parents of Todd and Philip had to take the 13-year-old deaf twins everywhere or provide a sitter, even when performing routine grocery shopping. They feared that if a fire broke out, or some other emergency arose, the boys would not find out in time. But with Sparky, the parents can relax, secure in the knowledge that the dog will alert their sons to any sound demanding attention.

One of the first deaf persons in Minnesota to receive a dog was Donne L. Colton, a marketing supervisor with a large Minneapolis corporation. He reported that the dog helped in many ways while he was at work. It notified him when someone was at his door and when the phone rang. Colton, who can speak, could answer the phone and tell the caller to phone back when his secretary was in to take the message. He also reported that the animal acted as a guard dog in the home.

Warren Northwood of the AHA says that the program is now training 40 dogs to be placed with deaf mutes and is also developing a training manual.

"The people in Minnesota did an excellent job in bringing this concept to national attention," Northwood said. "It's our job now to make this a national outreach and, in a way, to provide dogs who will be ears to millions of hearing-impaired people."

Get a lot of music. Go a little crazy.

Take any 11

This is the beginning of a fling.
A crazy fling.
A fling filled with music.
The music you love most.
More music than you've ever been able to get at once.

Part One of the fling: you go over the list of albums on these 3 pages. And you choose the 11 you want most. Then mail the coupon.

Part Two of the fling: your 11 records or tapes arrive in the mail.

This, of course, is the part where you really go crazy. You can tease yourself and play one a day. Or you can play them all at once in the most incredible concert you've ever had in your room. You can invite good friends over to share the fun. And, of course, you can play them again and again and again.

11 hit albums for $1.00, plus shipping and handling. A crazy idea, perhaps. But it can happen to you as a new member of the Columbia Record & Tape Club.

Make it happen now . . .

my favorite jokes

by rodney dangerfield

EDITOR'S NOTE: After seven years of performing in his club, Dangerfield's, in New York, Rodney wanted to break it up a bit—"I found out I couldn't get no respect there, either. I was calling the doorman Mr. Johnson and he was calling me Rodney." So he went to Las Vegas last July to see what would happen. In Las Vegas he got plenty of respect. He opened at the Tropicana Hotel and the engagement was so successful he stayed on for 10 weeks. He returns to the Tropicana for four weeks starting this Thursday.

But life is never easy for Rodney. "Every time I do something I get stuck," he says. "That's how I got my name, Rodney Dangerfield. I went into show business, I wanted to improve myself. I saw an ad in the paper: 'Improve your personality.' I went to see the man, and he told me my personality was OK, but my name was my problem. I said to him, 'How can a name be a problem? Even Shakespeare said, "What's in a name?" '

"He said, 'Who?' I said, 'William Shakespeare.' He said, 'Look, you want to listen to me or you want to listen to your friends?' I said, 'I don't understand. Is it good to change your name?' He said, 'Of course. I always keep changing my own name. Right now I'll give you a deal. I'll let you have a new name for $500.' I said to him, 'That's a lot of money.' And he said, 'It's a great name, and once people hear it they'll start saying it.' I said, 'What's the name?' He said, 'Rodney Dangerfield.' I said, 'Rodney Dangerfield?' He said, 'See, you just heard it, and you're starting to say it.'

"As soon as I got home I thought to myself I made a mistake. I called the guy up. I said, 'Look, I want my money back. This is Rodney Dangerfield.' He said, 'Who?' I said, 'Dangerfield, don't you remember?' He said, 'Oh, yeah, Shakespeare's friend.' I told him, 'I don't want the name.' He said, 'Don't be foolish. Try it for two weeks. I guarantee you'll keep it.' So I tried it. I still didn't like it. I called back. I couldn't find the guy. He changed his name."

Rodney's problems continue:

I get no respect at all. I took my wife to a tunnel of love, and she told me to wait outside.

●

With animals I never had any luck. When I play the horses, I always go broke. Every time I bet, I hear the same thing: "They're off—except one."

With me nothing works out. I took one of those cheap flights on an airline. I finished eating, I had to do the dishes.

And these guys who fix cars, you gotta watch them, too. Last week I got my car fixed. The guy gave me the bill. The bill said: "Parts $8, labor $55." I figured the bill must be legitimate, there was grease on it.

I went over to the mechanic: "Hey, what's with this labor $55? Must be a mistake. Can you check it out?" So he checked it out. He went over to a car that was being worked on, and he started to talk to two feet. Later I found out there was no one under the car. They're fake feet. You buy 'em, they cost $7 a pair, you slip 'em under a car and you talk to them.

And these guys who work in gas stations, they tell you how hard they work. They put in 14 hours. But they don't work 14 hours, cause they only work when there's people around. When they're alone they don't do a thing . . . "What's that, mister, you got a dead battery? I'm sorry, I can't help you cause I'm all alone here."

●

I'll tell you, my whole life is psychiatrists. When I was 10 years old, my parents sent me to a child psychiatrist. I went for a year and a half. The kid didn't help me at all.

●

Nothin' works out. The time I had my fortune told, the gypsy said a big blonde was going to come into my life. The next day my girl left me for a Swede.

●

With my wife I've got one break. She hates to cook. She's the worst cook in the world. When I go on a picnic I bring Tums for the ants.

I can never enjoy a meal at my house. My wife eats too slow. She had dinner last night—it took her 2½ hours. Who eats alphabet soup alphabetically?

With my wife I don't get no respect, either. The other night she told me to take out the garbage. I told her I already took out the garbage—and she told me to go out and keep an eye on it.

When I was a kid, I was so poor—in my neighborhood the rainbow was in black and white.

●

It's wonderful to have gray hair. Just ask a man who's bald.

My wife drives me nuts. This week she's mad at her plants. She's talkin' to canned vegetables.

The advice my father gave me when I was a kid—he told me: "Never take candy from a stranger unless he offers you a ride."

I got nothin' from my old man. Once on my birthday he gave me a bat. The first day I played with it, it flew away.

●

In the park I had no friends. I remember the seesaw. I had to keep running from one end to the other.

I had it rough as a kid. One time on Halloween my old man dressed me as the Pied Piper. In two hours every rat in the neighborhood was following me.

When I started out in show business, it was rough. And they know when you're doing bad. I tried out for a shaving commercial. I didn't get the job, but they told me to keep the razor.

I get no respect from the phone company. Last month they sent me a refund of $3. They told me 30 of my calls didn't make sense at all.

●

When I was a kid in the nightclub business it was always bad. There was one place—the first night I was arrested for loitering with a microphone.

Sometimes I can't take it no more. Last week I was so depressed I wanted to pack my suitcase and run away. Then I thought of my wife and kids—why should I make them happy?

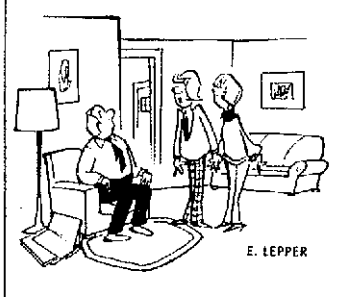

"I need a parrot to talk to my plants while I'm on vacation."

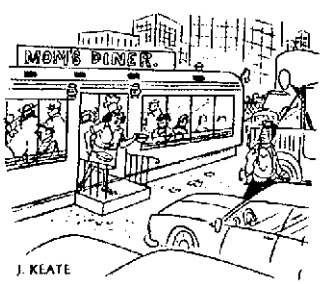

IT'S TO LAUGH

"You're heading for the last roundup!"

"Don't think of it as losing a daughter, sir. Feel free to keep right on giving her an allowance."

"You didn't finish your oatmeal!"

THE $12,000.00 HOUSEWIFE

By Edward C. Lane, Ph.D

My name is Edward C. Lane. I'm a college professor.

What I'm about to tell you may be hard to believe. Because I'm going to show you how to make money . . . more money than you ever dreamed possible . . . at home . . . in your spare time. This has nothing to do with any company "selling" plan or "work-at-home" scheme. It's totally different. In fact, if you're creative it may actually double your present income. Here are the facts:

Several years ago at a faculty bridge party, one of the guests began discussing a special "money project." The secret was literally whispered across the table.

My wife and I discussed the idea on the way home and decided to try it.

The project kept us busy about four hours a week. We used our kitchen table as an office.

At first our earnings were low—$25.00 to $30.00 a week. But as the months went by, we began making thousands of dollars at home on the weekends. It was almost beyond belief.

Obviously, this was too good to keep to ourselves. So I explained the project to my mother. She was over seventy and lived alone in an apartment in Akron. But within the first 87 days she made over $2,200.00 in cash from the same money project.

As our curiosity grew, we discovered a variety of other people making money but with somewhat different money projects.

1. Consider the case of Mary Rittenhouse from Cleveland. For over six years she's been earning thousands of dollars at home in her spare time.

- She provides a needed service in her neighborhood.
- No one comes to her home — nor does she go to anyone else's.
- She uses only her telephone, a spiral notebook and a small filing box.
- She makes up to $100.00 per week, spare time.
- Her service requires no technical skill of any kind.
- Mary works for no one else. She does no selling whatsoever. Most of her clients call her at home.
- What she does is so moral and supremely honest she could probably get a written endorsement from most clergymen.
- Her service is so simple that almost anyone could start the same project in just 9 days.

Again, these data are accurate or we couldn't—and wouldn't—print them.

2. John and Irene Tendy started this same special money project over 10 years ago. They report earnings as high as $12,000.00 per year . . . all earned at home.

3. An Oregon husband-wife team started the same project we started. In a recent letter they reported gross income of $14,000.00 IN ONLY 45 DAYS! That's even better than we did!

Obviously, this is exceptional income. What you make is largely up to you. But the income potential of these money projects is staggering! For example, two Colorado women started a money project several years ago with only twelve dollars. This year—operating full time—they made over $82,000.00. This income was verified in a recent national press report.

my favorite jokes

by Rodney Dangerfield

EDITOR'S NOTE: After seven years of performing in his club, Dangerfield's, in New York, Rodney wanted to break it up a bit—"I found out I couldn't get no respect there, either. I was calling the doorman Mr. Johnson and he was calling me Rodney." So he went to Las Vegas last July to see what would happen. In Las Vegas he got plenty of respect. He opened at the Tropicana Hotel and the engagement was so successful he stayed on for 10 weeks. He returns to the Tropicana for four weeks starting this Thursday.

But life is never easy for Rodney. "Every time I do something I get stuck," he says. "That's how I got my name, Rodney Dangerfield. I went into show business, I wanted to improve myself. I saw an ad in the paper: 'Improve your personality.' I went to see the man, and he told me my personality was OK, but my name was my problem. I said to him, 'How can a name be a problem? Even Shakespeare said, "What's in a name?"'

"He said, 'Who?' I said, 'William Shakespeare.' He said, 'Look, you want to listen to me or you want to listen to your friends?' I said, 'I don't understand. Is it good to change your name?' He said, 'Of course. I always keep changing my own name. Right now I'll give you a deal. I'll let you have a new name for $500.' I said to him, 'That's a lot of money.' And he said, 'It's a great name, and once people hear it they'll start saying it.' I said, 'What's the name?' He said, 'Rodney Dangerfield.' I said, 'Rodney Dangerfield?' He said, 'See, you just heard it, and you're starting to say it.'

"As soon as I got home I thought to myself I made a mistake. I called the guy up. I said, 'Look, I want my money back. This is Rodney Dangerfield.' He said, 'Who?' I said, 'Dangerfield, don't you remember?' He said, 'Oh, yeah, Shakespeare's friend.' I told him, 'I don't want the name.' He said, 'Don't be foolish. Try it for two weeks. I guarantee you'll keep it.' So I tried it. I still didn't like it. I called back. I couldn't find the guy. He changed his name."

Rodney's problems continue:

I get no respect at all. I took my wife to a tunnel of love, and she told me to wait outside.

●

With animals I never had any luck. When I play the horses, I always go broke. Every time I bet, I hear the same thing: "They're off—except one."

With me nothing works out. I took one of those cheap flights on an airline. I finished eating, I had to do the dishes.

And these guys who fix cars, you gotta watch them, too. Last week I got my car fixed. The guy gave me the bill. The bill said: "Parts $8, labor $55." I figured the bill must be legitimate, there was grease on it.

I went over to the mechanic: "Hey, what's with this labor $55? Must be a mistake. Can you check it out?" So he checked it out. He went over to a car that was being worked on, and he started to talk to two feet. Later I found out there was no one under the car. They're fake feet. You buy 'em, they cost $7 a pair, you slip 'em under a car and you talk to them.

And these guys who work in gas stations, they tell you how hard they work. They put in 14 hours. But they don't work 14 hours, cause they only work when there's people around. When they're alone they don't do a thing . . . "What's that, mister, you got a dead battery? I'm sorry, I can't help you cause I'm all alone here."

●

I'll tell you, my whole life is psychiatrists. When I was 10 years old, my parents sent me to a child psychiatrist. I went for a year and a half. The kid didn't help me at all.

●

Nothin' works out. The time I had my fortune told, the gypsy said a big blonde was going to come into my life. The next day my girl left me for a Swede.

●

With my wife I've got one break. She hates to cook. She's the worst cook in the world. When I go on a picnic I bring Tums for the ants.

I can never enjoy a meal at my house. My wife eats too slow. She had dinner last night—it took her 2½ hours. Who eats alphabet soup alphabetically?

With my wife I don't get no respect, either. The other night she told me to take out the garbage. I told her I already took out the garbage—and she told me to go out and keep an eye on it.

When I was a kid, I was so poor—in my neighborhood the rainbow was in black and white.

●

It's wonderful to have gray hair. Just ask a man who's bald.

My wife drives me nuts. This week she's mad at her plants. She's talkin' to canned vegetables.

The advice my father gave me when I was a kid—he told me: "Never take candy from a stranger unless he offers you a ride."

I got nothin' from my old man. Once on my birthday he gave me a bat. The first day I played with it, it flew away.

●

In the park I had no friends. I remember the seesaw. I had to keep running from one end to the other.

I had it rough as a kid. One time on Halloween my old man dressed me as the Pied Piper. In two hours every rat in the neighborhood was following me.

When I started out in show business, it was rough. And they know when you're doing bad. I tried out for a shaving commercial. I didn't get the job, but they told me to keep the razor.

I get no respect from the phone company. Last month they sent me a refund of $3. They told me 30 of my calls didn't make sense at all.

●

When I was a kid in the nightclub business it was always bad. There was one place—the first night I was arrested for loitering with a microphone.

Sometimes I can't take it no more. Last week I was so depressed I wanted to pack my suitcase and run away. Then I thought of my wife and kids—why should I make them happy?

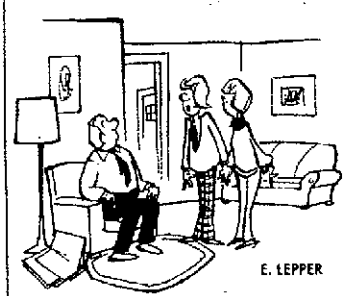

"I need a parrot to talk to my plants while I'm on vacation."

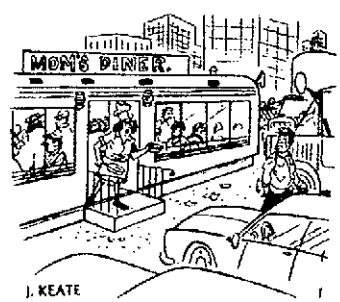

it's to laugh

"You're heading for the last roundup!"

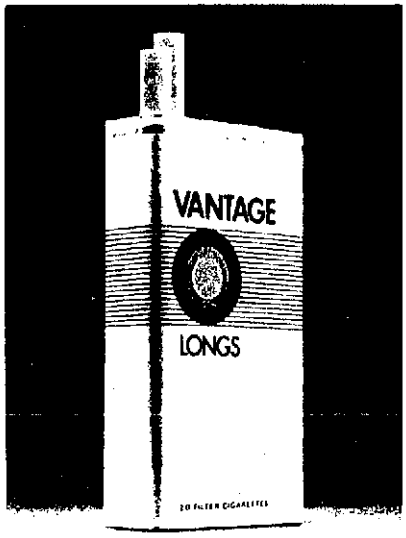

"Don't think of it as losing a daughter, sir. Feel free to keep right on giving her an allowance."

"You didn't finish your oatmeal!"

Finally, Vantage Longs.

The first long cigarette to bring good taste to low-tar smoking.

Like a lot of smokers you may like the idea of a longer cigarette. You may also want low tar.

But longer cigarettes usually have more tar.

Well, Vantage just wouldn't go along with that.

So we worked. Until we could perfect a longer cigarette with the famous Vantage combination of full flavor and low tar.

Not the lowest long cigarette you can find. But very possibly the lowest that you will enjoy.

New Vantage Longs. A blend of flavor-rich tobaccos with tar levels held down to the point where good taste still comes through.

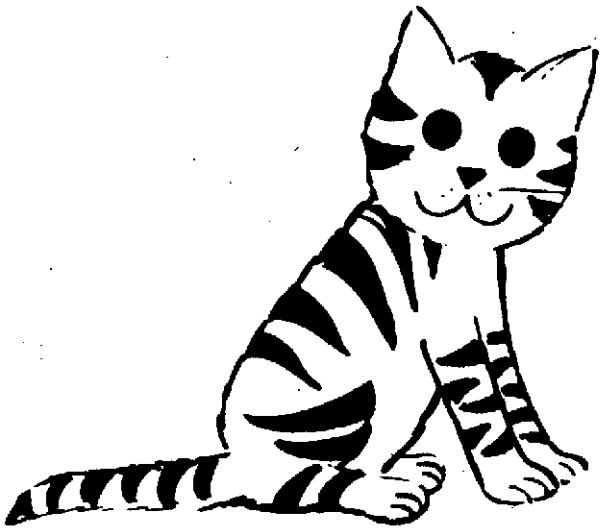

That's the Vantage point. And that's the point of Vantage Longs. Never before has there been a long cigarette quite like it.

Try a pack today and see if you go along with us.

Keeping Up...With Youth

A 1962 TAPE OF THE BEATLES MAY GROSS MILLIONS

Lucky Find—Maybe

In 1962 a quartet of young, rough musicians from Liverpool cut a tape while playing in Hamburg, West Germany, for $25 a night.

The group was the Beatles, and the tape included dialogue between John Lennon and his German audience, between John and his barmaid girlfriend Bettina, and such songs as "I Saw Her Standing There," "Kansas City" and "Roll Over Beethoven."

The tape fell into the hands of "King Size" Taylor — now a butcher in Southport, Lancashire, but a friend of the Beatles in their early days—and Alan Williams, the Beatles' first manager.

Along with Paul Murphy, manager of Buk Records, they now plan to turn the old tape into a double LP record, which they reckon should gross about $15 million.

Should the LP go into release, it will undoubtedly lead to a courtroom battle over the question: to whom does the original tape belong?

Taylor says the tape belongs to him. Paul Murphy adds: "The breakthrough on who owns the copyright came when Taylor stumbled on an old letter from Brian Epstein, the Beatles' manager, saying that he would offer Mr. Taylor 20 pounds for the tape even though 'there does not appear to be any commercial value to the recording.'"

Taylor declined the 20 pounds, kept the tape in an old cupboard drawer in his home "until I realized that I had this tape from the old days and that surely it must be worth something in this period of rock 'n' roll revival."

Although the Beatles broke up over six years ago, their records still sell briskly, and they've been offered millions to make at least one comeback tour.

Violence Cure

The way to stop violence in America is to stop spanking children, argues psychologist John Valusek. In a speech to the Utah Association for Mental Health some weeks ago, Valusek declared that parental spanking promotes the thesis that violence against others is acceptable.

"Spanking is the first half-inch on the yardstick of violence," said Valusek. "It is followed by hitting and ultimately by rape, murder and assassination. The modeling behavior that occurs at home sets the stage: 'I will resort to violence when I don't know what else to do.'"

I'm Ann Adkins. Here I am before I went on The Bran Diet and lost 110 pounds. Then, people would say, "She has such a pretty face — if only she weren't so fat." Read my full story.

You can lose weight with our new $2.99 Guidebook like some people who report losses of over 100 pounds without hunger. The secret is eating foods that contain a little bit of fiber like bran, the outer fiber coat of grains, and certain other foods with proper caloric reduction. Order today with our no risk guarantee.

Here I am now. Order THE BRAN DIET, and see how easy it will be for you to lose weight too.

"I LOST 110 POUNDS"

— Mrs. Ann Adkins, Westfield, N.C.

"I'd been fat all my life. I had tried all kinds of diet aids, pills and fad diets. I'd lose 20 or 30 pounds and gain it back - plus more. Then, at 31 when I weighed 224 pounds, I put myself on the bran diet. I know it sounds unbelievable, but I stuck with it until I lost 110 pounds. I didn't go hungry at all. It's the kind of food, not the amount, that matters. It's wonderful to be slim. People that I work with are fascinated with what I've done. They used to say, "She has such a pretty face - if only she weren't so fat!" Now, I get lots of compliments.

P.S. - My husband has lost 40 pounds too, and we are able to get out and do things we've never done before.

It's been over 1½ years since I reached 114 pounds, and I have no trouble keeping weight off. I would like to share my newly-found joy in life with others and encourage those who have problems losing weight."

"I WENT FROM 250 TO 178 IN 15 WEEKS."

— Mr. J.C.

The secret: heavy emphasis on one of the choices of The Bran Diet. "My blood pressure is back to normal and I've lost 12 inches around my waist. Now I have will power because this is the diet I enjoy."

"SIMPLE TO FOLLOW"

— Mrs. I.C.

"You made your program quite simple to follow and I do like your recipes. I have already baked the muffins and distributed them among some friends, and they were delectable."

"VERY TASTY DIET"

— Mr. M.S.

"RECOMMENDED BY MY DR."

"I LOST 10 POUNDS IN 2 WEEKS."

— Mrs. F.C.

NO "EMPTY FEELING"

— Mrs. J.S.

"My daughter and I have been on Plan No. 1 for awhile. It's easy to stay on, because you don't have that 'empty feeling.' "

"BEST I EVER ATE"

— Mrs. F.B.

"The macaroni and the meatloaf are the best I ever ate."

Finally, Vantage Longs.

The first long cigarette to bring good taste to low-tar smoking.

Like a lot of smokers you may like the idea of a longer cigarette. You may also want low tar.

But longer cigarettes usually have more tar.

Well, Vantage just wouldn't go along with that.

So we worked. Until we could perfect a longer cigarette with the famous Vantage combination of full flavor and low tar.

Not the lowest long cigarette you can find. But very possibly the lowest that you will enjoy.

New Vantage Longs. A blend of flavor-rich tobaccos with tar levels held down to the point where good taste still comes through.

That's the Vantage point. And that's the point of Vantage Longs. Never before has there been a long cigarette quite like it.

Try a pack today and see if you go along with us.

Keeping Up...With Youth

by Pamela Swift

A 1962 TAPE OF THE BEATLES MAY GROSS MILLIONS

Lucky Find—Maybe

In 1962 a quartet of young, rough musicians from Liverpool cut a tape while playing in Hamburg, West Germany, for $25 a night.

The group was the Beatles, and the tape included dialogue between John Lennon and his German audience, between John and his barmaid girlfriend Bettina, and such songs as "I Saw Her Standing There," "Kansas City" and "Roll Over Beethoven."

The tape fell into the hands of "King Size" Taylor — now a butcher in Southport, Lancashire, but a friend of the Beatles in their early days—and Alan Williams, the Beatles' first manager.

Along with Paul Murphy, manager of Buk Records, they now plan to turn the old tape into a double LP record, which they reckon should gross about $15 million.

Should the LP go into release, it will undoubtedly lead to a courtroom battle over the question: to whom does the original tape belong?

Taylor says the tape belongs to him. Paul Murphy adds: "The breakthrough on who owns the copyright came when Taylor stumbled on an old letter from Brian Epstein, the Beatles' manager, saying that he would offer Mr. Taylor 20 pounds for the tape even though 'there does not appear to be any commercial value to the recording.'"

Taylor declined the 20 pounds, kept the tape in an old cupboard drawer in his home "until I realized that I had this tape from the old days and that surely it must be worth something in this period of rock 'n' roll revival."

Although the Beatles broke up over six years ago, their records still sell briskly, and they've been offered millions to make at least one comeback tour.

Violence Cure

The way to stop violence in America is to stop spanking children, argues psychologist John Valusek. In a speech to the Utah Association for Mental Health some weeks ago, Valusek declared that parental spanking promotes the thesis that violence against others is acceptable.

"Spanking is the first half-inch on the yardstick of violence," said Valusek. "It is followed by hitting and ultimately by rape, murder and assassination. The modeling behavior that occurs at home sets the stage: 'I will resort to violence when I don't know what else to do.'"

Guidebook Reveals New Plan Called...

THE BRAN DIET

You can shed weight in just 72 hours. Prove it to yourself by ordering our new, comprehensive diet manual now.

I'm Ann Adkins. Here I am before I went on The Bran Diet and lost 110 pounds. Then, people would say, "She has such a pretty face — if only she weren't so fat." Read my full story.

You can lose weight with our new $2.99 Guidebook like some people who report losses of over 100 pounds without hunger. The secret is eating foods that contain a little bit of fiber like bran, the outer fiber coat of grains, and certain other foods with proper caloric reduction. Order today with our no risk guarantee.

Here I am now. Order THE BRAN DIET, and see how easy it will be for you to lose weight too.

"I LOST 110 POUNDS"

— Mrs. Ann Adkins, Westfield, N.C.

"I'd been fat all my life. I had tried all kinds of diet aids, pills and fad diets. I'd lose 20 or 30 pounds and gain it back - plus more. Then, at 31 when I weighed 224 pounds, I put myself on the bran diet. I know it sounds unbelievable, but I stuck with it until I lost 110 pounds. I didn't go hungry at all. It's the kind of food, not the amount, that matters. It's wonderful to be slim. People that I work with are fascinated with what I've done. They used to say, "She has such a pretty face - if only she weren't so fat!" Now, I get lots of compliments.

P.S. - My husband has lost 40 pounds too, and we are able to get out and do things we've never done before.

It's been over 1½ years since I reached 114 pounds, and I have no trouble keeping weight off. I would like to share my newly-found joy in life with others and encourage those who have problems losing weight."

"I WENT FROM 250 TO 178 IN 15 WEEKS."

— Mr. J.C.

The secret: heavy emphasis on one of the choices of The Bran Diet. "My blood pressure is back to normal and I've lost 12 inches around my waist. Now I have will power because this is the diet I enjoy."

"SIMPLE TO FOLLOW"

— Mrs. I.C.

"You made your program quite simple to follow and I do like your recipes. I have already baked the muffins and distributed them among some friends, and they were delectable."

"VERY TASTY DIET"

— Mr. M.S.

"RECOMMENDED BY MY DR."

"I LOST 10 POUNDS IN 2 WEEKS."

— Mrs. F.C.

NO "EMPTY FEELING"

— Mrs. J.S.

"My daughter and I have been on Plan No. 1 for awhile. It's easy to stay on, because you don't have that 'empty feeling.' "

"BEST I EVER ATE"

— Mrs. F.B.

"The macaroni and the meatloaf are the best I ever ate."

AMBASSADOR

Dear Friend,

When you watch my friend, Suzannah Glidden, demonstrate my EVERYTHING Bag on TV, you'll see why it has become the best-selling handbag in America!

It puts an end...forever...to a problem women have always had with their handbags. The same problem I had with mine.

None of them -- not one! -- ever gave me enough places for all the things I always carried. My purse was a mess. I was disorganized. And I hated it!

Today, I'm the best-organized woman in town! This amazing new bag I designed not only looks great -- it gives me (at last!) a special place for everything I carry when I go out.

I want to send you one of these new bags, and let you use it yourself for a whole month. If you like it -- keep it. If you don't -- simply return your bag, and I'll give back every cent you paid for it, even though it's personalized with your initials. You can't possibly lose!

But before you say "Yes" to my Risk-Free Trial Offer, take just a minute now to see the 18 ways my amazing EVERYTHING Bag will make you, too, the best-organized woman in town!

Sincerely,

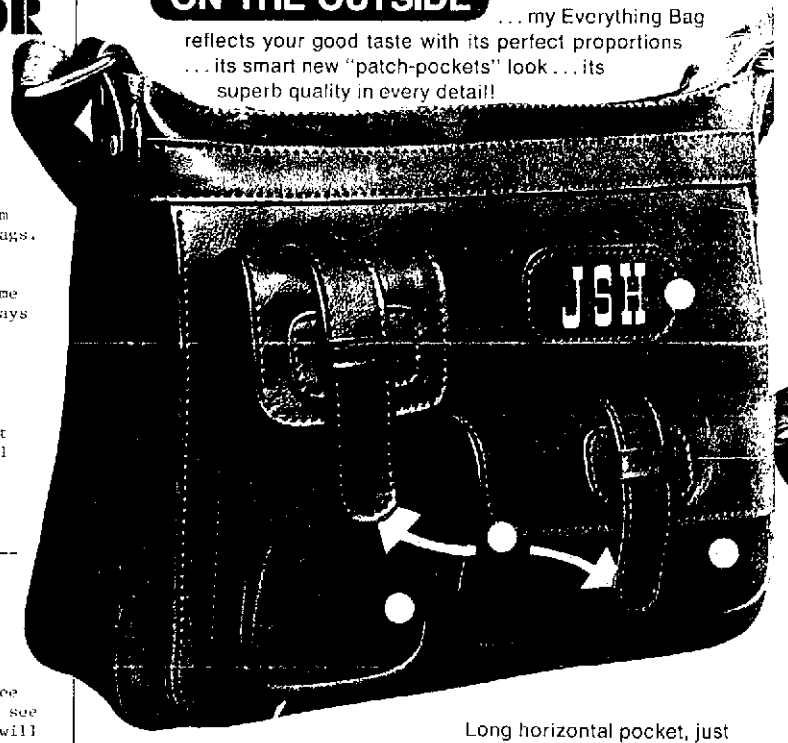

Jay Hall

P.S. Please mail your order fast. Our supply of these new bags is definitely limited. And I'd hate to disappoint you by not being able to ship your bag off to you right away!

Flaps close with our exclusive closures. No snaps to wiggle, push or fight with.

FLAP SHOWN OPEN

UNDER THE FLAP...A WHOLE NEW WORLD OF CONVENIENCE FOR YOU!

PHONE/ADDRESS INDEX — puts your most-used numbers where you can see them instantly when you need to make a call in a hurry.

FOUR PHOTO POCKETS hold snapshots and Identification cards ... clean ... handy ... always visible!

TRADING STAMP POCKET stash your trading stamps here, and keep the mess out of your bag! Keep them safe from loss, too!
